Dear Leane:

The information which you say "is reliably reported" is not reliable! ~~xPointxxxmay be~~ She may be ~~xxxRxxx~~ doing point (a) - but at most that would be maybe a greeting, thank you and good-bye. None of the others are true even in the slightest degree.

She will - as she always does - go as our great, beloved First Lady and I am sure that every American will be proud of her.

I have passed along your other ~~suggestion which~~ information on which I would imagine there is a lot of agreement.

With many thanks and warm personal regards,

February 14, 1972

Dear Rosemary,

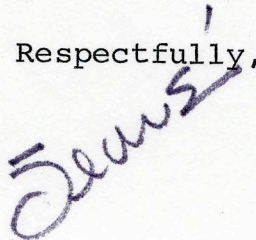

It is reliably reported in connection with the President's upcoming trip to China: (a) that Mrs. Nixon is studying some Chinese phrases to use when she is in China with the President; (b) that she has had some Chinese gowns made to wear while in China; and (c) that she is taking along with her some Chinese objets d'art as presents for the Chinese leaders whom she will meet.

According to the ablest American experts on China, the Chinese, while showing the utmost politeness, will not be impressed with any of the three things the First Lady is reported to be planning. Indeed, inwardly they may be amused at what cannot help but seem naive to them. Moreover, such gestures, if they are carried out, may tend to reinforce their belief that Americans know little or nothing about China and the Orient.

For what it is worth, it would seem better for our beloved First Lady to appear in China as a true American First Lady and a true American woman.

Of course the above is not psychic, but it is information I wanted you to have.

Respectfully,

P. S. On quite another subject, I think it very important that a positive stand on amending the Constitution be taken to correct the problems of forced busing to achieve racial balance. Anything less will be interpreted as avoiding this most important issue. This is psychic.

February 14, 1972

Dear Rosemary,

Re the attached --

As you must know, the main topic of conversation everywhere I go is the President's trip to China. The accompanying memo represents the collective thinking of experts on the Orient - not anything that came to me psychically.

While I personally think it is nice for our First Lady to try and learn a few Chinese phrases to use while there, we have to remember that the Oriental mind is different from ours.

The postscript, however, is something that came to me psychically. I believe action on it will help our President win the election.

THE JEANE DIXON PREDICTIONS

JEANE DIXON'S ANNUAL PREDICTIONS FOR 1972

By Jeane Dixon

© 1972 by The Chicago Tribune
World Rights Reserved

(Italics) (The world-renowned prophetess publishes at the beginning of each year her visions of future events which come to her, she says, through various psychic channels. In her last set of forecasts, published midyear 1971, Jeane Dixon predicted the reelection of President Thieu in South Vietnam, the admission of Communist China to the U.N. with the concomitant walk-out of Nationalist China, and the virtual retirement of Washington Redskin quarterback Sonny Jurgensen from active play. These are her predictions for 1972.)

President Nixon's "summit-to-summit" approach is intelligent and shows how willing he is to take the initiative to solve grave world problems. Sadly, his valiant efforts will avail little.

Extra special precautions must be made to safeguard President Nixon's person in Peking. While I do not see death or assassination, I do get very strongly the possibility of bodily harm or injury. However, the President will not be deterred; the quest for world harmony is so strong within him that he will journey to Peking whatever the dangers may be.

I get that the attempts to harm the President will come from two different sources-- Chinese secret societies now being revived inside Red China, and dissatisfied but ambitious military personnel in the Red Chinese Army. Their aim will be to dramatize China's internal situation and draw world attention.

The greatest danger to President Nixon will be upon his arrival at the airport... especially when he enters the vehicle which will take him into the city of Peking.

President Nixon will be widely misquoted and misunderstood during this trip. I see him receiving an important gift, which will somehow become an anxiety as the years go by.

I sense that President Nixon will have a U.S. military escort. A military ship seems to be playing an important role. United States Marines will be standing by.

The Presidential Hopefuls

At present the Democratic candidates' channels seem to flow in this order: Senators Kennedy, Jackson, Humphrey, and Muskie... Sen. Muskie has a difficult fight ahead. Indeed, I do not get that his channel of destiny leads him into the White House. Of course, these are vibrations from people, that is, man-made, and they vary from day to day.

At this writing, therefore, Sen. Henry M. Jackson seems to have the second heaviest vibes, but I get that two of his advisors--although brilliant--are giving him advice on disarmament which will have negative repercussions, especially in the South.

There seems to be some sticky difficulties ahead for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, involving travel and other people's movements.

The 1972 Democratic Convention in Miami Beach will see much confusion but will not be marred with riotous disorders like those which erupted four years ago in Chicago.

I see my good friend, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, withdrawing from an arduous campaign trail--for personal reasons.

A "dark horse" will make an attempt to be the Democratic Party's presidential candidate; he will have some support, but not strong enough to win. The "dark horse" I see is Sen. William Fulbright.

Richard Milhous Nixon will be the Republican's presidential nominee.

Young Americans, at the polls for the first time this year, will vote according to their strong, sociologically-oriented consciences. This will make a difference in future elections, and will be evident in 1972 election results.

Sen. Eugene McCarthy is trying very hard to be useful, but he will not have the impact on the 1972 elections that he did in 1968.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie has great charisma and can be very persuasive but I do not get that he will be the victor in 1972. In January, and again in May, he will have an exceptionally good press and be strongly favored in pre-election polls, and he will look like the winner. But some partners or associates will not prove worthy of his trust, and their actions will reflect on him and adversely influence his standing. Too, I get that foreign countries do not favor him; this also will damage his candidacy.

The Mideast and Asia

The India-Pakistan War, as well as the Israeli-Egypt confrontation, appears to be part and parcel of the same Communist Plan--to keep United States diplomatic and military forces engaged on foreign fronts; this shall continue.

Failure to bring about a lasting settlement in these areas will show America up as an impotent peacemaker, which is exactly what our opposing forces want--for propaganda purposes. No matter how sincerely we try, our efforts will fail, and bloodshed will continue in the Middle East.

Golda Meir's prestige and status are still rising, but the future looks dark for Arafat, the Palestinian leader. In Jordan, King Hussein will continue to have his problems.

I see danger--war clouds over Turkey, Iran and Greece. The battles in India and Pakistan are just the beginning of other bigger, more devastating wars in that whole area.

Oil in Libya

American oil companies with interests in Libya will lose all their investments to our opposing forces--with one exception.

I saw a channel connected to the ghost of Lenin hovering over one of our states. Lenin's ghost stood on sheaves of papers, piled high with pencils, linking him to a large, important American corporation based in that state.

I get that this company has close ties to the opposing forces and will therefore receive preferential treatment from the powers that be, including those in Libya. The bonds of the people involved in the company go back to when Lenin was in power.

A prominent presidential hopeful from this state will not win the nomination.

The Enterprise

Just a few years ago I saw Nikita Khrushchev standing on the deck of a Russian cruiser in the Barents Sea, one of the northermost Russian seas, far above Murmansk. I felt he was there to witness the successful firing of a huge missile from under the sea.

During the first week of the India-Pakistan War it seemed I saw the same scene, but this time the locale was changed...it was in the Bay of Bengal instead of the cold Arctic sea, and the missiles were heading toward Dacca.

I feel the same kind of Russian missiles are now at undersea locations waiting to be aimed at our naval carrier, The Enterprise, and I gravely caution the Seventh Fleet.

The Russians would like nothing better than to destroy the big carrier in such a manner--that is, without an open declaration of war--and are thinking right now about attempting to do so when they feel the time is right and The Enterprise is in a vulnerable position. Military leaders in the USSR would like to discredit our carrier-based ^{superiority} on the high seas. Radar screens should be watched carefully every second, day and night!

The Enterprise need not be destroyed, but "Eternal vigilance is the price of peace."

People

Princess Anne will think very seriously about marriage next May, but the Queen will prevent it; this is for the good because if she did marry in 1972, it would not work out. However, there will be a romance next spring with a great aura of mystery surrounding it.

Princess Anne, romantic by nature, often imagines herself in love. One day she will awaken with a jolt when the "real thing" comes along, and once jolted into reality she will understand that love, although a many-splendored thing, is still reality... the very core of life itself... and that emotions only imagined are hardly enough on which to build a happy and lasting marriage.

For her own sake, the pretty English princess should marry someone of royal lineage; otherwise she will experience miserable misunderstandings and live to regret it.

Not much of a one for listening, the Princess will in this instance listen carefully to her mother. I feel Princess Anne will eventually marry the one man just right for her, and I believe she has already met him.

The Princess is not only an excellent athlete, but very intuitive and especially sensitive about her facial expressions. While participating in a sporting event in the near future, the Princess will probably have a slight accident to one of her feet. If she stays alert, she could avoid this small accident. But it will not be too serious, and will be only temporarily disabling.

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis will find 1972 on the whole a happy year, but she will experience a loss, either through robbery or fire. Too, I feel that during next February one of her domestic staff will sell some private information about her. How this can be avoided, I do not know.

Bobby Fisher's terrific power of concentration will bring him the world chess championship.

Sunday, Jan. 2, 1972

Georges Pompidou, through his great political wisdom and his ability to achieve for his country the most from the least, will make great strides in the coming months.

I see him receiving a special award which, from the symbols I get, can only mean "royal success and high honors." I interpret this to mean that the French president will have an ancient and honorable title bestowed upon him in February or March of 1974. In 1974 I see him running successfully for re-election as president of France.

In the coming year Mr. Pompidou will make a surprise executive decision which will cause legal reverses and ensuing internal entanglements of some kind. As a consequence, he will become very unpopular with certain segments in France. However, while still in office and particularly at the end of this coming January, he will gain many friends through his diplomacy.

I see only one shadow between him and true greatness. It has to do with the present gold manipulations, but once he breaks away from this international maneuvering over gold he will be assured of lasting fame in French history.

Dr. Benjamin Spock will become even more popular in 1972 with young people. Next July he will again receive unfavorable publicity. By May of 1973 influential friends will come to his aid, and he will enjoy popularity again.

The doctor has political ambitions; however, I do not get that he will ever realize those political ambitions. He will be appointed to public office through a VIP friend, but he will not be really happy in this position--nor will he ever win an elective office. I feel sure that by the fall of 1973 he will very much wish he had stayed in his own medical channel.

Dr. Spock is very creative and original and can be quite lovable. He is blessed with the gift of oratory and writing, and has the ability to "spring back." He will write excellent books again on philosophy rather than bringing up children.

Rep. Herman Badillo--I do not see either Badillo or Rep. Bella Abzug making great impressions on Congress or the fate of the nation.

Gov. George Wallace will cause a ripple, but will never be President of the United States. That is not his destiny.

Pope Paul will act in the interest of world peace, and will actually become effective. Unfortunately, his enemies will attack him viciously for his efforts.

The Pope will do some unexpected traveling in 1972 and must be heavily guarded. He will never favor abortions, nor approve a law allowing Roman Catholic priests to marry.

Fidel Castro will be making many trips out of Cuba in 1972 and 1973, to enhance his "social-international" prestige. This is because, as I have been forecasting for several years, Fidel Castro's usefulness in Cuba to the Communists is over, and his brother, Raul Castro is the man with whom the Russians really work. At the moment Raul is all powerful, and will remain so until such time as he, too, has outlived his usefulness for the Communists.

Former President Lyndon B. Johnson will have much political influence in the coming year, especially in July. A book coming out the latter part of 1972 will unjustly blame him for many matters which he inherited from his predecessors. Part of the book will reveal an incident with a prominent judge involved.

Hugh Hefner has a fabulously favorable aura around him. He is a strongly psychic person, wonderfully tolerant of others, and he is oozing with talent. He has political aspirations and in 1973 he will enter local politics in Chicago. Again in 1973 I get that he will be connected with government but not necessarily in elective office. A high award of recognition will come his way in 1973.

A law suit hangs over him at this moment, but he will win it. In the very near future, he will take an extensive trip that will include foreign countries.

I get that in the past two years his magazines fell from the high standards of excellence that he set for it, but he will now reverse this trend and return to his own high standards.

Mr. Hefner will write a book of philosophy, utilizing his vast talents in research, but it will not be completed until 1978. Meantime, repercussions over something that has already appeared in his magazine will haunt him some time in 1977 or 1978.

His wealth will grow remarkably; his real estate holdings will bring fantastic returns. A wedding ring glitters over him, and I interpret it to mean that he will be very lucky in marriage or partnership.

One word of warning: Mr. Hefner should give special attention to the care of his eyes.

When it comes to sports predictions, naturally I pick up thoughts of our heroic Washington Redskins first!

Coach George Allen's future is coming up red roses.

Billy Kilmer, the stalwart Redskin quarterback, has proved himself and will continue on an upward spiral.

Sonny Jurgensen will now move up to a new plateau in sports. He will find the change to his liking--his prestige will increase. He will work in some kind of an advisory or public information capacity (he has already turned down some offers).

