Q: Many of the operational details of the offshore facility have been reported in the media -- its size, the aircraft it will accomodate, etc. Also, most media are reporting that the base will be built off the coast of Camp Schwab.

A: These and many other details have been discussed with Japan, but no final, official decisions have yet been made. We have established the Futenma Implementation Group (FIG) to make recommendations on all such issues. We expect to have a detailed plan within a year.

Q: Some Okinawan citizens in the Camp Schwab area are already expressing opposition to the new facility. Are we taking their concerns into account?

A: As I stated, final decisions on the exact location of the facility have not been made. We will of course consider the impact on the local population.

Q: Why seven years?

A: The Futenma Air Station fulfilled some critical military functions that we want to replace first. The projected timetable calls for planning and environmental studies to be completed within three years, followed by two years of construction and one year of testing. The floating heliport should be operational by year seven.

From: Pritchard, Charles (Jack) L.
To: @EXECSEC - Executive Secretary
CC: /N, NonRecord at A1; @ASIA - Asian Affairs
Subject: Meeting with Minister Shibuya [UNCLASSIFIED]
Date: Friday, February 28, 1997 02:44 PM

Please pass to Gen Kerrick

You are scheduled to see Japanese Minister Shibuya on 4 March.

He will be interested in discussing Prime Minister Hashimoto's April 25 visit to the Washington.

The Japanese pressed hard for a more formal "state" visit with emphasis on a dinner. Shibuya has been told repeatedly that a dinner cannot be scheduled, but a private (unique) lunch with the President in the residence is being set up. Depending on Shibuya's level of comfort in his meeting with you, he could ask to know why a dinner is not possible. The Japanese have researched recent foreign heads of government visits and note that the President and German Chancellor Kohl have had private dinners at a local restaurant.

For the Japanese, it is important to be able to counter what is being coined by the Japanese media as "Japan passing." -- Meaning that the U.S. just isn't interested in Japan any more and is "passing it by" in favor of China and other Asian nations.

Unlike last April's Summit in Tokyo, when the Joint Security Declaration and Okinawa-related announcements dominated the news and gave a sense of rejuvenation to the alliance, there is nothing on the horizon that will come out of this April's summit that will grab the attention of the public. Thus, the Japanese are focused on the optics of the personal relationship between the President and Hashimoto.

In your discussion with Shibuya you should emphasize the one-on-one session in the oval office and the 1 hr 20 min private and unique lunch with the President and Prime Minister. Shibuya may also ask about numbers of participants in the expanded meeting. We are limiting the meeting to Hashimoto, interpreter plus 8. Brenda Hilliard says we have some flexibility to allow a few more - chairs along the back.

Aside from the Hashimoto visit, Shibuya wants to use the meeting as a courtesy call and to provide you with the Japanese view of the U.S.-Japan relationship.

From our perspective, the relationship is fairly solid. Our attention toward China and the Korean peninsula should not be interpreted by the Japanese in zero-sum game terminology. We still value the Japanese alliance as the cornerstone of our Asia policy.

-Security issues:

- Need to complete the SACO process (relocation of USMC assets from Futenma MCAS)
- Continue progress on the Defense Guidelines Review (focus on expanding bilateral regional contingency planning)
- Need to maintain force levels in the Pacific and Japan in particular (Japanese have been signalling their intent to "objectively" open a dialogue on this subject; Albright put a marker down during her trip that force levels reflect the current situation and there was no need /intent to change); we are not anxious for this to be a discussion topic at the summit.

Economic Issues:

- Rubin is concerned about the macro direction Japan is headed; Japan cutting domestic spending/budget in favor of exports; will increase current account surplus
- Federal Maritime Commission issued sanctions against Japanese shipping because of Japanese Harbor practices; will begin 14 April; GOJ recognizes internal problems and privately knows that reforms needed, but will speak out publicly against sanctions.
