MEMORANDUM FOR HARRY FLEMMING

Whatever we do, let's be damn sure that the next vacancy we fill on the Postal Corporation is in conformance with what the President wants. He feels very strongly about this, as we know from his memo and from a conversation I had with him. We simply cannot let this one slip away. Let's plan soon who will replace Curtim.

DRAFT - August 12, 1970

Dear Jim:

The legislation which I signed today to create the U. S. Postal Service is the culmination of a concerted effort on the part of government, the private sector, and very importantly representatives of the postal employees. With respect to the latter, I believe that the creation of the U. S. Postal Service might well have never become a reality without the invaluable leadership that you provided several critical times during the past year. Your actions exemplify the best and most responsible kind of union leadership. The U. S. Postal Service promises to benefit all Americans by assuring a more efficient postal service and greater equity for the men and women who keep our mails moving. It promises the opportunities of open and free collective bargaining for your members -- which I am confident will be carried out with the same integrity and good will which characterizes the historical negotiations between labor and the Federal Government earlier this year.

My congratulations to you and your members for your cooperation and leadership through this important period. You have my best wishes for a most successful convention.

Sincerely,

RMN

Dear Mr. Rademacher:

The legislation to create the U.S. Postal Service now before the Congress is the culmination of a concerted effort in which the members of the National Association of Letter Carriers played a salient and vital part.

It promises to benefit all Americans by assuring a more efficient postal service and greater equity for the men and women who keep our mails moving.

The integrity and goodwill which characterized the negotiations of your members with the Federal Government have earned you the gratitude of countless fellow Americans who rely so much on your jobs.

You have my best wishes for a productive biennial convention, and for the success of all your future programs.

Sincerely,

Mr. James H. Rademacher

MEMORANDUM FOR DWIGHT CHAPIN

Jim Rademacher cannot be present at the post office bill signing as you know. He designated with my approval a letter carrier to represent the National Association of Letter Carriers, whose name is Joseph Kleapach.

He is not an officer of the carriers since all officers are at the convention in Hawaii. He is just a letter carrier of many years of loyal service. I think it is a very nice touch to have just an ordinary carrier in off the streets so to speak. He is arriving here tomorrow. Would you please see that his name is added to the list?

August 7, 1970

MEMORANDUM FOR DWIGHT CHAPIN

Jim Rademacher cannot wait until Tuesday to be present for the bill signing inasmuch as his officer's meeting, which he must preside over, begins Tuesday morning in Hawaii. He was planning to fly all night and stay here for the Monday signing.

Since Jim was the first labor leader to support our position and, in fact, was responsible for breaking the ranks of solid labor opposition and since he was extremely helpful during the strike, I propose that the President tape a brief telephone message to the convention in which he would say that he was sorry that union business prevented Jim from being present but he wants all the members to know that this great reform with all the great benefits to the postal employees would not have been possible without his valuable leadership.

That's all that needs to be said. It will be read to several thousand mail carriers along with a speech by Rademacher on how great the President is. I think this is well worth doing, would make up for Jim not being at the bill signing and would give us a lot of points with the union. It would also help us in cultivating Rademacher, whom I think will be an important force in gaining support for us in 1972 with Federal employees.

Rademacher is back in complete control of his union and will be, I am told, re-elected by acclamation.

MEMORANDUM FOR DWIGHT CHAPIN

SUBJECT: Postal Reform Bill

When the Postal Reform bill is sent to us, you should be aware of the fact that all of the postal unions are having their conventions next week and very few of the postal leaders could be present for the signing. The union leader that we would definitely like to be present is Rademacher. In view of his role in the earliest days, it would be tragic if he were not present. If the signing can be next Monday, we can still have the leaders here (I realize the bill might not be here, however.) If not, we should at least consider putting it off until the week after when the union leaders will be available.

Mr. Charles W. Colson
Special Counsel to the President
The White House
Washington, D. C. 20500

Dear Mr. Colson:

Over the past several months, a colleague and I have been engaged in a comprehensive research project aimed at reconstructing and better understanding the complex forces which shaped the postal reform process. This project is part of a long-term research effort conducted by faculty and graduate students at the Graduate School of Management here at Northwestern. These efforts are aimed at the integration of the talents and knowledge of professional managers and academicians so that both will better understand and thus be able to contribute to the improvement of policy formulation in the public and private sectors.

There exists a consensus among knowledgeable persons that passage of the postal reform legislation represented an historic breakthrough in reform policy processes. I am sure that you will agree that it is most desirable that this achievement be professionally documented and analyzed. The experience and lessons are too important to be left to memories which inevitably become clouded by time and events.

In the conduct of our research we have interviewed Mr. Joseph Califano and the members of Larry O'Brien's "quadriad," and have become quite conversant with the early events which led to establishment of the Presidential Commission on Postal Organization. In addition, we have been granted access to the files of the Kappel Commission and have been in close contact with the staff and Commissioners. We have also been interviewing the union people and other interest groups. On the Congressional side, we have had extensive contact with the staffs of both the Senate and House Post Office Committees. Both the members of Congress and their staffs have been most candid and cooperative.

In addition to the above "outsiders," we have also interviewed key members of the current top management team in the Postal Service. We will be talking with the Postmaster General and his former Deputy, Mr. Klassen, next week. As a result of all these contacts, we feel that we have gained a fairly sophisticated grasp of the myriad of forces which influenced the postal reform process.

Nonetheless, we recognize that our picture is still incomplete. Although we have been briefed by Bill Usery of the Labor Department, and by various union people, on the post-strike happenings, our information concerning your critical role in dealing with the unions before the strike is spotty, at best. Furthermore, because of your somewhat unique position as the link between the Administration and other nonpostal interest groups, we are most anxious to discuss your views on the hopefully more generalizable lessons to be learned from the postal reform experience.

We were in Washington last week and contacted your office, but were advised by your secretary that your hectic schedule precluded arranging a meeting at that time. Although we are keenly aware of the heavy claims on your time, we do feel that it is quite important that we meet with you so as to ensure that we do not proceed with our analysis on the basis of incomplete, inaccurate, or biased information. We will be in Washington next week completing interviews with a number of people and would welcome the opportunity to spend at least half-an-hour with you. This would allow us to ask a few questions which only you can authoritatively answer, and would allow you to provide whatever additional information you feel appropriate to ensure that our study is based on balanced and accurate information.

I will contact your secretary on Friday, April 30, to discuss the details of scheduling a specific appointment for next week, at your convenience.

Sincerely,

Harold E. Dolenga