I see continuing greatness for Vida Blue, and for "Broadway Joe" Namath--his legs will get him there.

Ferguson Jenkins, Chicago's star pitcher, will have a very good year in 1972, and glory will crown his efforts. But he must be very careful of the people around him, some of whom will try to take advantage of him. There are business associates whom he should not trust. I see some of his teammates experiencing losses through robbery in a hotel room, and he must be careful or he, too, will have valuables stolen.

In 1973 a complete change will come into his life, after which he will find out who were his false friends. There will be a dispute over money, and he may play for a team other than the Cubs. In 1974 I see Mr. Jenkins becoming an instructor or a teacher of some kind.

There is a man in a high position in the sports world who is not now associated with Mr. Jenkins but who can help him immensely. Mr. Jenkins should not be timid--he should go to this man, tell him what he seeks in life. Through this man, Mr. Jenkins will achieve the best part of his ambition.

Scandal

During the next six months or so I see a scandal involving travel and immigration matters. Among the victims will be an executive of a large university, three Democratic presidential hopefuls, HEW and SSA agency authorities, passport division persons, labor union leaders, and government officials including members of Congress. All will become deeply involved.

Exposure of this scandal will be so emotional and have such far-reaching effects that all details cannot be disclosed. There will be no threat to the nation nor will the disclosures get out of hand or affect the innocent along with the guilty.

A Southern senator and a Midwestern congressman will take the lead in stopping the incoming flow of illegal aliens and subversives. Disclosure of attempts to cloak the illegal entry of aliens with legalities will result in the prevention of much future illegal maneuvering.

Veterans' Rehabilitation

Recently columnist Bob Considine wrote about Mr. Victor Bergeron (Trader Vic) and the fight he is waging for modernization of the Veterans Administration hospitals and rehabilitation programs, and the "run-around" he has been getting from a White House advisor.

I get that Trader Vic will not get a satisfactory answer from Mr. Haldeman, but will instead get an answer directly from the President himself.

There will soon be an unprecedented change in the building plans and programs for VA hospitals, as well as in the person-to-person help the veterans need, and not getting. President Nixon will start the ball rolling. Legislation will be proposed by a Senator, and passed by the Congress. The President has long been concerned about the deficiencies and indifference displayed in the VA.

Note to Bob Considine and Trader Vic: the veterans can look forward to 1972 as their best year ever...and this will be just the beginning.

Miscellaneous

Cancer Cure. The next major medical break-through will be in the battle against cancer. Scientists will at long last find out how the core of the human cell--the very basis of life itself--vibrates to perpetuate life, and that when this core vibrates out of resonance (or harmony) with the other body cells, it causes the disease we know as cancer. But when harnessed and brought back to healthy, harmonious vibrations, then a cancer cure will be assured. This break-through is just around the corner.

Latin America. I warned that Chile would have a Communist president years before he was elected. Chile will suffer communist domination for a while longer, and United States business interests in that country will be wiped out, just as they were in Cuba. This same political situation, communistic leadership and domination, will soon spread to Argentina.

Earthquakes. Yes, there will be more. Both major and minor tremors will be felt, but I do not wish to pinpoint locations or dates, as that would just cause unnecessary anxiety.

Magazines. Because of economic conditions, more big national magazines will fall by the wayside. LIFE will survive 1972, but television has challenged the LIFE-LOOK type of news magazine, and will do so even more in the future.

Soviet Arms. If and when President Nixon goes to Russia, he must be thoroughly prepared to discuss these important items: 1) the Cosmos series of anti-satellite tests, and the FOBS (Full Orbital Bombardment Systems); 2) the ICBM's now being installed in 80 new underground installations; and 3) the Cosmic series of magnetic mines aimed at our polaris submarines.

We read much of Soviet exploits on the sea, in the air and in outer space, but their land forces are armed with weapons that far surpass those of our American fighting men. This Russian military superiority on the battlefield will be fully exposed by some concerned members of the United States Congress early in 1972, with special emphasis on our deplorable deficiency in conventional arms.

Korea. Now, as the war in Indochina slows down, the Russians will again stir things up in North Korea. Coldly and deliberately, they plan to keep us occupied militarily in the Far East until 1975 when they will feel the time is right for them to issue their ultimatum to the United States.

Supreme Court. I predicted previously that President Nixon would appoint five Supreme Court justices. He has already appointed four..he will appoint one more justice in 1972.

Sci-Fi Youth. Communes, hippies, yuppies, political and radical militants--all will decrease in size and effectiveness. Demonstrations will also decrease. Greater understanding, brought on by a return to religion, will narrow generation gaps, but this will not happen overnight.

I see "groupie" people turning to futuristic fads, concerning themselves with outer space, star-trek sciences, Flash Gordon-type of living...taking a giant step forward instead of falling back into undesirable communes.

Crime and Punishment. I see no decrease in crime and violence in the near future. We still face dangerous and serious race riots. The key to reducing crime is eliminating drug traffic, but I do not see effective drug traffic controls coming until 1975.

I do not see any major prison riots in 1972; there will be serious trouble in some prisons, but nothing like the riot at Attica.

Money. The inflationary spiral will not be completely stabilized in 1972. It will take time for President Nixon's economic measures to overcome the years of unsound fiscal policies.

Devaluing the American dollar will neither increase nor decrease stock market values. When devaluation is complete, stocks will rise for about three weeks, then level off to their true values.

China

Chou En-lai, the Chinese Foreign Minister, will attempt to obtain American assistance from President Nixon to get the modern industrialization they need before they can challenge the status of Russia and America as world powers. Russia is unhappy because modernizing and industrializing China, they think, would set back their own planned time-table for destruction of the U.S. by at least a century.

Sunday, Jan. 2, 1972

In place of our former Nationalist Chinese friends at the U.N. I now see a man who seems to be always associated with germs. Every time I concentrate on the chief delegate of the Communist Chinese Mission, I see germ warfare, false confessions, degradation, torture and starvation being inflicted upon the helpless.

This is the same man I saw as having masterminded the Pavlovian treatment of American prisoners during the Korean War; he will now try to degrade and humiliate our nation from a 'forum' right here on our own soil.

If my vibrations and count are correct, at least 70 Communist Chinese generals have died or been put to death between February and October of 1971. I have felt the decimation of army cadres, the death of two high Chinese defense officials, and the assassination of a prominent military governor.

Lin Piao is gone, having disappeared in a fiery crash. Mao Tse-tung has passed from power, and is no longer an important factor in ruling Communist China. Chou En-lai, the Soviet-oriented Foreign Minister, is the real power in Red China now.

America. Our greatest need is national unity. It is because no one can force dissident groups to get together against their will that President Nixon has not "brought us together" more effectively. Indeed, I see only more and more complaining with less and less willingness to get together voluntarily and work for the good of mankind.

I see our country weakening further because of this lack of unity which will contribute to the end of our two-party political system in a few years. Where there is no vision, the people perish!

Spd
Jeane Dixon says that Kimmelman and Shriver are both involved in the Occidental Oil deal with Russia.

She said they were in Russia to work out this deal prior to the President's visit and she thinks they will bring this up at the appropriate time.

She says Kimmelman and Shriver seem to be associated through Shriver's law firm with the Occidental Oil people.

"Someone will take a short at Shriver -- I predicted that he would be on some ticket and someone would take a shot at him."

"Be careful of John Connally - 1975-76 he could have a heart attack if not properly taken care of. He must be careful -- but he should not be told of this prophecy.

8/14/72

Jeane Dixon to rmw

"I will send the name of the person to arrange a visit to the United Planning Organization if it can be considered."

"I am working on Greg Morris -- Mission Impossible."

"Eagleton -- how can I get him to drop the McGovern thing and get with Nixon for Re-Election -- rmw gave her a few suggestions)

Points -- Jeane Dixon says she can make points we want made more in a spiritual way. She can say -- The President is trying to tell us this. "I can tell them we have to listen -- that these are things the President cannot say in this way."

If the President can call on inner spirit -- we must get to these people who are searching for something solid. "The Jesus People"

Points she thinks can be made:

Do not let pollution touch you -- the story of the Lotus Blossom - grows in the most polluted streams, etc. and is beautiful until the dirty, polluted water touches one of its ~~leaves~~ flowers and then it dies. You can grow up in the ghetto's etc. but don't let that pollution touch you.

8/14/72

Suggestions from Jean Dixon

"If we are united we can have a country whereby we can develop our individual divinely granted talents.

We need to do God's Will.

People are seeking this -- through the Jesus Movement, etc. they are asking for leadership - moral leadership.

The President would have to use different words but he should hit something along these lines:

With unification of our people - youth, etc. -- we can do anything. Lenin promised them everything too and then when they overthrew the government by a minority as they did - they gave them nothing but slavery."

The Lord gives us talents and brings us into life at the precise right time of history.

Unity -- we can have a country whereby we can find and develop our reason for our purpose for being - purpose - perseverance and priests (ministers) to lead us.

Yours is princely power from the day you are born - our government under President Nixon gives us the opportunity to work ourselves at what is best for us..

REMARKS MADE BY JAMES L. DIXON TO MAYOR HOLCOMB AND MEMBERS OF THE COMMON COUNCIL AT SAN BERNARDINO, CALIFORNIA, MONDAY, JUNE 26, 1972

Thank you very much, Mr. Mayor, for making it possible for me to be heard today instead of last Friday. This delay enabled me to take care of other matters in hand. Thank you.

Let me commence by saying that I am not here today to try to sell you the Tri-City Airport property -- not at all ... That sale was completed back in 1971 -- and approved and funded by the Federal Aviation Administration -- subject to acceptance by the Mayor and the Common Council of the City of San Bernardino.

And one of the men responsible for the FAA approval of the Tri-City site as a municipal airport for the City of San Bernardino -- and the grant of $2,670,235.00 with which to purchase and develop this Tri-City site -- is a seasoned veteran of 37 years with the FAA -- specializing in the selection of airport sites across the nation and particularly here in southern California -- and this gentleman is with us here today -- Mr. Fred Wild, FAA, Los Angeles.

And to prove the point of how right the men of FAA were in the selection of the Tri-City site -- had Tri-City not been in operation at the time NAFB came into being in 1942 -- I have it on good authority that that's exactly where Norton Air Force Base would be today: right where Tri-City Airport is right now.

And please rest assured, ladies and gentlemen, that I would not be standing before you here today if the FAA had not approved this Tri-City site for purchase and development by the City of San Bernardino as their own municipal airport. For very frankly -- I am not out here today because I have nothing to do back home. But the men of FAA did put their money where their seasoned judgment said it should be -- and they did this last August, 1971 - pending your acceptance, of course -- and the deadline for acceptance of the FAA grant is at midnight tonight -- after which time it will no longer be in force and effect -- and that, ladies and gentlemen, is the reason I stand before you today -- to alert you of this important fact. I am confident that each and every one of you are aware of the deadline for acceptance of said grant but I felt that I would be remiss in my overall services to all parties involved in these important matters if I failed to bring this matter to your attention in this way today.

On April 14th, 1971, we met with Mr. Wild and his distinguished colleagues -- in the office of former Mayor Ballard, with Mayor Ballard, several of his aides and attorney Bruce Varner: an agreement in principle was arrived at at that meeting, following which we all went to luncheon at the Mediterranean Restaurant on Highland Avenue -- at which time one of Mr. Wild's FAA associates -- Mr.

Ted Schlessinger made a prediction: Mr. Schlessinger said that if my wife could make predictions -- so could he -- and he said: "What's the date?" -- and I said: "April 14th" -- and Mr. Schlessinger said: "I predict that two years from today, April 14th, 1973, we shall celebrate the dedication of the opening of the new municipal airport for San Bernardino."

However, I now understand that there is a strong movement afoot to acquire joint use of Norton Air Force Base as a substitute municipal airport for San Bernardino -- to which use I, as a non-complaining tax-paying citizen of this great nation -- I am personally violently opposed. My tax dollars go to the support of Norton Air Force Base and all other bases -- just as your tax dollars do, and I, therefore, feel that I have every right to speak out on this subject here today, just as I have in Washington on many such occasions, and rest assured I will continue to do so.

The late good Congressman Harry Sheppard brought this fine military establishment to San Bernardino in 1942 and if Harry Sheppard would somehow learn of this proposed joint use of Norton Air Force Base -- he would not only turn over in his grave -- but Harry Sheppard would rise up and smite and severely censure those who would attempt to destroy his dream and dismember the handiwork that Congressman Sheppard brought and wrought here not only for the economic uplift and employment of this ever-expanding community -- but Harry Sheppard wanted Norton Air Force Base to be the bastion of defense of the Pacific Ocean on the west coast. And to remain so intact. Harry Sheppard was a distinguished member of the United States Congress. Harry Sheppard was an esteemed patriot with guttts and vision, and his vision for the defense of this nation transcended any local politics. His patriotism was total. Harry Sheppard was a good friend of mine. I had the honor of being present at his funeral in the Nation's capital.

