Clinton to Announce Measures to Slow AIDS, Find a Vaccine

By AMY GOLDSTEIN
Washington Post Staff Writer

President Clinton will announce steps today aimed at curbing the spread of AIDS and slowing the growing world population of children orphaned by the disease.

The White House, timing its announcement to coincide with World AIDS Day, plans to announce new investment in research into a vaccine against the virus. It also will devote federal resources to help coordinate work in developing countries in Africa and other continents where HIV is spreading most rapidly.

"We are beginning to put our epidemic in the country in the context of this larger global epidemic," said Sandra Thurman, the White House AIDS policy adviser.

Searching for a fresh angle on an epidemic that is approaching the end of its second decade, Clinton will draw attention to predictions released last year by the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID), that as many as 40 million children worldwide will become orphans by 2010 as AIDS claims their parents.

Thurman will lead a U.S. delegation to southern Africa, where 90 percent of such orphans live, to evaluate how those countries are coping and what further steps they might take.

AID also plans to devote $10 million to help orphans stay in school, assisting them with food and job-training, and prepare people in their communities to become foster parents. Meanwhile, the National Institutes of Health will create an international network to share information about research on how to reduce the spread of HIV among adults and from mothers to newborns.

In this country, NIH plans to spend an added $47 million on efforts to develop AIDS vaccines. The extra money brings NIH's total investment on such research to $200 million and responds to substantial pressure from AIDS lobbyists who regard an eventual vaccine as the most effective HIV-prevention method.

Victor Zonana, vice president of the New York-based International AIDS Vaccine Initiative, praised the expanded funding. But he said the federal government should be working primarily to foster development of actual products by the pharmaceutical industry, rather than augmenting already generous funding for basic research. Thurman said the new money would be used for both basic and applied research.

In addition, the White House will announce a $21 million increase in federal housing subsidies for people with AIDS in the United States.

Subject: World Aids Day -- Comments to me by 10:30am

Draft 11/30/98 9:30pm

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON
REMARKS FOR WORLD AIDS DAY
THE OLD EXECUTIVE OFFICE BUILDING
December 1, 1998

Acknowledgments: Sec. Albright; USAID Director Brian Atwood; Dir., WH Office of National AIDS Policy Sandy Thurman; UNICEF Director Carol Bellamy. pr Nafis Sadik, UN Fund for Population Assistance

I want especially to thank Amy Slemmer for sharing her story here with us today and for reminding us that we really can think globally and act locally ~~and~~ when it comes to helping families cope with AIDS.

This is a very solemn occasion. While we have much to celebrate here at home in our fight against AIDS and much to hope for, we know that around the world and in the United States, the AIDS epidemic continues to rage, tearing families and lives apart.

Here is our goal, at home and around the world: we must put a stop to AIDS. To do that, we must develop an AIDS vaccine. We must continue to invest in research. And to put a stop to the devastation AIDS causes, we must continue to support families affected by this disease.

A decade ago, AIDS seemed unstoppable. A diagnosis of AIDS was a virtual death sentence. Ignorance, prejudice, and fear about HIV transmission infected our communities, separating neighbor from neighbor. For people with AIDS and the people who love them, every day was a struggle -- for information, for treatment, for funding. I took office determined to change this -- and to do everything in my power to win the war against AIDS.

For nearly six years, we have pursued this goal with single minded purpose. To draw attention to AIDS and to better direct our resources, we created the Office of National AIDS Policy, and we convened the first-ever White House Conference on AIDS. We helped to ensure that people with HIV and AIDS cannot be denied health benefits for their pre-existing condition. We have accelerated the approval of ~~dozens of~~ new AIDS drugs -- helping hundreds of thousands of people with AIDS to live longer, more productive lives.

Working together with members of both parties in the Congress, we have increased our investment for AIDS research to an historic $1.8 billion. This year, we secured $262 million in new funding for the Ryan White CARE Act, which provides medical treatment, medication, and even transportation to families coping with AIDS. This October, we declared that AIDS had reached crisis proportions in the African-American, Hispanic-American, and other minority communities, and we fought for a $156 million initiative to address it.