Norton Air Force Base is the west coast arsenal of defense. And for the utmost safety and security at Norton Air Force Base -- there should be no joint use granted at any time.

And why should San Bernardino settle for a mere arm or a leg of Norton Air Force Base as your municipal airport anyway? Why not have both? Both Norton as well as Tri-City -- and thereby eliminate the precariousness of being booted off Norton Air Force Base in time of emergency and war? Own your own municipal airport at the Tri-City site -- and thereby leave Norton Air Force Base intact and uncontaminated by all lesser type aircraft other than the military?

The Brier's have owned and operated Tri-City since 1928: Norton Air Force Base was formally established here in March of 1942: and that's a difference of 14 years: and while the Brier's did not object to NAFB coming in here to share their own air space rights over Tri-City -- (and in all likelihood it would have done them no good to object anyway) -- the Brier's did not, however, agree at that time that Norton Air Force Base would, at any future time, be allowed to go into competition with them in their Tri-City air space rights by granting use of NAFB to air carrier competitors such as Golden West Airlines: Air California: and other commercial carriers. And I feel very strongly that the Brier's will have good reason to object and possibly contest such competitive operations, if, and whenever same may be conducted on and from this federally-owned airport base.

If the Tri-City Airport property was a non-existent airport: and you were asking for joint use of Norton Air Force Base -- that would be understandable: However, the fact that Tri-City IS there and in place -- and the fact that the men from FAA approved the Tri-City site -- there is no reason -- why this transaction should not be now closed and completed.

54 air fields have disappeared from the land in Southern California alone since 1940: the FAA is extremely apprehensive about the loss of more such airports. The replacement cost of lost airport property is prohibitive in today's market -- to say the least.

And, finally -- in the interests of greater safety and security at the base -- should it really come to pass that the City of San Bernardino's request for Joint use of Norton Air Force Base is finally approved -- it certainly stands to reason that the Federal Government will undoubtedly require the City of San Bernardino to defend any litigation and indemnify and save harmless the Federal Government (Norton Air Force Base) against any claims whatsoever from whomsoever -- eternally.

Ladies and gentlemen -- the future world of aviation for the City of San Bernardino is in your own hands. And if the future growth of aviation for the next twenty five years -- maintains in keeping with the growth the aviation industry has enjoyed during the past twenty five years -- I suggest you treat it kindly.

PSA to Acquire Air California Control From C. Arnholt Smith

BY AL DELUGACH

Times Staff Writer

Pacific Southwest Airlines, profitable commuter line based in San Diego, is buying 81% control of an anemic but reportedly improving competitor, Air California of Newport Beach, from the financial empire of San Diego financier C. Arnholt Smith.

It hopes also to buy the remaining shares and merge the two airlines.

If approved by the state regulatory authority, the acquisition would give PSA entry to Orange County and to Palm Springs.

And it would eliminate competition by the lines on San Diego-Oakland, Ontario-Sacramento, Sacramento-San Diego and San Diego-San Jose routes.

PSA President J. Floyd Andrews told The Times that the purchase will involve a total commitment of about $20 million. That figure includes provision for a tender offer by PSA of $15.75 per share to public holders of the other 19% of Air California stock. It also includes PSA's assumption of Air California's outstanding debentures.

The purchase price is considerably larger than that offered, then withdrawn by PSA two years ago. It was after that cancelled merger attempt that Air California was purchased by the Smith-controlled Westgate-California Corp., San Diego-based conglomerate.

Air California was begun in 1967 by a group of Orange County businessmen who accused PSA of refusing to provide service to major cities in the county. More recently, PSA has applied to the state for permission to serve Orange County, as well as other routes held by Air California.

The agreement on Air California is the second major sale announced by Westgate-California in the last two weeks.

The other is Westgate Life Insurance Co. to an Arizona insurance holding firm.

As Smith said he would earlier this year, he stepped down Thursday as president of Westgate-California, while continuing as chairman and chief executive officer. The board elected as president Philip A. Toft, who had been executive vice president.

Westgate-California reported in April that 1971 was the first losing year in its 11-year history. The net loss was $2.6 million.

The corporation has Yellow Cab operations in Los Angeles, the San Francisco Bay area and Phoenix, as well as seafood production and real estate. Several months ago it sold major holdings in the Smith-controlled U.S. National Bank, San Diego.

Air California had a net loss in 1971 of $923,000 compared to $376,000 a year earlier. However, its first quarter net loss this year was pared to $307,121 from a $654,935 loss in the year earlier period.

Robert W. Clifford, Air California president, however, told The Times Thursday that the line is "enjoying marked improvement" over 1971 with profits in March, April, May and June—though the last month's figures are not complete.

In the joint announcement of the PSA-Air California agreement, Smith was quoted as saying:

"I have been gratified by the progress Air California has made during the period of our investment in it. However, the increasing financial requirements of modern airline operations suggest this course of action at this time.

PSA had first-quarter net income of $1,090,000 or 28 cents a share compared to $350,000 or 13 cents a year earlier. PSA revenues for all of 1971 slipped to $1.9 billion from $2.2 billion a year earlier.

The joint announcement gave only partial details on the Air California agreement. It said PSA will pay $15.75 per share for Westgate-California's 81% interest in Air California, "partly in cash and partly by PSA's 10-year, 7% subordinated notes with 10-year warrants to purchase 100,000 shares of PSA's common stock."

It said PSA is obligated to make a tender offer to all other Air California shareholders at an all-cash price of $15.75 per share.

The parties did not reveal how much of the total would be in cash.

The agreed price would put the total compensation for all of Air California's 851,934 shares outstanding at some $13.4 million—of which some $10.8 million would be Westgate-California's 81% share.

Details Forthcoming

Andrews told The Times that the deal "gets up to around $20 million" with debentures assumed from Air California. He indicated that full details would be forthcoming shortly.

Both Andrews and Clifford said they have not sounded out the state Public Utilities Commission on its attitude toward the intended merger of Air California into PSA. The announcement said the merger would be made on completion of the tender offer.

The state regulatory body has had before it a continuing dispute of whether Smith still controls another airline, Golden West Airlines. The Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington also has been looking into the same allegations by competing airlines, in connection with Golden West's acquisition of Los Angeles Airways.

A PUC spokesman told The Times Thursday afternoon that no application was yet before the agency for PSA to acquire Air California. The spokesman said the PUC director of transportation had heard nothing about the PSA acquisition before Thursday's announcement.

Roberts Admits Being Forced to Front for Smith, Airlines Say

BY PAUL E. STEIGER

Times Staff Writer

WASHINGTON — Kern County agribusinessman Hollis B. Roberts once told an associate he was being forced to pose as the owner of Newport Beach-based Golden West Airlines by the real owner, San Diego industrialist C. Arnholt Smith, papers filed Tuesday with the Civil Aeronautics Board alleged.

The papers, filed by three California-based airlines, charged that CAB hearing examiner Harry H. Schneider wrongfully excluded this and other "vital and indispensable" evidence from recent hearings into the application of Golden West, a California commuter and air taxi line, for permission to acquire Los Angeles Airways, a financially ailing helicopter carrier.

The three California lines — Hughes Airwest, San Francisco; Pacific Southwest Airlines, San Diego; and Western Air Lines, Los Angeles — contended such evidence would have been provided by 11 witnesses. Schneider had prevented on procedural grounds from testifying.

In what they called an unprecedented move, the lines appealed directly to the board, asking it to overrule Schneider and direct him to permit the witnesses to testify.

Ordinarily, an appeal from an examiner's ruling awaits his issuance of a recommended decision—an event that is still months away. But in this case, the lines said, waiting could extend the whole process by a year or more.

They asked the board to rule immediately, "to prevent a grave miscarriage of justice and a result contrary to the public interest."

Airwest, PSA and Western have charged that Smith illegally continues to control Golden West, in violation of a previous CAB ruling. The board ruled that Smith's domination of the taxi and limousine service at California's major airports militated against permitting him also to control the feeder airlines serving these airports.

Role as Banker

When the new CAB hearings began in March, Smith testified that he continues to take part in management decisions at Golden West, but only in his capacity as its banker. U.S. National Bank of San Diego, which Smith heads, has arranged millions of dollars of credit for Golden West.

Roberts, a longtime friend and business associate of Smith's, is now the leading stockholder of the line.

In their plea to the board Thursday, Airwest, PSA and Western charged that two of their excluded witnesses—Jean Laborde, a partner of Roberts since 1963, and Laborde's wife, Madonna — would have testified that on Dec. 25, 1970, Roberts told them he was being forced to pose as the owner of Golden West.

According to the document, Roberts told the Labordes that "if he did not go along with the Smiths (Smith and his brother, J. A. Smith) U.S. National Bank would cut off their credit . . ."

The pleading continued: "On Oct. 22, 1971, Mr. Laborde saw an airplane with the name 'Roberts Farms' on it. Mr. Laborde said to Mr. Roberts I see that you have bought yourself an airplane. Mr. Roberts replied that you know I don't own that airplane any more than I own Golden West Airlines."

Front for Smith

Laborde also would have testified, the three airlines said, that Roberts told him about agreeing to front for Smith in acquiring control of Skymark Airlines, another California air commuter line that has since been merged into Golden West.

The document said that "Mr. Roberts told Mr. Laborde early in 1969 that he (Mr. Roberts) had said to Mr. C. Arnholt Smith that he could not understand why he insisted on continuing to operate Skymark when it was losing so much money. Mr. Smith told Mr. Roberts that you run your farming business and I'll run my business."

This testimony from Laborde would have been backed up, the three airlines' document continued, by testimony from another witness excluded by examiner Schneider, Myrna Grgich of Bakersfield.

"From approximately 1960 until the spring of 1970," the document said, Mrs. Grgich saw Roberts "on almost a daily basis."

It added: "In the fall of 1968 Mr. Roberts came to her home and stated that he was going to have an airline. She said how can you do that when you don't know anything about airlines and don't have the money to buy one? He said that he did not need any money because Mr. Smith was going to buy the airline and would own it but that Mr. Roberts would be its president."

Mrs. Grgich would also have testified, the document said, that earlier in 1968, Roberts was concerned about serious financial problems, but that "Mr. Roberts agreed to be president of Skymark Airlines for Mr. Smith and the U.S. National Bank loaned him the money to resolve his financial problems."

In their pleading, the three airlines charged that Smith's control of Golden West Airlines "has been so pervasive and his attention to the most minute details of (the line's) operations has been so extensive, that it cannot be rationally explained by a mere banker-client relationship."

However, the document added, "this is the first outright testimony we have had that Mr. C. Arnholt Smith does in fact own Golden West Airlines." Consequently, the lines said, "we do not see how the board could decide this case without considering this testimony from these three witnesses."

The airlines also summarized testimony that they said would have come from the other excluded witnesses, including Victor Harrell, a former president of Golden West, and A. L. Gielegem, a California Public Utilities Commission financial examiner. The carriers said that these witnesses, too, should be heard.

What Irked Her About Politics?

Martha's Candor Gave GOP Jitters

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q. — Just what were "the dirty things that go on" which Martha Mitchell objected to about her husband John's work in connection with politics? — C. R., Wilton, Conn.

A. — There are so many "dirty things" in politics that it's difficult to know which ones Martha took exception to. For one, those five James Bond-types breaking into Democratic headquarters in the Watergate Apartments upset Martha since it was too close to home. (The Mitchells also live at the Watergate). Republicans never objected when Martha was talking against the opposition. But when she complained about GOP politics they began their unofficial-official line that Martha "is not herself these days, especially at night." Mostly likely, John will be more successful at silencing Martha than those teams of strongmen Martha either saw or thought she saw.

Q. — I remember you reported that Liz Taylor's son, Michael Wilding Jr., had turned the $78,000 London mansion she gave him as a wedding present into a crash pad. Is the hippie scene still going on? — J. O., Albany, N. Y.

A. — Liz sort of has the house back and is redecorating it right now. Nineteen-year-old Michael took his wife, Beth, and their 11-month-old baby daughter off to a farmhouse in Wales where he set up a family commune with six other people. Michael doesn't get any money from Liz, and the "family" is hoping to support themselves farming the scraggly 12 acres that go with the farmhouse. Idyllic? Well, Beth complains that it's "damn hard work."

QUESTION you never asked: What happens to a great sports ace like Lance Rentzel who marries a movie star (Joey Heatherton) and then is arrested in a scandal for exposing himself to a minor? Well, here's what happens. Your movie star wife stands by you at least until the sticky part is over, then files for divorce. You try to pick up the pieces of your pro football career by writing a revealing and sensational book telling all about your arrest, psychiatric problems, and history of sexual neuroticism, as well as "Ball Four"-type tales from the world of sport. World Publishing is bringing this number out in the fall and already they're talking "best-seller"! But how will they ever plug it on the TV talk shows?"

Q. — How large an estate do you think the late Duke of Windsor left? — T. A., Ridgecrest, Calif.

A. — The duchess is the duke's sole beneficiary. Although no one knows exactly how large an estate she will inherit, informed sources say it will be surprisingly large — perhaps as much as $10 million. The Windsors had been given their house in the Bois de Boulogne by the French government for a nominal fee and their country home, The Mill, is on the market. The duke received a life-long allowance from the British government, but had money in his own right, inherited from his mother, Queen Mary.

Q. — Do you know anything about the story that Clifford Irving's sometime girl friend, Nina Van Pallandt, is dating Richard Harris? — L. C., Duncan, Okla.

A. — We think the rumor needs a little closer inspection. Suppose you were John Marshall, who is Nina's personal manager, and suppose you were anxious to play down your client's reputation as a little old home-wrecker? Now if you also happen to be managing concert tours for actor-singer Richard Harris, would you maybe put one and one together? Presto Harris gets good publicity and the public forgets about Nina's association with the Irving affair.

ARE YOU listening, Mr. President? Dr. Arnold Hutschnecker simply amazes New York dinner party guests with his talk instantly establishing himself as former psychiatrist to Richard M. Nixon. The good doctor goes on to hint that President Nixon may establish a Cabinet post for him as Secretary of Peace.

FROM: Rose Mary Woods

I am attaching a memorandum which was brought in to me by Jeane Dixon (who does not want it known that she is behind this invitation as it would destroy her "neutral" status).

She feels very strongly that if the program as suggested in this memorandum - or part of it - could be followed it would be a master stroke to reach the minorities.

Would you please see that it gets in the right "mill" for a decision.

Whatever the decision I would like to be informed.

Thanks.

Confidentially, Jeane Dixon came in to see me about several things and suggested she thought it would pay dividends if we could see our way clear to appoint Jeffrey St. John to the Bicentennial Commission. She said he is one of the "real students" of the American Revolution - and she also said she understands that he has been somewhat critical of the Administration from time to time and after her conversations with him she feels he could be "won over".

I pass this along as something that might well be worth looking into.

Dear Rose Mary,

With all due respect to the fact that you are immediately concerned with Convention matters, may I respectfully project ahead a little and suggest that, if at all possible, Mr. Jeffrey St. John, the well-known commentator and author ("Count-down to Chaos"), be included as a member of the Bicentennial Commission?

In my opinion his support would be especially meaningful in view of citizen comments that there are not enough people serving on the Commission who are "real students" of the American Revolution ... and also because I understand that he has, on occasion, been somewhat critical of the Administration and I cannot help but feel he could be won over to our "camp" and become an important ally.

It is my feeling that Mr. St. John -- a gentleman dedicated to the principles and ideals of our nation -- would be doubly effective as a member of this Commission by adding his depth of knowledge and wisdom to help the President make the Commemoration of our Bicentennial the most glorious and memorable any country has ever had!

Of course this is only a suggestion, but it is sincerely intended to be helpful, and I pray that it will be.

Bless you,

P.S. I don't think we can expect much from him - do you?

"Only Republicans could buy their own kids and turn them into hacks overnight," writes a cynical Wills. They were used, he says. The GOP kids cherish the American dream of equating virtue and wealth. "It's the essence of RN's American dream to be born bribed, and not know it; to have socially built-in upward mobilizers, yet to think one rises by sheer virtuous effort." And he adds: "these are clean non-kids who never had a youth, like RN."

Van Horne says that like Dems in '64, the result of GOP Convention was "as preordained as a Hitler plebescite." The most surprising thing was "the sheer meanness" of the session in the treatment of McCloskey and of the anti-VP delegate from Pa. Van Horne also protests the dismaying hostility of Goldwater/Reagan. Harriet concedes the Nixon women were "charming" and "beautiful" -- "a very model of a model Presidential family. The film tribute to PN [was] warm and touching. She is clearly an asset to RN, and her beauty and grace are lovely to see." But Van Horne feels the prolonged applause by the "rehearsed daque cheapened the tribute."

Party platforms shouldn't be taken very seriously -- their purpose is to woo, not to wed, says James Kilpatrick, and seen this way GOP platform "is a superior product." -- "to the ailing body politic, they bring a splendid bedside manner." Only exception to the calm tone is the obvious GOP attempt to separate Dems and McGites. While this is all fair and good, says Kelpo, GOP can't ignore things like deficit spending where "RN has made LBJ look like a piker,"; and GOP platform is inconsistent and ignores abuses of big labor. And Kilpo notes Royster's comment that Whigs died because they tried to be all things to all people. GOP may yet do the same, says Kilpatrick, while reform Dems have a different problem. "But to judge from their platform, at least they know where they are lurching. . . St. John, on CBS Spectrum, said trouble with GOP is that it hasn't had a new idea since Lincoln. He said Abe was the great emancipator, while RN is the great appropriator. In '68 he appropriated a conservative platform, while in '72 he's appropriated ideas of liberal Dems. Evidence of RN's appropriation of lib ideas is the support he's been receiving from liberal Dems. Thus, McG will win in Nov., said St. John -- RN will win the election but he'll eventually appropriate McG's ideas. And he said this is ok as Americans admire thieves who don't get caught. He attacked conservatives, saying they've betrayed US people by tagging along after RN and waiting for an occasional bone.

Jeane Dixon suggests that the President invite Mark Spitz to come to the White House.

Would you please advise whether there is any possibility that Mark Spitz might be invited to meet the President.

Citizen Powell Handed Down a Good Opinion

The saying goes, straight out of Shakespeare, that sweet are the uses of adversity. Here in Washington, getting smeared by Jack Anderson ranks high on the adversity scale, but Anderson's recent attack on Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell is turning into a stroke of good fortune for the nation's business community.

The story goes back to the summer of 1971, when Powell was simply Citizen Powell, a highly respected corporation lawyer in Richmond, Va. He lunched with an old friend, Eugene B. Sydnor Jr., who was then chairman of the education committee of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Sydnor was to meet in a few days with Arch Booth and other executives of the U.S. Chamber. He asked Powell to let him have a memorandum as a basis for discussion of certain steps that might be taken by American business in defense of the enterprise system. Powell was agreeable. He went to his office over the weekend and, in his usual methodical way, put together a neatly footnoted 33-page memorandum. On Monday, Aug. 23, he gave the paper to Sydnor, who took it on to Washington the next day.

Two months later, on Oct. 21, President Nixon nominated Powell for the Supreme Court. Now, nearly a year later, the memorandum to Sydnor has surfaced: Someone sent a copy to Jack Anderson; and Anderson, in his usual snide way, gave it a sinister reading. Powell's views were so militant, said Anderson, that the memorandum "raises a question about Powell's fitness to decide any case involving business interests."

For the record, Anderson never raised any such question about the fitness of Thurgood Marshall, as to integration, or about Arthur Goldberg, as to labor—but no matter. The effect of Anderson's attack on Powell has been to give the memorandum publicity it never could have achieved in any other way. Businessmen are besieging the Chamber with requests for copies of the text. Quite possibly, thanks to Anderson, something may come of Powell's year-old recommendations after all.

These recommendations are nothing sensational, but they make great good sense. Powell's thesis is that the American economic system is under broad attack, not merely from a handful of extremists but more significantly from "perfectly respectable elements of society—from the college campus the pulpit, the media, the intellectual and literary journals, the arts and sciences, and from politicians." The statement is undeniably true.

Paradoxically, Powell noted, the business community often tolerates and even participates in its own destruction: Businessmen contribute to foundations that are basically anti-business, and they support universities dominated by intellectuals who wage war against the enterprise system. Meanwhile, the media glorify such brilliant antagonists as Ralph Nader, and business executives do little but wring their hands.

Writing as a private citizen with long experience in both business and education, Powell offered a string of recommendations. The first essential, he said, is for businessmen "to confront this problem as a primary responsibility of corporate management." Large companies, he said, should appoint a vice president for survival. The U.S. Chamber, for its part, should take the offensive.

Because the campus is "the single most dynamic force" against the enterprise system, efforts should be made to achieve a better balance on college faculties. Highly qualified independent scholars should be asked to review key textbooks, and to criticize their antibusiness bias. Powell suggested that the TV networks be monitored; when their depiction of business is unfair or inaccurate, strong complaints should be registered. In the political arena, and through the courts, businessmen should follow the activist example of their foes: Get in the act!

It is a disservice to Powell thus to condense his memorandum. The paper is a superlative piece of advice to businessmen, and ought to be read in full—read and taken to heart. This was the work of Private Citizen Powell back in Richmond, but Mr. Justice Powell is not likely to write any better opinions on the Court.

Dear Mr. President,

The attached is for your information.

I believe this is well worth following up with some of your friends in the business world, and if there is anything I can do to help, please let me know.

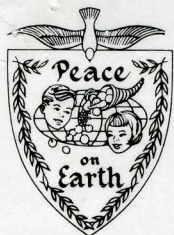

My prayers continue to be with you and your loved ones for your special intentions and continued Divine Guidance.

Respectfully,

Dear Mr. Mott,

You may remember that we met in the fall of 1969 when I visited Flint and toured your children's medical center. It was my great privilege and pleasure to meet you, Mr. Mott, and to see first-hand the great work you and your associates are doing for humanity!

I have thought of you often and have prayed for your continued good works. Now I am writing because the enclosed Xerox copy of a newspaper column by Mr. James Kilpatrick brought you very prominently to my mind.

After you have read this article, I believe you will understand what this letter is about for I feel that somehow, some way, large American corporations must band together to counteract the economic and corporate destruction by anti-business persons and foundations, as mentioned in Mr. Kilpatrick's article.

It is time influential American businessmen formed a protective alliance to expose and eliminate such ruinous activities by the wrong kind of foundations and university pseudo-intellectuals! Only then will we see a sound, healthy, economic and academic base for progress in our country.

I agree with Justice Powell that the first essential is for large companies to appoint "vice presidents for survival" to offset these antagonists and destructive sources, and present such power themselves that their enemies can gain no further footholds.

Mr. Mott

I believe you are the one to start this movement in our country, Mr. Mott, and I will help you in every way I can. It is, in my opinion, a most serious situation -- undermining the very life of corporate enterprise, and should be dealt with swiftly and effectively. Only someone like yourself can give the needed impetus ... so, please?

My prayers will be with you for your special intentions and continued Divine Guidance always, Mr. Mott.

Dear Rose Mary,

Enclosed is a copy of a letter from Mr. H. L. Hunt which undoubtedly you have already seen.

Mr. Hunt sat next to me at a luncheon in Dallas last Wednesday -- over and over he told me how thrilled he had been with the telegram President and Mrs. Nixon sent him! Mr. Hunt was carrying several copies of the telegram with him, and showed them to me with great pride.

Besides assuring him that his support of President Nixon was appreciated, I was also fortunate enough to persuade him that Mr. Kissinger deserves his admiration and support. Mr. Hunt admitted that he, "likes Mr. Kissinger now," so you have a strong ally in your corner.

Mr. Hunt has sent out letters galore to people all over the country urging people to re-elect President Nixon, and stating unequivocally he is personally supporting the re-election of the President.

Just wanted you to have this first-hand "report". My prayers are always with you for your special intentions, Rose Mary; more than ever my prayers are with you today!

Bless you,

With love

P.S. Incidentally, should you need a few days' rest after the rigors of the past few months, Mr. Hunt has a nice health spa in Indian Hot Springs near El Paso; if you would like to visit there, just say the word and I will arrange an invitation for you to be Mr. Hunt's personal guest. All it would cost you would be plane fare. I have not been there, but some of my friends have and they say it is a wonderful hideaway, and a most refreshing place.

The Honorable Richard M. Nixon
President of the United States
White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear President Nixon:

October 3, 1972, I wrote a letter, to many Republicans whom I considered to be of good stature, forecasting that "apparently Nixon will win with more than 60% of the vote for President in the November General Election." I also wrote many Republicans that they should not permit the Republicans to assume the role that they were going to become a minor party. I also wrote Republicans that they should show they were proud to be considered Republicans, as the Republicans were right regarding the abolition of slavery and favored a sound protective import tariff.

I have considered it poor policy that the President of the United States should appear to approve of Kissinger.

Jeane Dixon was in Dallas today and spoke at a luncheon. I became well acquainted with her several years ago when I spent several months in Washington attempting to and saving the electoral college system. I am very happy that I made this move as many Republicans were willing to come out for the election of President by popular vote.

I thank you for your telegram of November 1, however, I don't think you should ask your friends to just vote but should ask them to vote and campaign for you. I think it is highly important that you not only win, but that you win with a large majority.

With best wishes,

Constructively,

I LIKE to speak of freedom. And as I constantly mention the forces in the world that work to destroy freedom; but to be against these forces is not enough. We must learn more about freedom, and more about our country—why they are worth saving, why none of our lives would be worth living in an enslaved land which had once been called free America.