The results of our efforts have been nothing short of remarkable. In 1996, for the first time in the history of the AIDS epidemic, the number of Americans diagnosed with AIDS has declined. For the first time, deaths due to AIDS in the United States have declined. And for the first time, hope has begun to rise -- hope that we will defeat AIDS.

But all around us, we see fresh evidence that the AIDS epidemic is far from over -- and our work is far from finished. We see it in the rising numbers of AIDS cases in countries like Zimbabwe, where 11 men, women, and children become infected with AIDS every minute of every day. We hear it in the cries of children orphaned by AIDS -- tens of thousands here in America and tens of millions in developing nations around the world.

We cannot rightly celebrate our progress in the fight against AIDS when so many people are suffering around the world. And with the HIV transmission disproportionately high among our own young people, we know that we cannot afford to be complacent. We must take action.

Last year, at Morgan State University, I declared that we must redouble our efforts to develop an AIDS vaccine within the decade. Today, we are one step closer to meeting that challenge. I am pleased to announce an unprecedented $200 million dollar investment in cutting edge research at the National Institutes of Health to develop an AIDS vaccine. With this new historic investment in an AIDS vaccine, we are one step closer to putting an end to the AIDS epidemic -- for all people, for all countries, for all time.

I am also pleased to announce more than $160 million for other new research critical to fighting AIDS around the world -- from new strategies to prevent and treat AIDS in children, to new clinical trials to reduce the transmission of AIDS.

As hard as we are working to stop the spread of AIDS, we must never forget our profound obligation to care for the most heart-breaking victims of this disease: the orphaned children it leaves in its wake. In fact, around the world, and especially in Africa, tens of millions of children have lost their parents to AIDS -- and that number is expected to rise to 40 million in less than 15 years. Some of these children are free of AIDS, others are infected with the disease that robbed them of their parents. But sick or well, too many of these children are left without a parent to protect them, to teach them right from wrong, and to guide them through life.

We cannot hope to restore to these children all they have lost, but we can give them hope for the future -- a foster family, enough food to eat, medical care, and a chance to make the most of their lives in school. Today, I am pleased to announce $10 million in emergency relief funding at USAID to help communities around the world do exactly that. This small step will make a huge difference for thousands of children in need.

I am also directing Sandy Thurman, the Director of the Office of National AIDS Policy, to lead a fact-finding mission to ~~Sub-Saharan~~ Africa, where 90% of all AIDS orphans live. Following this mission, she will report back to me with recommendations on how we can continue to help these children and give them ~~something to hope for~~.

hope for a long life + bright future

Eleven years ago, on the first World AIDS Day, we vowed to put an end to the AIDS epidemic. Eleven years from now, I hope we will be able to say that the steps we are taking today led us to that great day. Thank you.

← I know we'll look back on this day, and recognize that ~~these~~ actions led the way to ~~reaching~~ achieving that goal!

Biography

Jamie Morales

Jamie Morales has been a youth leader in the fight against HIV and AIDS since she was eight years old. Now a high-school freshman and secretary of her class in Wichita, Kansas, she has received two national awards: the 1998 "Caring Counts" Award from Metropolitan Life Foundation and the National AIDS Fund; and the 1997 Prudential Spirit of Community Award from Prudential Life. Jamie chose to begin educating others about HIV and AIDS when she was eight. At age seven she had moved to Wichita to live with her legal guardian following her mother's death from AIDS. She had also lost her uncle and a special godfather to this disease, and she knew that her father also has AIDS. Her guardian, an AIDS educator, taught her about HIV infection and how it is and isn't transmitted. Though not infected with HIV, Jamie says that she decided to educate others so they could avoid learning the hard way, as she had. Since that time, she has educated nearly 6,000 people throughout Kansas about HIV and AIDS. She has spoken primarily to youth and trained other young AIDS educators. She also has spoken to juvenile court workers, health workers and church groups and will address lawyers at a Wichita Bar Association meeting in December. She spends time volunteering with fundraisers for organizations that help people with AIDS. She has raised money for the AIDS walk in Wichita each year and participated in plays regarding HIV issues on World AIDS Day. Jamie also served on a committee to study diversity issues for the city of Wichita. She is a talented singer and dancer and has performed with the Music Theater of Wichita. Jamie seeks every opportunity to educate others about preventing HIV infection. As she said recently, "The more that is done to educate, the more that is done to save other people."