Love of freedom is the extreme opposite of bitterness or "hate." Love of freedom means that you have the highest respect for your fellow-man and want to give him every possible chance to make good in the world, to do whatever he most wants to do and to live the kind of life he wants to live, so long as he injures no other person. Love of freedom is the most constructive attitude a man can have. That is why the best name for freedom's active friends is not "right-wingers" or "conservatives," but constructives. But if we are to earn the right to call ourselves, and to be called constructives, we must stress what we are for much more than what we are against.

There is a familiar story about a man who never wasted words, and who always used them so that nobody could be quite sure just where he stood on any issue where there was dispute. One day this man was asked his opinion of sin. After thinking a long time and weighing his words carefully, he answered: "Well, I'm agin it."

Nothing is easier than being against sin; but as your clergyman will tell you, nothing is harder than living in righteousness. In the same way, nothing

Apathy, ignorance and blind refusal to think are far greater enemies than any others which confront us. If America can be aroused now it can be saved, for an aroused American people will find out and know how to save their country and their freedom. But an unthinking, uncaring American People can only drift hopelessly along the way to destruction.

In order to save America one must ask and answer: What can I, one person, do? The simplest and best answer is this: You, one person, are part of the great American public. You can become an important part by knowing what you believe and why, and then taking a firm and open stand for it. If you love freedom, say so. If you see dangers to freedom in our present course as a nation, tell people about them. You don't have to be a polished writer or eloquent speaker. Most Americans will listen to any honest and sincere expression of views which are not clouded by anger, bitterness or personal attack. American public opinion still controls the ultimate decisions of our government. If it can be roused for freedom, the battle for freedom can be won.

The future of our country belongs to its young people. This means that it is vitally important to reach our youth with the message and the glorious truths of freedom. Youth, meaning everyone who is young enough to be fresh and versatile, can—when aroused—scatter the fog of apathy which enshrouds us. Who can ignore their open-minded enthusiasm? Unlike adults, youth—when interested—will ask a thousand questions, and we older ones must be very hardhearted indeed or very, very dull if we do not learn many intelligent answers to the questions youth will ask. Fortunately, the truth is always the best answer; and truth is always on the side of freedom.

Should the communists capture youth, the world will probably be ruled by the Reds. The mistaken enemies of freedom have made notable progress in capturing and using youth in Iraq, Pakistan, Korea, Turkey and Cuba where they have ousted strong governments which were pro-Western, regardless of how good or bad these governments were otherwise. These are only a few of the communist victories in which youth has been effectively used as a weapon against the cause of freedom.

Youth need not be described to you. You share their lives. It is for you to study and understand them, to learn how they are being trained, what influences them in favor of freedom and what trends and twisting of ideas pull them away from you and away from love for their country.

In "managed news" glorifying the United Nations, youth does not read that each of the many little nations, however uncivilized, has a vote in the U. N. General Assembly equal to the vote of the United States.

If we are ever to get rid of the many needless and dangerous restraints on freedom in America today, if we are ever to reverse the present trend toward socialism and slavery and start a new one toward more and more liberty instead of less, youth must play a leading part. Our young people must learn how to plan for liberty instead of for statism. They must be taught to seek opportunity instead of mere security, for themselves and for others. Too often youth today does not understand these issues clearly. They have been improperly taught, or not taught at all about freedom. You—each one of you—can help to make up for this lack and the many errors our young people hear. You can teach our youth that outwitting the enemies of freedom is much more fun than falling in with their plans and being used as their tools. Young people sometimes tend to be rebels. Encourage them to rebel against twisted and false teaching, against freedom's foes who would use youth for their own purposes.

You may be surprised at the response, for the overwhelming majority of American young people have shown that they deserve our confidence and support. With the guidance of informed patriots, they will meet the challenge of the almighty centralized government and they will defend, preserve, and extend throughout the world the blessings of freedom. There is no limit to what youth can do when aroused. Alexander the Great emerged in his teens to start his campaigns to take the known world and died at the age of 33 sighing "for more worlds to conquer." Napoleon became an apparition of force and murder to crush monarchies and republics alike at the age of 26. Castro was a power in anti-American demonstrations in Central and South America at an early age, and now has taken a lesson from the past masters of tyranny by starting a "seven to thirteen year age" movement in Cuba of "rebel pioneers." If the same fervor for freedom is felt by youth that these conquerors felt against it, freedom's victory is certain. Let's not "leave it to George" to save us, even if George is a youngster.

At the present time official speakers for the Communist Party are regularly making the rounds of our colleges and universities where they are welcomed with open arms and supplied with very large audiences. LIFE LINE is making a countermove by gift subscriptions of "Transcripts of the Week" to the most popular students in universities, colleges and preparatory schools and to students in senior high school who make straight "A's". Through these gift subscriptions the brightest youths will learn the talking points for freedom and if you who are here today will contact these bright youths directly or indirectly, you can encourage them to use what they learn from LIFE LINE and other pro-freedom sources. They can address any groups who want to hear them speak. They can write letters to the editor, a forum where facts have far the best of it, and they can convey the freedom message in a good two-way conversation. They will do it too, if they are encouraged by

EDITOR'S NOTE: We are all concerned with preserving our democratic form of government, based on the free enterprise system; we are all aware not only of the obvious threat of Communism to our government but of the threat of defeat by negligence and apathy. The requests of many of you for copies of Mr. H. L. Hunt's address to the Alabama Road Builders' Association at the Annual Luncheon on February 7, indicate your interest—even eagerness—in accepting the challenge presented by this outstanding American, and we are proud to repeat this address here for you.

you and others you can reach to help encourage them.

Now let's look at some of the things each one of us can do, young or old, to advance the cause of freedom. You have all heard the term "ad lib", which means to insert words not contained in a prepared script. Let us think of a new and patriotic adage: "Liberty-Lib." This is an ideal endeavor for the individual. Every man, woman, boy or girl, and especially those who have never made a talk in their life, can prepare themselves to deliver a one-minute, 140-word talk for freedom, which they may make or insert whenever an occasion arises, and prepare themselves to create the occasion if it doesn't arise of its own accord. The Liberty-Lib should be devoted to unusual and striking thoughts and facts which will cause nearly everyone who hears it to repeat a part of it.

A good reason for preparing these one-minute talks is that this will lead to your preparing another minute, and perhaps a series of a few or many minutes devoted to the preservation of freedom. Another reason is that one person may set an example which will cause others to work out Liberty-Libs of their own, until these talks become a practice which teachers, orators and preachers may adopt and interweave into their address pattern.

Friends of freedom should encourage the writing of patriotic letters to the editor. It takes only one person to write a letter to the editor, which is a fine medium for reaching the public accurately with a message. It may be cut, but unlike a newspaper interview, it cannot be misquoted. Freedom needs only to have its story told, and letters to the editor are one of the best ways to do this. Letters for freedom, when published, are preserved for review and analysis a few minutes, a few hours or days later. The printed page endures. The spoken word may soon be misquoted, distorted and forgotten—especially through the efforts of freedom's foes who use these tactics every day.

If you yourself do not wish to write letters to the editor, make it a point to commend others who do; try to persuade your friends who may have a special skill in expressing themselves to write such letters. Even more important, make it a point to commend and encourage patriots and patriotic activity wherever you find it. Sometimes eager friends of freedom feel that they are "lone wolves," cut off from anyone else who thinks as they do. They see through the deceit and falsehood which are being used to destroy freedom, but do not know where to turn to find the truth. The more widely freedom material is circulated, the more likely it is that eventually it will reach even the most isolated "lone wolf" who will then in turn be able to help his newfound friends by passing on the word of what is being done. No American who can read and write is able to escape the constant flood of statist propaganda. Circulation of pro-freedom material needs to be greatly increased if it is to have a reasonable chance to be widely heard. Great gains have been made in the past few years. But much more remains to be done.

You can help to establish Freedom Posts. Subscribe to LIFE LINE "Transcripts of the Week" mailings for 30 weeks, $5.00 for each of your outlets. In this way the personnel at each place of business will become better informed on public affairs and interested in discussing current events with their patrons. Each week they will have 8 pieces, six times the words of my talk, which they can hand to 8 customers who in turn, after reading, can take them to their preacher, doctor or owner of some place where they trade. Transcripts are in speech form, making them more talkable for 1964. I know of personnel who report that patrons have come up to their place of employment to mention some public affairs activities with approval, thus adding to the prestige and patronage of their business. These visits to commend pro-freedom sponsors are highly valuable because they encourage still more sponsorship of freedom programs and publications, and the wider distribution of freedom material. Every patriot should make a visit of this kind whenever he knows of a sponsor who deserves to be commended.

Each establishment receiving transcripts can easily prepare a schedule in large print listing radio stations carrying LIFE LINE which can be heard in that area. Patrons may often come to the place of business which has a Freedom Post bringing others to acquaint them with the time and dial they can tune in to hear a LIFE LINE broadcast.

The distribution of LIFE LINE material has fine advertising value. LIFE LINE, presented on 330 stations by 261 sponsors throughout the nation, is known as a powerful force for the preservation of freedom. By supporting it, and promoting the circulation of its transcripts, you are helping freedom along with increasing sales of your products.

In encouraging and promoting writing and speaking on behalf of freedom, above all do not let yourself be frightened or turned aside by any clamor about the so-called "extreme right" or the "haters."

At the 22nd Congress of the Communist Party in Moscow October, 1961, Khrushchev issued a directive that anti-communists must be wiped out wherever they are found throughout the world. A full-scale campaign against the "extreme right" followed the issuing of Khrushchev's directive. Many prominent leaders of both political parties in the United States put their prestige behind a movement to banish anti-communism, and made out quite a case against love of country by calling it "super-patriotism" and "right-wing." They may have endangered their own lives with this crusade "that a few communists do little harm."

If we are not going to surrender our freedom and the independence of our nation, the public must cease to respond favorably to those who try to make political hay out of attacks on people said to be too far to the "right." Nobody can be tarred with this brush if we let it happen. Is it really possible to be too patriotic? Is it really possible to be too much in favor of freedom? Critics of the "right" should be made to answer these questions. The answers would reveal some very interesting facts about them and their beliefs.

The patriotic American who loves freedom is not ashamed of his beliefs; he is proud of them. He wants to stand up for them. He knows that what he thinks and feels has nothing to do with anything resembling "hate." Perhaps his ideas are unpopular today in some quarters. But they need not stay unpopular. People respect a man who stands firm for his beliefs. If freedom's side can win enough public respect, it can in time become as popular as it is right—as popular as it deserves to be.

Just as he stands firm in defending his own ideas, so the patriotic American will demand that his country stand firm in defending its rights wherever and whenever they are attacked anywhere in the world. He will speak out against the policy which allows American citizens to be seized and mistreated by communists thugs, as recently happened to our diplomats and correspondents in Zanzibar, as per Castro's plan. The patriot will learn the facts about our rights in Panama—we alone built the Panama Canal, paid for it, and operated it; that the Canal Zone belongs to us by ironclad treaty for all time—and about the Castro-communist agitators who stirred up the recent violence in Panama in an attempt to deprive us of our rights. In the face of constant efforts by much of the national media, to mislead and confuse us through managed news, facts like these need to be stated over and over again. Their truth will prevail over all deceit.

This we must always remember: the cause of freedom has one tremendous advantage over the cause of big government and socialism. The ideas of freedom are true and inspiring. They are based on universal, natural right and the laws of God. In any fair, open debate, if well and kindly presented, they are sure to prevail.

Finally, we must look beyond present debates and present crises; we must look to freedom's fair and lasting promise. In being for freedom it is not enough to think just of freedom's survival. We must think always of freedom's victory, resolving to win it. We must first imagine, then work steadfastly toward a government which will confine itself to its proper duties: police, defense, the courts, and the few local services that personal enterprise cannot provide. We had this kind of government through most of our history. This was the kind of government our forefather created, knowing that only by this means could liberty be preserved. We can have this kind of government again, and we shall have it if we want it enough.

Then will come the grand and joyous years of freedom's fulfillment, when every American with an ounce of ambition and a gleam of hope will build and produce and create to the very best of his ability, making a better life not only for himself but for all the rest of us as well. This is not simply a dream; it is freedom's promise which awaits us. If we learn freedom, teach freedom and advance freedom well enough; if we can bring with us the best of the American people—and especially the best of the American young people—in a new crusade for liberty, then the whole future as far as we can see ahead is ours.

Every one of us has heard, over and over again, how much we all have to lose. Let us start thinking about how much we have to win—and then, with confidence and courage, to set about winning it.

Bombs for breakfast

By Jonathan Harsch

Belfast

This reporter's breakfast ended abruptly at 20 to 8 Monday morning.

A bomb had just been parked in the Russell Court Hotel's garage, two floors directly below.

The staff, most of whom have been through several previous bombings at other Belfast hotels, needed no urging. They ran, and shouted warning to me. The seven other guests were notified.

It seemed impossible. The closed-circuit television camera was still steadily scanning the front driveway — where the truck loaded with a four- to five-hundred-pound bomb had passed moments before — but there was no alarm bell, no sign of police or Army. Yet I accepted the cook's advice and ran with them.