PRESIDENT CLINTON UNVEILS NEW STEPS TO ADDRESS EMERGING CRISIS OF THE UP TO 40 MILLION CHILDREN WHO WILL BE ORPHANED BY HIV/AIDS BY 2010, COMMEMORATES WORLD AIDS DAY
December 1, 1998

Today, President Clinton, commemorating World AIDS Day, joined Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) Administrator Brian Atwood, to launch a series of new initiatives to address the growing crisis of children orphaned by AIDS. The President unveiled historic new increases at the National Institutes of Health dedicated to fund research aimed at developing an effective AIDS vaccine and new prevention strategies to help address the problem of HIV/AIDS throughout the world; announced new emergency funding from USAID to support international community-based AIDS orphan programs; and directed his AIDS policy advisor Sandra Thurman to lead a delegation to Africa to assess the growing problem of AIDS orphans and recommend new strategies for responding. The President:

✓ Highlighted USAIDS projection that up to 40 million children who will be orphaned by HIV/AIDS by 2010, over 90 percent of which live in developing countries that have too few resources to provide for their care and support. Globally, there are over 33 million people with HIV or AIDS, with another 5.8 million becoming infected every year. As with so many epidemics, children and young people are bearing much of the ~~terrible~~ burden of AIDS. In the United States, as many as 80,000 children have already been orphaned by AIDS.

✓ Announced ¹²30 percent increase this year in funding by the National Institutes of Health on research to prevent and treat HIV around the world. The National Institutes of Health, representing the largest single public investment in AIDS research in the world, will support a comprehensive program of basic, clinical, and behavioral research on HIV infection and its related illnesses. These will include:

■ $200 million investment in research on AIDS vaccines to prevent transmission around the world, a thirty-three percent increase this year alone. The development of a safe and effective AIDS vaccine is critical to stemming the growing problem of HIV/AIDS and AIDS orphans across the world. The President announced that NIH will dedicate $200 million in vaccine research in Fiscal Year (FY) 1999, a $47 million increase from FY1998 and an 100 percent increase since FY1995. This investment is critical in supporting the President's challenge to make AIDS vaccine research a national and international priority.

■ $164 million for other ~~new~~ research critical to addressing the HIV/AIDS epidemic across the world. The President also announced that the NIH will invest $164 million, in FY1999, a $38 million increase, over last for critical projects to reduce the number of AIDS orphans by preventing and treating HIV/AIDS internationally, including: a new prevention trials network to reduce adult and perinatal transmission of HIV/AIDS; new strategies to prevent and treat HIV infection in children; funding to train more foreign scientists to collaborate on this epidemic; research on the prevention and treatment of the opportunistic infections, such as tuberculosis, that commonly kill people with HIV/AIDS; and research on topical microbicides and other female-controlled barrier methods of HIV prevention.

- ✓ Unveiled $10 million in emergency relief funding at USAID to provide support for AIDS orphans. USAID will make available $10 million in emergency funding to support community-based efforts for orphans, including training and support for foster families, initiatives to keep children in school, vocational training, and nutritional enhancements. In addition, USAID will take steps to help prevent the spread of HIV from mothers to children and to improve medical care for children already infected with HIV.
- ✓ Directed AIDS Policy Advisor Sandra Thurman to lead fact-finding delegation to raise awareness and make recommendations to address growing problem of AIDS orphans. President Clinton asked Sandra Thurman, Director of the Office of National AIDS Policy, to lead a fact-finding delegation to ~~southern~~ Sub-Saharan Africa, where 90 percent of AIDS orphans reside. The delegation will include ~~representatives from across the Clinton Administration~~, key Congressional offices, and the national media to raise awareness about this emerging problem and to develop recommendations for action.