The next step was to bang on the doors of nearby houses and start evacuating hundreds of sleepy people — who again needed no urging.

Picture windows shattered

Forty-five minutes after the terrorists had given one hour's warning, the bomb went off, devastating the hotel and rocking a large area of central Belfast.

Once Army experts agreed there was no danger of another blast, cleaning up began, as shards of glass rained down musically from the 10 floors of shattered picture windows.

The closed-circuit television camera continued to pan back and forth regularly across

Peking

The rising-sun flag of Japan fluttered over China again Monday morning as Chinese leaders received Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka. He is in China to negotiate a fresh start in relations between the two countries after nearly a century of hostility and war.

Just over 27 years after it was hauled down to mark the Japanese surrender ending World War II, the flag was hoisted again at Peking Airport to fly alongside the five-starred banner of China.

Awaiting Mr. Tanaka's touchdown at 11:30 a.m. local time were Premier Chou En-lai and the same cool, correct welcoming ceremonies that greeted President Nixon, the last foreign leader to visit Peking from a country that does not recognize China.

Ex-guerrilla, ex-conscript

The handshake with which the two leaders began their meeting was an almost perfect symbol of the rapprochement they have fashioned. Mr. Chou, the hardened veteran of Communist guerrilla fighting against the Japanese occupation forces, and Mr. Tanaka, the conscript who last saw China

Standing side by side beneath the gaze of an enormous portrait of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, the two leaders heard the national anthems of their countries played by the band of the People's Liberation Army before inspecting a guard of honor of units from the land, air, and sea arms of the Chinese forces.

No welcoming crowds

In line with the protocol established for the Nixon visit, there were no welcoming crowds at the airport, nor any mass salute to the Japanese leader on the 22-mile drive from the airport to the state guest house in the western suburbs of the city.

(Shortly after Mr. Tanaka's arrival he drove from the guest house to the Great Hall of the People for almost three hours of talks with Premier Chou.

At a 45-minute preliminary protocol session, the Japanese announced they were giving China 1,000 cherry trees and 1,000 pine trees, for which Mr. Chou thanked Mr.

Tanaka. This was followed by two hours of talks on Sino-Japanese relations.

(Later, at a banquet in honor of Mr. Tanaka, the Chinese Premier said, "Normalization of relations is the common desire of the Chinese and Japanese peoples, and it is high time to carry out this historic mission."

War apology given

(Mr. Tanaka responded with a speech in which he said: "I hereby express our profound self-reflection for having imposed great trouble on the Chinese people during the regrettably unfortunate period of relations between our two countries.

("I must frankly admit that even after the end of the [Second World] War an unnatural state has continued between two countries. We cannot remain in this dark dead corner forever."

(Mr. Tanaka said it was necessary for the leaders of the two nations to normalize their relations.)

The establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries, which seemed a distant objective only three months ago, now is virtually certain as a result of a hastily

disaffected Democrat

By Jack Waugh

Chicago

Vito Marzullo said after he had been voted out of the Democratic National Convention with 58 other Chicago delegates, that only "the Lord and Mayor Richard Daley" could now activate him for George McGovern.

He was exaggerating. Neither, apparently could.

When they were passing out the let's-forgive-McGovern awards, Alderman Marzullo was out to lunch — eating nails.

It has always been believed that the Marzullo who would vote Republican hasn't been born yet. And one reporter, visiting Alderman Marzullo's office in Chicago's 25th Ward said his walls were "covered with pictures of Mayor Richard J. Daley, various popes of the Roman Catholic Church and several United States presidents, senators and congressmen. All the men in the pictures, except the popes, were members of the Democratic Party."

But in 1972, Vito Marzullo, who for all these years has believed that Republicans, unicorns, centaurs, and satyrs were extinct, is voting for Richard M. Nixon. And he would vote for William McKinley if he was running against George McGovern. Robert Taft would have his vote. Barry Goldwater? Sure, just point Vito Marzullo toward the voting lever.

Perfect example

Alderman Marzullo is the perfect case of this year's disaffected traditional Democrat. What makes it worse for Senator McGovern is that Alderman Marzullo also is the perfect case of the Chicago ward boss who controls 23,000 other votes and 400 jobs. When he growls, "It's my ward. I am the people. They all think like me," he isn't generalizing.

He has lived in Chicago's 25th ward on the southwest side since he migrated there from Italy in 1910, when he was only 12½ years old. Eighteen times since adulthood he has run for various offices in his ward, which is a melting pot: 30 percent Polish, 25 percent black, 8 percent Spanish, and the remainder a splattering of "you name it, I got it." Only once in those 18 times in half a century has anybody even bothered to run against him. The person who did lost 15 to 1.

His speaking style is contemporary sledge. He is reported to have said, as Senator McGovern was beginning to show signs of actually winning the nomination: "I been here since 1920. For all that time now I been seeing these do-gooder boobs come and go, and I'm still here. They come up overnight and they think they're gonna take over the machine."

They're not welcome

"Hah," he added just the other day, "Let those johnny-come-latelys, those floaters, come into my ward and try to brainwash my people. Why they'll be thrown out of 99 homes in 100. When I get through with 'em they won't know what hit 'em."

Alderman Marzullo didn't get to the top in Chicago politics reading Emily Post. He thinks compromise — on the McGovern issue at least — ends at the Missouri line. His model for dealing with the Democratic presidential nominee is early Cesar Borgia.

He couldn't believe it when the Democratic convention at Miami Beach seated the Illinois challenging delegation headed by Chicago black leader Jesse Jackson. Alderman Marzullo now looks on it as the great Northern Illinois Delegate Raid and thinks Mr. Jackson's middle name is James.

"It's a disgrace to America," fumes Alderman Marzullo. "We had 59 delegates including the mayor, elected — some of them by 45,000 to 60,000 votes. And they were thrown out to in let 59 pretenders who only got 100, or 200, or 1,000 votes."

Delegates duly elected

The delegates at the convention voted to unseat the Daley delegation, even though it was duly elected, because it looked suspiciously like a Chicago ward heelers' meeting instead of a delegation contoured after the new party reforms.

Like many disaffected Democrats this year Alderman Marzullo isn't deserting the whole ticket. And he says he won't be gone long. He expects four years from now to be able to vote Democratic for president again — and for governor (he also believes Illinois Democratic gubernatorial candidate Dan Walker's picture ought to be tacked up in the post office).

But for this year he says: "Me and my official family don't believe in the McGovern policies. Those kooks couldn't even be elected street cleaners in Chicago."

Children To Children

The children of today will be the citizens of tomorrow. Therefore they must be given every opportunity to develop to their full potential if the world is to know peace and harmony.

On the basis of this truth, Jeane Dixon established a charitable non-profit foundation and called it Children to Children, which pledges itself to:

HELP CHILDREN discover the wonder of God and grow spiritually in the religion of their choice, giving them FAITH.

HELP CHILDREN by endeavoring to cure many of the ills and diseases that afflict them, so their minds and bodies may grow strong and healthy.

HELP CHILDREN help themselves to find their talents and develop them as they develop their minds and bodies so that, as they mature, they may lead fruitful lives and contribute to the lives of others.

HELP CHILDREN know the true meaning of the word LOVE, as God has commanded. Through love and understanding, we learn to live in harmony with God's plan for this universe of man.

Children to Children urgently needs your help. Pennies, dollars, stocks, bonds, estates — we gratefully welcome all contributions. Write today!

"The children of the world need help"

Dear Friend,

The lifelong dreams of so many of us for a charitable foundation to help children has at long last become a reality.

Our Foundation was created to help children of all nations help themselves. We want to help sustain, encourage and make everlasting the natural feeling of friendship with which children are born. Knowledge of the customs and beliefs of others can grow into a mutual respect and understanding that will make coming generations better prepared to keep peace in the world. "As the twig is bent so the tree shall grow." Strong bodies and healthy minds are the basic foundations on which friendly understandings are built.

Building the Medical Center and realizing all of our other objectives is a big job — we will need the help and encouragement of all to fully accomplish this mission.

Will you join me by making a positive contribution for the ultimate good of all mankind. Every donation will be another step forward. Our program is for you . . . it will succeed because you share — and care. Please let me hear from you.

Bless you,

Jeane Dixon

Will come in just the way I thought.
I leave my prayers with Him alone,

The Jeane Dixon Medical Center

Born of a vision experienced by Jeane Dixon many years ago . . . the Medical Center is now the enthusiastic work of Children to Children, Inc.

The plan calls for the most advanced Children's Research Medical Center in the world.

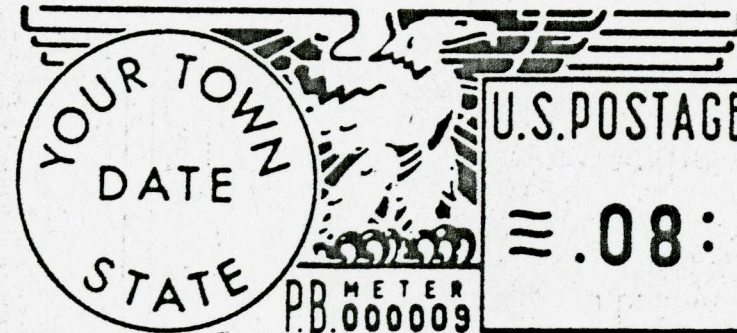

Hospital of the Future

The Jeane Dixon Medical Center will contain the most advanced and sophisticated laboratory facilities available to man, including computerized research systems. Thousands of pertinent documents and voluminous data are being collected. New discoveries will be indexed and recorded. Data processing facilities will place an unlimited wealth of information into the hands of medical research. At first, children's diseases will be of primary concern, but gradually the scope of operations will expand to include everyone.

◀ Artist's Sketch

The dome shaped construction, shown in the center, will contain a magnificent all-faiths chapel. The exterior will be covered with stained glass, crowned with a soaring spire, tipped by an eternal flame.

READ ANY GOOD POSTMARKS LATELY?

By Henry Mitchell

The Postal Service, which gives us our mail in due season, also authorizes a grand variety of slogans which get stamped beside the cancellation mark on the envelope.

A survey of wastebaskets will usually produce nothing more exciting, perhaps, than "Buy Savings Bonds" or "Mail Early for Christmas" or "The Washington Post Delivers the Most."

"But people so rarely understand the possibilities," the leading manufacturer of plates for these slogans said recently.

The message need be neither obvious nor trite. It certainly does not have to rhyme. Actual examples showing considerable imagination certainly include: "Fall in Love With Beautiful Kansas City."

Another (real) one that must have brightened somebody's day is "Pickles Are Better Than Pot," which introduces elements of social policy and controversy. And note that the (also real) message, "Only Love Beats Milk," introduces a spiritual dimension as well as a plug for the milk industry. "Tires Safe? Check Now"—surely that is useful to think about, and Occupants who prefer less drama in their ads might like "Ride Safely on New Tires."

But these of course are pretty commercial.

The English have a strong sense of the past. A letter from the coastal city of Hastings bears the message, "Hastings—Popular With Visitors Since 1066." This illustrates not only a silver-lining approach to history, but also illustrates the influence of the Normans on English literature, since no Anglo-Saxon would ever have written it.

See POSTMARKS, L3, Col. 1

Messages From the Meters—Re

There are reins and bridles, however, for those who write messages to go on envelopes.

Messages may not be obscene, libelous or grossly false beyond ordinary business practice.

Occupant receiving a letter with the message "Jones Tires Are Best" might ask what right the Postal Service

"Another (real) one that must have brightened somebody's day is 'Pickles Are Better Than Pot'"

ice has to promote that brand. Occupant is especially likely to ask this if he is president of "Brown Tire Corp."

The answer is simple—the Postal Service does not promote any brand or allow any commercial message to be printed on any piece of mail it processes. What it does allow a business to rent a postage meter machine and promote (within limits) its own business with a slogan.

Every message printed on an envelope is put there either by the Postal Service itself or by a meter machine in private hands, and there are rules governing the messages in both cases.

If it's a Postal Service message, it will either be a promotion for some government bureau (Buy Savings Bonds was a typical example) or a local Postal Service message of community-wide interest tied to a specific event. The most typical example of that is Bush-town Centennial, June 5. The English message from Hastings would not be permitted, incidentally, because it is not tied to a specific event of the current year lasting no longer than six months.

Other fairly non-controversial slogans are allowed, like "Keep Oregon Green" or "April Is Red Cross Month."

These Postal Service messages just appear on the envelope cold turkey, as it were, no explanation or attribution.

All other messages are printed by meters, and all of them bear the meter number. Virtually all of them are prefixed with the letters P. B. for Pitney-Bowes, Inc., which handles more than 90 per cent of the meters, the Postal Service says.

There are further refinements even in meter mail—some messages such as "Milk Is Nature's Food" are institutional and not inflammatory, and such messages bear only the P. B. letters and the meter number.