✓ Unveiled new steps to address the continued needs of those living with HIV/AIDS in the United States. While the problem of AIDS orphans is most acute internationally, the President also underscored that HIV/AIDS impacts and displaces families in this country as well. The President highlighted that today the Vice President will be unveiling over $200 million in funds for the Housing Opportunities for People With AIDS program this year to assist communities around the country to keeping individuals affected by HIV/AIDS and their families from becoming homeless. The Vice President will announce these grants at a meet with local community leaders who provide housing and other support services for people living with HIV/AIDS, as well as several individuals and families who have benefited from their services.

✓ Built on a solid record of achievement in HIV/AIDS. Today's announcements build on a deep ongoing commitment by the Clinton Administration to respond to the AIDS crisis both in the United States and across the world. The Administration has fought for other critical investments in HIV/AIDS. This year alone, the President: ~~$~~

- Declared HIV/AIDS in racial and ethnic minority communities to be a severe and ongoing health care crisis and unveiled a new $156 million initiative to address this problem, including crisis response teams, enhanced prevention efforts, and assistance in accessing state-of-the-art therapies all targeted toward ethnic and racial minorities in communities across the country;
 - Worked with Congress to secure historic increases in a wide range of effective HIV/AIDS programs. Increases this year alone include: a $262 million increase in the Ryan White CARE Act; a 12 percent increase in AIDS research funding at the NIH, a $32 million increase HIV prevention programs at the CDC; and a $21 million increase in the Housing Opportunities for People With AIDS program at HUD.

Remarks at World AIDS Day 1998, The White House

Washington, D.C., December 1, 1998

As released by the Office of the Spokesman

U.S. Department of State

Mr. President, Brian Atwood, Amy Slemmer of Mothers' Voices Against AIDS, Carol Bellamy of UNICEF, Nafis Sadik of the UN Population Fund, distinguished colleagues, guests and friends. I am pleased to participate in this program but saddened by its necessity.

For today we observe World AIDS day for the eleventh time. And we can expect many more.

I look around this room and I see many valiant members of the global network that is fighting the causes and consequences of HIV/AIDS. That network is strong and deeply motivated; it is growing; it is active almost everywhere; but it is not yet winning the war against this disease of awful and shattering power.

Thirty-three million people are now infected with HIV. And up to forty million children will be orphaned by AIDS by the end of the next decade.

It is a deep human tragedy that 90 percent of AIDS orphans live in sub-saharan Africa. But this highly mobile disease has migrated to every corner of the earth.

So directly or indirectly, HIV/AIDS threatens us all -- whether as individuals, as family, friends and neighbors, or as members of the global community.

For we cannot build dynamic economies where one in five or even one in twenty adults is being struck down. We cannot create vibrant democratic institutions where communities are preoccupied with suffering and sorrow. We cannot count on stability where the ranks of military and political leadership are decimated. And we cannot expect a strong sense of social responsibility in the young where too many children have no parents.

All this is why fighting HIV/AIDS, and helping its victims, is a foreign policy imperative.

Soon, I will be releasing a report entitled the 1999 U.S. International Response to HIV/AIDS. This is an interagency effort to document the full range of U.S. resources engaged in the struggle against AIDS. We will use it to launch a diplomatic initiative designed to mobilize and energize others around the world -- both from the top down and the bottom up -- so that international organizations, governments and grassroots reinforce each other and pull in the same direction.

If we are to make progress, governments must understand what you and your overseas counterparts already understand. And that is that HIV/AIDS cannot be denied or ignored or patronized or put off until tomorrow.

This is an urgent, deadly, global threat. It cannot be appeased; it must be confronted.

And as Secretary of State, I will do all I can to see that this imperative is raised as a matter of international security, at the highest levels, at every opportunity, in every region, on every continent.

On this day of special dedication, let us vow to work together across all lines of profession, culture and national borders so that we may bring closer the day when nations and people everywhere are aware of the dangers of this disease; all act to prevent its spread; all afflicted are helped and their human rights respected; and none rest until HIV/AIDS is conquered or controlled.

Thank you. And now I'd like to introduce the head of the agency whose employees have long been on the front lines of this fight, my good friend, the Administrator of the Agency for International Development, Brian Atwood.

NEW WORLD AIDS DAY REPORT FINDS GLOBAL HIV INFECTIONS INCREASED 10% IN 1998 -- HALF OF ALL NEW INFECTIONS NOW IN 15-24 YEAR OLDS --

-- Development gains being wiped out --

-- Sub-Saharan African countries hardest-hit – already 34 million infections and almost 12 million deaths –

-- Fewer deaths in North America, Western Europe, but no progress in prevention; HIV infection rates unchanged for a decade --

According to a report issued today by the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) and the World Health Organization (WHO), the AIDS epidemic update – December 1998, during the past year a further 5.8 million people were infected with HIV - approximately 11 men, women and children every minute - and the total number of people living with the virus rose by one-tenth, to 33.4 million worldwide. Half of all new infections are now occurring among young people aged 15 to 24. This year's World AIDS Campaign "Young People: Force for Change" was prompted in part by the epidemic's threat to those under 25 years old, for as HIV rates rise in the general population, new infections are increasingly concentrated in the younger age groups.

The global epicentre of AIDS continues to be sub-Saharan Africa. Since the epidemic began, 34 million Africans have been infected, and almost 12 million of them have already died. In 1998 the region experienced four million new infections and rising AIDS death tolls, seen in an estimated 5,500 funerals per day. In the southernmost countries of the continent, where HIV spread took on epidemic proportions only recently, infection rates continued to rise dramatically during the past year. Four countries now estimate that 20% to 26% of adults are living with HIV, and South Africa alone accounts for one out of every seven new infections on the continent. In contrast, a number of countries in West Africa remain relatively less affected, in part as a result of early and sustained prevention efforts.

In the regions of North America and Western Europe, the availability of new more potent anti-HIV drug combinations has helped people with HIV live longer, healthier lives. In the United States, for example, the number of people dying from AIDS dropped by two-thirds between 1995 and 1997, when these antiretroviral combinations came into wide use. Alongside this undoubted therapeutic success, there is a disturbing lack of progress in prevention. Every year for the past decade, the numbers of new HIV infections have remained stagnant in North America and Western Europe, with close to 75 000 people acquiring the virus in 1998 alone.

"Two decades into the AIDS epidemic, we know better than ever before about prevention --- how to persuade people to protect themselves, make sure they have the necessary skills and back-up services, and remove social and economic barriers to effective prevention," said Dr Peter Piot, Executive Director of UNAIDS. "Yet almost six million people became infected this year. Every one of these new HIV infections represents a prevention failure -- our collective failure."

In many Asian and Eastern European countries, where the epidemic started later than in other regions, HIV is rapidly gaining new footholds. In India, for example, recent research shows that HIV is now firmly embedded in the general population and is spreading into rural areas that were previously thought to be relatively spared. In the state of Tamil Nadu (population: 25 million), a new survey reveals that almost half a million people are already infected with HIV and that the infection rate is three times higher in villages than in the cities.

In Latin America, while infections are concentrated in men who have sex with men and drug injectors, transmission through sex between men and women is on the rise.

Development gains being wiped out

In the worst-affected countries the AIDS epidemic is now making significant inroads into precious development gains that have been built up over the past decades.