But controversy is allowed provided the message is labeled, at the bottom in small type, Advertisers Message or Mailers Message. Politics is off-limits, and so are political slogans, however carefully disguised.

At the Postal Service the man in charge of passing on messages is Frederick W. Ganley Jr. It is almost the least of his headaches since the government guidelines are not only clear but printed and therefore unarguable. The usual reasons for turning down a proposed message is that it's political or commercial or not tied to an event or not received in time—the Postal Service requires 90 days' notice before the date the message is first used in a post office.

Ganley says there is no rule against humor, but by the time the message is tied to an event of community-wide interest there's not much space left for wit. Ganley is sorry he cannot cite some marvelous bloopers that got past, but says the Postal Service keeps no file on them and he knows of none. Once, another postal official recalled, a seemingly innocent message did get printed—he can't remember just what it was, but it came to be identified with right-wing politics.

"I had never heard of outfits like the John Birch Society—it was years ago—," he said, "and the slogan sounded general and innocent. But it sure hit the fan."

Metered mail, processed outside post offices usually by business firms (though private individuals can also rent postage meters and make up their own messages for the ad plate) is allowed for several reasons. For one thing, it means the Postal Service doesn't have to process it.

This past year, according to Pitney-Bowes spokesman Thomas F. McGarry of Stamford, Conn., there were half a million meters being used. These accounted for 33 billion pieces of mail and $3 billion in postage paid to the government. The savings to the government in not having to process this mail came to slightly more than a quarter-billion dollars, Pitney-Bowes says.

McGarry is the ultimate authority for acceptable messages printed for the P.B. meters, and there is almost never a case that baffles him. Politics is out, in metered mail as well as Postal Service mail, but the Hastings slogan would be perfectly acceptable.

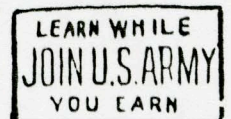

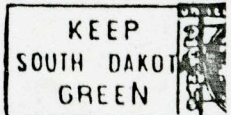

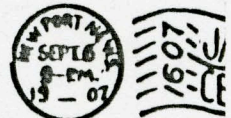

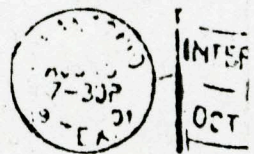

Once he got an application for the message "We Love Pitney-Bowes." Thinking it prudent to see who was loving them and why, P. B. investigated and found it was a graphics company that quite simply loved Pitney-Bowes. It's a free country isn't it? The message was approved, McGarry said.

It is not generally known that there are 421,800 American businesses that mail as few at two letters a day. These are not the giants of industry and they are not prime targets of meter-mail salesmen, yet the (business) heart leaps up at the thought of their potential ad-plate messages.

"These Postal Service messages just appear on the envelope cold turkey, as it were."

And there is no reason, McGarry confirmed, why a private citizen could not rent a meter and get an ad plate ($15.50 is all it costs) saying "— (your name) Is A Splendid Guy." Of course it would have to say in small print "Mailers Message." Even so. And if anybody didn't like it, well tough. It's a free country, isn't it?

Dear Mr. President,

No one better than I realizes the awesome burdens you now carry, and the demanding schedule to which you must adhere ... but most sincerely I wish you would take a little time to read the enclosed article from Pageant Magazine.

It is a reprint of one of the chapters in my new book, "The Call To Glory" and is entitled: "Jeane Dixon's Surprising Story -- How Jesus Tried To Liberate Women."

My reason for asking is that I see it is most important in the coming Presidential elections that you follow this example. The women's vote will prove terribly important to you in this upcoming election, Mr. President. Indeed, it will be so important that I believe this segment of your campaign should be given top (or almost top) priority.

More reasons, the pattern, the approach and plan of action are clearly outlined in the above-referred to chapter. More, in my opinion, I believe that a good ten million deciding votes are at stake ... all there for the taking by the right candidate with the right plan of action.

Not that anyone would want you to be a "copy-cat", Sir; but you have undoubtedly noted already that whenever a Kennedy campaign is lagging, they call on the women of the Kennedy family -- the matriarchal mother, the attention-getting sisters and sisters-in-law. So I say, let's us Republicans get busy and get our women involved in the election campaigns, too.

There is a lady by the name of 'Gene Burke' (Mrs. Jerry Albright) who would be wonderful to head a drive like this for the women's vote. I do not know the lady and she does not know me, but I know of her because I saw her on television recently. She is head of the United States Passport Agency bureau in Los Angeles. I feel magnificent, loyal vibrations emanating from her, and know that she would be very, very good for such a position.

I most respectfully ask your kind consideration of the merits of the above suggestions, Mr. President, believing them to be vital to your successful re-election.

Looking forward to seeing you and Mrs. Nixon this evening, and with prayers for your continued Divine Guidance in all things,

Respectfully

Teane Dixon

encl.

P. S. Somehow, some way, I get that you may already know this lady, Mr. President.

Dear Mrs Dixon,

This is just a hurried note to ask you to comment on the enclosed newspaper cutting from Rhodesia Herald. I appreciate that you are a very busy person; but never-the-less I pray you will find time to drop me a line and give me your opinion.

Three weeks ago I mailed you a Rhodesian Desk Calendar for 1973 and hope you receive it before Christmas. It is about 2" thick so hope they do not look upon it as a possible letter-bomb; so I put my name and address on it as sender to avoid delay in post.

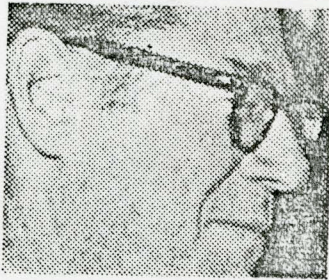

I take this opportunity of wishing you and Mr James Dixon a Merry Christmas and may 1973 bring you and America peace and prosperity.

Yours very sincerely,

U.S. may recognize Rhodesia says adviser

MR. CLARK MacGREGOR

THE UNITED STATES may recognize Rhodesia soon, Mr. Clark MacGregor, introduced as a White House adviser to President Nixon, said on television in Salisbury last night. The present situation was "unnatural" and unpopular with Americans.

Asked about possible recognition of Rhodesia, he said: "In a free society such as ours, unnatural situations which are unpopular tend to be subject to change," Iana reports.

"So I am sure change will come—change will come for the better. I can't predict how or when, but I rather expect it will be sooner than most people realize."

Although Americans originally felt that sanctions were justified, the lifting of the embargo on chrome and other minerals was a popular move.

The United States was not concerned about whether Rhodesia had a black or white Government, but was concerned about equality of opportunity in education, business and jobs.

AFRICA POLICY

● The United States no longer viewed Africa as a cold war arena and would not compete with the Soviet Union and China in giving aid, the Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, Mr. Clarence Ferguson, said in Nairobi yesterday, Iana-Reuter reports.

It was not true that there was any less interest in the countries themselves. But the United States had indicated that it was giving up any kind of cold war contest in Africa, contrary to policy during the Kennedy Presidency.

This was a more mature view. The day of "triangular shopping" in which an African capital might approach Washington and Moscow — did not apply as far as the United States was concerned, he said.

Racism by degree

Seeress Jeane Dixon, renowned for profound insight, warned viewers of a network TV show last week that massive civil disorder is imminent in this country unless an ugly polarization process that has gripped the nation is reversed.

Miss Dixon was referring to the insistence of many self-styled champions of minority groups that we evaluate social and employment opportunities solely on a racial, ethnic, or sex-related basis.

She said that the nation is being split apart by people who consider themselves members of certain minority factions rather than as Americans.

Columnist William Raspberry, himself a black, cited a good example of Miss Dixon's prediction last week in The Republic. He told of rough treatment and obscene insults accorded white middle-class passengers by blacks on public buses in the nation's capital.

Such racism has been fostered by liberals, who for the past decade have repeated over and over that minorities lack equal rights and opportunities throughout the U.S. because the majority of white citizens refused to allow them.

And it has been fostered by the federal government, which as the result of congressional civil rights legislation, now requires government agencies and businesses everywhere to categorize people according to racial, ethnic, or sex-related designations to demonstrate nondiscrimination.

Despite laws requiring employers not to include racial and ethnic designations on employment applications, businesses with 100 or more employees must periodically submit to the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission data forms reporting the number of people employed, broken down into skill categories.

And the forms further require employers to designate (as the result of "visual surveys") how many blacks, Orientals, Indians, Spanish-surnamed Americans, and women are employed and in what capacity.

This quota syndrome—the inevitable result of civil rights legislation and its enforcement—has had a significantly deleterious effect. Reverse discrimination against well-qualified whites has become widespread.

The American Jewish Committee has in fact prompted a federal investigation into charges that qualified Jewish applicants for faculty positions throughout the country are being turned down so that colleges and universities can satisfy federal agencies by hiring less qualified minority applicants.

This entire emphasis on race and sex, instead of ability, can only exacerbate an already serious and potentially explosive factionalism throughout the nation. Resentment is building among normally law-abiding citizens, who believe in opportunity based upon straight forward competition and merit.

It is about time that less attention is paid to the color of a man's skin and his ancestry, or what discrimination, however, unfortunate, was visited upon minorities by past generations of Americans.

The clear implication was that there would at least be a resumption of trade relations between the two countries, and possibly diplomatic recognition.

In certain quarters here, this was considered rank heresy. It is an article of faith in the Liberal Establishment that Rhodesia must be ground into the dirt.

It is one of the ironies of our times that those who scream loudest against the lack of "democracy" in Rhodesia are eternally admonishing us to be nicer to those sterling democrats in Moscow and Peking.

But, to put it vulgarly, they are spitting into the wind.

With every passing day, there is increasing official sentiment in favor of normal relations between the United States and Rhodesia. Except for the State Department ideologues, who scratch whenever the U.N. itches, much of the Washington officialdom is aware that the U.N.-imposed boycott of Rhodesia is hurting this country.

And among those not bound by government restraints, there is a realization that what goes on in Rhodesia, good or bad, is none of our business.

Rhodesia is a peaceful and orderly country, working out its destiny in its own way. Its people are friendly to the United States and its economy grows sounder with the passage of time.

It produces raw materials which the United States needs. The U.S. would be, under normal circumstances, a good customer.

Rhodesia produces chrome, which is a strategic necessity of the United States. When the U.N.'s politically motivated boycott was voted, it had the righteous blessings of the Soviet Union.

The Soviets, however, never adverse to making a fast buck, imported Rhodesian chrome in violation of the boycott and then sold their inferior metal to the United States at scalper's prices.

Needed: One roadblock

The roadbuilders want to prevail, despite the praiseworthy order in October by U.S. District Court Judge William P. Copple halting a short federal road project in the Mormon Lake area.

The Federal Highway Administration is preparing a statement for court use to uphold construction of the 3½-mile segment, declaring that all reasonable and prudent alternatives had been studied before the decision was made to go ahead on work in the recreation area.

There are already two roads, one on each side of the lake, either of which could be widened and improved to meet all the needs of motorists.

But officials seem determined to force construction of a $1 million high speed rural feeder route that would save drivers only about a minute of travel time.

The costs are far greater than merely the $1 million.

Why should the bulldozers have gone crashing through the forest, against local residents' wishes, to carve out a route nearly parallel to one of the existing roads?

Although this scar is on the land, it needn't remain. It needn't be perpetuated in pavement.

Obviously ecological extremists can cause much damage by trying to forbid construction of anything new in America — no new power plants, no new highways, no new suburbs and then no surviving Americans.

But one needn't be an extremist to wonder why the Mormon Lake project can't be called to a halt, once and for all.