In nine countries where at least 10% of the adult population is HIV-positive, it has been estimated that AIDS will soon be costing an average of 17 years of life expectancy, compared with what these countries could look forward to in the absence of the epidemic. These dismal declines are not only due to adult deaths. Over half a million children -- most of whom acquired the infection before or at birth, or through breastfeeding -- died in 1998 alone. By 2005-2010, the infant mortality rate in, for example, Namibia, is expected to reach 72 per 1000 live births as opposed to 45 per 1000 without AIDS.

The onslaught of AIDS is also denting the prospects for economic development in hard-hit countries. In Zimbabwe, some companies have reported that AIDS costs are now absorbing as much as one-fifth of company earnings and, for instance, in Tanzania and Zambia, other firms estimate that AIDS illness and death cost them more than their total profits for the year.

Says David Heymann, Executive Director, Communicable Diseases Cluster, WHO, "AIDS is a deadly serious public health threat. But as the epidemic continues to spin out of control, countries face more than just a health crisis. They face a growing threat to human development and to economic and social stability."

Forces that fuel the epidemic

Some of the reasons behind HIV's spread remain undetermined. It is not fully understood why, for instance, HIV infection rates take off in some countries while remaining stable in neighbouring countries over many years. What is known is that a number of factors clearly influence the shape and scope of the epidemic in different parts of the world.

Wars and armed conflicts generate fertile conditions for the spread of HIV. The UNAIDS/WHO report notes that in Rwanda, before the political turmoil of the mid-1990s, infection rates were approximately 10% in cities and towns and around 1% in the countryside, where most people lived. Yet by 1997, both urban and rural rates were just over 11%. A revealing fact is that HIV infection rates rose sixfold among the mostly rural people who had fled to refugee camps.

In many places people have no access to voluntary HIV testing and counselling. Yet even when these services are offered, many do not want to know or acknowledge their HIV status because of the blame and shame attached to AIDS. For example, in Côte d'Ivoire, where more than 13 000 pregnant women were offered interventions to increase their chances of having a healthy baby, fewer than half accepted testing and returned for the results.

In Zimbabwe's city of Mutare, surveillance data indicate that close to 40% of pregnant women are HIV-infected and probably 30 000 adults are living with HIV. Yet the sole HIV support group in the city has just 70 members, leaving thousands of others to struggle alone with the implications of their infection, including the dilemma of how to explain the sudden need for condom use with a spouse or other stable partner.

Secrecy can persist even in the face of sickness and death, which in immunodeficient people is often caused by tuberculosis or other common illnesses. In one study of home-based care schemes in southern Africa, fewer than 1 in 10 people who were caring for HIV-infected relatives at home acknowledged that they were suffering from AIDS, and the patients themselves were barely more open.

"One might think that in a country with a quarter or third of the population infected, people would become more open about the epidemic. Experience teaches us that this doesn't happen automatically," said Dr Piot. "The silence needs to be broken, publicly and courageously, by leaders who encourage their people to face the truth about AIDS."

REQUEST: Announcement of international AIDS orphan initiative on World AIDS Day

PURPOSE: Commemoration of World AIDS Day and to affirm the Administration's commitment to the global battle against HIV and AIDS

BACKGROUND: To commemorate the 10th anniversary of World AIDS Day the President will launch a $10-20 million international initiative designed to develop and implement effective models for caring for children orphaned by AIDS and for children at highest risk of infection by HIV.

$10 million, administered by USAID, will be used to (1) identify and enhance model programs to support communities in caring for children and families affected by AIDS, (2) initiate these model programs in areas of most acute need and where they do not currently exist; and (3) develop an action plan for expanding and sustaining effective community-based programs proportionate to the magnitude of the problem. An additional $10 million may be provided by the National Institutes of Health to enhance these activities and document their effectiveness.

In addition, the President will direct Sandra Thurman, Director of the Office of National AIDS Policy, to lead a delegation in January that will report to him on the extent of the problem and provide recommendations for additional action. This delegation will include representatives from Congress, foundations, and the media.

The increasing number of AIDS orphans has reached crisis proportions in many of the world's poorest countries. The U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) estimates that there will be 40 million orphans by the year 2010. To date, over 8.2 million children had been orphaned by AIDS; 90% of these children are from sub-saharan Africa.

The President is scheduled to meet with the Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS on December 18th. The Council is going to make a strong request to the President for increased leadership on and funding for the international AIDS epidemic. This initiative provides a timely opportunity to provide such leadership.

World AIDS Day is sponsored by the World Health Organization. The 1998 World AIDS Day theme, "Force for Change: World AIDS Campaign with Young People" challenges governments and non-governmental organizations around the world to children and youth who are most severely impact by this epidemic.

PREVIOUS

PARTICIPATION: A Presidential Proclamation has been released on World AIDS Day every year. In 1993 the President spoke at Georgetown University. In 1994 the Office of National AIDS Policy arranged an Oval Office meeting with the President and HIV positive youth. In 1995, a Presidential video message was produced and the historic White House Conference on HIV/AIDS was held. In 1996 the President met with NIH, CDC, and HHS representatives for a scientific research briefing in the Oval Office. In 1997, the President signed the World AIDS Day Proclamation and an Executive Order that urged Federal agencies serving youth to improve access the HIV prevention and care services.

RE: World AIDS Day

Whitman-Walker Clinic has partnered with several other local and national organizations, including Metro TeenAIDS, the National AIDS Fund, Population Services International (the world's largest non-profit social marketing firm) and the Youth Pride Alliance to facilitate a truly amazing World AIDS Day event. We are holding a massive youth forum for the students of Duke Ellington, a high school for the performing arts in D.C. This will be the first such program of its kind at a public school in the District of Columbia.

We are particularly excited about this venue for several reasons. First, the student body of about 550 is one of the most diverse in the District. Students attend from every corner of the city, not just one particular neighborhood. Second, the school administration is 110 percent behind this effort and has been incredibly supportive. And, finally, a student at Duke Ellington recently died of AIDS.

Prior to the December 1st, 21 AIDS educators from each of our organizations will go to Duke Ellington and spend a few hours facilitating break-out groups of students. The purpose of this is to impart safer-sex and risk-reduction information and collect data that will be used to structure the larger program on World AIDS Day.

While our exact program for December 1st, is still being structured we plan to have a panel of HIV positive youth, AIDS educators and others that will be able to speak and answer questions that the student audience will be able to ask. Parents of students are also being invited to attend. We plan to make the program somewhat interactive, with performances by the students and other activities.

Sandy Thurman

We would be honored to have you join us at this event. It is our understanding that you will be with Ricki Lake that day, and hope that you will invite her to come with you, should you decide to attend. In fact, we would like to have Ricki Lake actually facilitate some of the question and answer period that will be an important part of the program.

Thank you for your consideration. If you have any questions or concerns, please contact me directly at 202.797.3590.

REQUEST: Meeting and photo opportunity with youth for signing of World AIDS Day Proclamation

PURPOSE: Commemoration of World AIDS Day and to amplify the Administration's commitment to fighting HIV and AIDS among young persons.

BACKGROUND: To commemorate World AIDS Day the President will meet with youth peer educators from HIV prevention programs, HIV+ youth, and involved parents for a meeting and photo-op to include signing of the World AIDS Day Proclamation.

World AIDS Day is sponsored by the World Health Organization and was first observed on December 1, 1988. The 1998 World AIDS Day theme, "Force for Change: World AIDS Campaign with Young People" challenges people around the world to contemplate the long-term repercussions of the AIDS pandemic, and not lose sight that AIDS affects everyone.

Recent years have seen a significant shift in the demographics of the AIDS epidemic, with new infections in youth rising dramatically we must recognize these changes. Today, one out of every four new infections in the United States is an adolescent. Every hour another two teenagers are infected. To commemorate World AIDS Day, the President has a unique opportunity to call on parents, teachers, governments, churches, businesses, and young people themselves to build a healthy future for our youth.