Shouldn't we be out everybody

Dear Jeane ^{Full} Duff

I am sure this letter finds you busy at your work, supporting America and that excellent human being, the President. I am writing this to you because I want to seek your assistance in helping America in a very unique way — win India and the third world permanently over to America and American values and ideals. As you know I have always supported our President (as indeed you have — attached is an award given to me by the Re-election Committee) and, in the Holy Name of God, I am asking, begging you to help me in this unique venture:

Probably the most unique contribution that our President could make to America and the world is to win over the Third World countries. Many of these countries believe in the same ideals as we do, but are under constant, direct and indirect, Soviet pressure and the pressure of national pride to perpetuate their "distance" from America. As you know I can very easily bring America and India together. I know both countries well. I know the top political and civil service leaders in India, I know the history, economy and people of India, I know Hindi (the national language) and other regional languages. Above all — and this is the key element — I come from a small community which is deeply loved and respected in India — and even in Pakistan, Bangladesh, Iran and Afghanistan. My community originally migrated from Iran to India about 1,000 years ago and is well-known and respected in that entire region for honesty, service and sacrifice. Jeane, could you please assist me to convince the President that at this historical juncture in America's destiny, I am the ONLY person who should be sent as AMBASSADOR TO INDIA. Please note that only a deeply spiritual sense of mission compels me to put this so frankly and squarely. In our Lord's name, and as you have known me, my appointment as Ambassador to India will within 24 hours win India and generate stability and peace throughout that troubled region which is under heavy and constant Soviet pressure. My appointment will also win over the Third World countries. I can bring all the countries which constitute Asia's "under-belly" — from Iran to Burma — to America's side and America's ideals and values. In all of these countries my community is loved and has a reputation for honesty, service and sacrifice — I mention this again because this is a very crucial element namely: the appointment of a person from a community that is known throughout India and the region for spiritual values and hard work. Also, Soviet propaganda has it spread that only the "super-rich" become Ambassadors — and they don't even have to know the names of the Presidents or Prime Ministers of the countries they are assigned to! Since deep prayers and a deep sense of spiritual mission have always inspired my life, I am very humbly requesting you to assist me in this. I am a faithful worker, have always loved America and would like to win the Third World over to America and her values. My appointment as Ambassador would, in one fell swoop, disprove Soviet propaganda and will only prove that "orthodox" honesty, dedication, high moral purpose and service to God are the criteria for selection. Please fix an appointment with our President as soon as possible. If given a chance I will produce results fast. The President has a reputation for being practical — even if it means leaving the beaten path, even if it means standing up to the bureaucracy and their interminable regulations which do not adapt to changing times and innovative approaches. The time has come to send as Ambassador someone who knows India, who can tell America's message to Indian villagers in their language, who can win the confidence of India's new middle-class, who can communicate with India's leaders and address the Indian Parliament in India's national language, and above all someone who will make the American embassy a symbol of vitality, hope and stability in India and indeed throughout the Third World countries. Also, the American embassy staff needs to be oriented in the work ways and attitudes akin to the President's philosophy. Very rapidly I can eliminate Soviet influence which hovers like a dark thundercloud over that depressed region. It will be a dark day for the Soviet embassy when I go to India as Ambassador. Truth and Love of God will prevail.

I do not wish to take your time any more. But knowing of your honest dedication to God and your honest dedication to our President and his destiny, as you say, I feel compelled to ask you to help me in this very spiritual matter. In the present circumstances, I realize that going to India as Ambassador is no bed of roses. But I have handled tough assignments in my career and since it is God's clearly expressed Will I will do a good job. Please Team help me to help America through the President.

Thank you for your indulgence,

Yours affectionately,
Ashby.

P. S. Please go on right ahead with your good work regarding the Children-to-Children Hospital and disregard the devil's propaganda against this noble venture you have undertaken. Truth alone prevails and you have it on your side.

Dear Mr. President,

You may be interested in hearing about my efforts to "convert" another unbeliever to our side ... Congressman John Schmitz has just visited me.

As you may know, he campaigned against you and was defeated. He sought my advice as to where he should go from here, saying the defeat did not bother him as much as his feeling of obligation to the two million constituents who so loyally worked for his election. He said he did not want to be a "sell out", and felt he owed them something. He seemed sincere, so it was not difficult to advise him to make a 180° turn in his life and start supporting our present Administration, pointing out that he also owed his country something.

"If you had been elected president, Mr. Schmitz," I asked him, "what would your 200 million constituents and you want of the American people? Try to visualize yourself in that chair with all those problems facing you. Wouldn't you want all the people of this country to support you and your policies for the good of our nation?" ... That did it!

He admitted he would, so I emphasized your desire to "bring us together again", reminding him that your life upon this earth, Mr. President, is pure destiny ... that you are leader of this country at the precise right time in history that our Lord needs you for the benefit of mankind, urging him to give you his whole hearted support and do his best to persuade others to give you their undivided support also.

During our conversation the Congressman told me he was on the Council of the John Birch Society, and assured me that they were indeed Christians. I told him that whenever and wherever he spoke he must urge them -- and indeed all Societies and peoples -- to unite under your leadership for that is the only way we will achieve national unity and prevent another civil war!

Mr. Schmitz now has the opportunity to show whether or not he has greatness in his soul, and although up to now there have been no tangible results from our little conference, I believe he understands better now and will act as advised. Let us listen and see.

Anyway we have H. L. Hunt with you ... thank you for sending the telegram.

More fervently than ever my prayers are with you now, Mr. President, for your special intentions and continued Divine Protection and Guidance.

A Holy Christmas, and a Peaceful New Year to all of you. Blessings too!

Respectfully,

'MAYBE I WAS WRONG...'

Schmitz Hints He Erred in Attacking Nixon

BY HOWARD SEELYE

Rep. John G. Schmitz admitted Wednesday that he may have been wrong in the way he attacked President Nixon about his trip to mainland China and hinted that he might return to the Republican Party at some time in the future.

Schmitz, who some say lost his seat in Congress largely because of vituperative attacks on Mr. Nixon, switched parties in August and became the presidential nominee of the American Independent Party.

In his first trip to Orange County since the November election, Schmitz taped a 30-minute program for later showing on KOCE-TV (Channel 50), a local educational television station, and spoke at a gathering of newsmen Wednesday night in Santa Ana.

When asked about running for office again, either in Orange County or nationally, Schmitz said he will keep all options open.

In answer to a question posed by a newsmen on the TV program, Schmitz conceded that "maybe I was wrong on the method by which I took on the President" over his trip to China.

Schmitz took up the attack in the summer of 1971 and continued his criticism of Mr. Nixon for nearly a year before losing his congressional seat to County Assessor Andrew Hinshaw in the June primary.

Schmitz conceded that perhaps he should have been less personal in his attacks on the President and attacked the issues instead.

"I took on the President—that's why I lost. Maybe I was too vociferous on the China trip," he said.

In regard to returning to the Republican Party, Schmitz was asked if he had not burned his bridges with the Republican Party when he joined the AIP.

"The Republican Party is obviously the dominant party in American politics," Schmitz replied, and added: "I have the option of rebuilding those bridges."

As for his future, Schmitz said he will return to Santa Ana College on Feb. 1 to resume a history teaching career. He left in 1964 when he was elected to the California Senate.

Schmitz said he will also be on the speaking circuit as a spokesman for the conservative view and already has lined up 18 speeches for the month of January. He said more requests for speeches than he can possibly fill.

Schmitz said, "As titular head of the American Party, I am one of the key conservative leaders in the party, if not the leader, and I have a responsibility to over a million people who voted for me."

When asked if he was satisfied with the results of the 1972 campaign, in which he received about 1.2 million votes in 32 states where he was on the ballot, Schmitz said "I was hoping for about double what I got."

But he declined to accept the idea that he suffered an overwhelming defeat.

"It was somewhere in between," he said. "There was elation and dejection among my supporters."

Schmitz said he will continue to send out a weekly newsletter to about 20,000 people and said he is considering an offer to appear twice weekly on a Southern California TV station as a news commentator.

Dear Friends:

We have been invited to Vienna to participate in an important Austrian-American tribute to the late General George C. Patton, and to Colonel Charles H. Reed, in appreciation of their noble efforts to rescue the magnificent Lippizaners of that city during World War II.

Next February (1973), a special visit to the shores of the beautiful Blue Danube will take place to commemorate these historical events, and we are inviting you to join us.

We will attend a ceremony to dedicate the Memorial ... a marble plaque, donated by Mr. Peter R. Paul of New York City and Vienna, together with the City of Vienna ... a State Opera Ball, hosted by the President of the Republic of Austria, and a number of receptions, dinners, and theatre parties, as well.

We will see Vienna as welcome representatives of our own beloved country.

Your acceptance of our invitation will aid children in Vienna as well as our own work in the Children-to-Children Foundation.

The enclosed program will tell you about the unusual background of this occasion, the colorful pageantry to be displayed, and the important contribution we will all be making on a "People-to-People" basis.

I sincerely hope you will accept this invitation to come with us on this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to visit valiant, magnificent Vienna.

Bless you,

Jeane Dixon
President

BACKGROUND OF “SALUTE” VISIT

This ten day visit represents a first in international amity and enjoyment: A spontaneous and sincere tribute to the late General George C. Patton, Jr., and to Colonel Charles H. Reed by one of Vienna's most distinguished citizens, Mr. Peter R. Paul, now also of New York City, who, like the Viennese people, has never forgotten the last minute rescue of the magnificent Lippizzaners . . . part of the weave of Austrian history for four centuries . . . by the two famous Americans during the period of liberation.

Mr. Paul is joined in this effort by a distinguished group of sponsors . . . Mrs. Jeane Dixon, President and Founder of Children-to-Children, Inc., the Austrian-American Association, and the International Horse Society.

ONCE UPON A TIME . . . So begin many of the fairy tales of old . . .

BUT TODAY . . . Modern travellers board their magic flying carpets and they begin to live real happenings in enchanted cities all over the world!

VIENNA IS ONE OF THESE ENCHANTED CITIES! Its beauty . . . historical treasures . . . its music and elegance . . . the center that drew such artists as Mozart, Hayden, Beethoven, and Strauss . . . the architecturally magnificent Vienna and, especially, its warm people . . . all contribute to its present importance and renewed vitality.

A very special talent for hospitality . . . a blend of natural good manners and the capacity to extend a gracious welcome on the part of its citizens is part of the joy of visiting Wien . . . not to forget its culinary arts and delicacies, famous the world over.

During this incomparable stay, we will have a chance of living “inside” real Vienna and to visit with its people and its hierarchy . . . the Order of St. Martin . . . His Excellency, the President of the Republic of Austria, His Honor, the Mayor of Vienna, and many others.

Splendid events and pageantry have been organized to enrich this “Salute” to two great American heroes . . . men of whom the stuff of legends are made, and to whom a commemorative marble plaque will be unveiled at the Spanish Riding School.

We will travel in beauty and comfort (Swissair & Austrian Air Lines) with a legendary personality to spearhead this significant joint Austrian and American tribute . . . Mrs. Jeane Dixon of Washington, D. C., an extraordinary human being, dedicated to the cause of Children-to-Children and much more . . . the creating of bridges of understanding between human beings on a People-to-People basis.

HIGH POINTS OF VISIT TO VIENNA, AUSTRIA

So as not to start the trip as strangers, a friendly get-together will be held at 7 P.M., Friday, February 23rd, at J.F.K.-International Airport, prior to departure.

DEPARTURE VIA SWISSAIR from Kennedy Airport will be at 9:20 P.M., Friday, February 23rd 1973.

Our day-by-day itinerary is included, herein. And, already confirmed to us by the Austrian authorities and Mr. Peter Paul. Here are the great highlights of this trip.

We will live in one of Vienna's five finest hotels
•THE IMPERIAL •THE AMBASSADOR •THE BRISTOL •THE EUROPA
•THE INTERCONTINENTAL

All breakfasts are included in the tour ticket as are all dinners, including one at the famous Heurigen Gardens.

UNVEILING CEREMONIES OF THE GENERAL PATTON — COLONEL REED MEMORIAL PLAQUE

The unveiling ceremonies will be held at the Spanish Riding School, a four hundred year old national monument building, specially constructed for the select breed of white Lippizzaners by Karl VI, son of Emperor Leopold I. Architect for the Spanish Riding School was the celebrated Fischer Von Erlach, who completed the present building in 1735.

The marble plaque will remind people, forever, of what the late General George C. Patton, Jr., and Colonel Charles H. Reed did by saving the Lippizzaners, a living symbol of Austria's glorious past, and present vital rebirth in the community of nations.

A full performance by these noble horses and their teachers in the special background of the Spanish Riding School will be given for our tour members.

ATTENDANCE AT THE GRAND OPERA STATE BALL

under the auspices of, and with the personal appearance of His Excellency, the President of the Austrian Republic. On March 1, 1973, the Grand Opera State Ball will be held right in the magnificent Opera Theatre, built during the reign of Emperor Franz Joseph I. Our attendance at one of the important opera “evenings” will be included in this exceptional program.

A RECEPTION BY HIS HONOR, THE MAYOR OF WIEN WILL BE HELD AT CITY HALL

RECEPTION BY THE KNIGHTS OF ST. MARTIN

A solemn reception by the Knights of St. Martin is on our schedule.

Every knight is distinguished by past contributions of his family to the history of Austria, and by present accomplishments. This reception will take place at the magnificent Palais Pallfy.

AN EVENING OF VIENNESE MUSICAL OPERETTA

famous for its “genre” and its superb composers.

A GUIDED TOUR OF THE GREAT SCHONBRUNN PALACE

and its exquisite State rooms.

THE VIENNA WOODS

No tour to Vienna would be complete without going through the woods made famous by so many historical events, legends of the past, and by such outstanding composers as Franz Schubert, Johann Strauss, and others of their illustrious company.

SUNDAY SERVICES AT THE CATHEDRAL OF ST. STEPHEN

The cathedral, built in the 13th Century, is a perfect example of gothic art, enriched by the successive art contributions of the centuries. Attendance at services is, of course, optional.

Additional visits and receptions are now being planned by the joint America-Austria Society, the City of Vienna, and Mr. Peter R. Paul, notably at the American Embassy.

Other well-known people will join us on this tour as representatives of the United States of America. Their names will be announced as soon as confirmed.
