MEETING WITH SENATOR DAN QUAYLE (R-INDIANA)

DATE: Friday, October 15, 1982

LOCATION: The Oval Office

TIME: 11:15 a.m. (2 minutes)

FROM: Kenneth M. Duberstein KMD

I. PURPOSE

To respond to a request from Senator Quayle for a photo opportunity with the President to commemorate the signing of the Job Training Partnership Act (S. 2036).

II. BACKGROUND

On Wednesday, October 13, 1982, the President signed into law the Job Training Partnership Act (S. 2036). Senator Quayle was a primary sponsor and major activist behind this legislation. During Congressional consideration of the bill, Senator Quayle participated in several meetings with various Administration officials to work out language which would meet our guidelines. This job training legislation is the only major labor legislation to pass the 97th Congress, and signals the Administration's concern in this time of high unemployment for putting Americans back to work.

Senator Quayle was unable to attend the formal signing ceremony but very much wanted an opportunity to have his picture taken with the President in conjunction with this legislation.

BILL SIGNING CEREMONY FOR H.R. 6267, THE DEPOSITORY
INSTITUTIONS AMENDMENTS OF 1982

DATE: Friday, October 15, 1982

LOCATION: Rose Garden

TIME: 11:00 a.m. (15 minutes)

FROM: Kenneth M. Duberstein K. D.

I. PURPOSE

To sign into law H.R. 6267, the Depository Institutions Amendments of 1982 (thrift assistance bill).

II. BACKGROUND

The conference report on H.R. 6267, commonly referred to as the thrift assistance bill, received strong Administration support. The Conferees basically adopted the Senate bill. The partial capital assistance program for thrifts in the Senate bill was accepted over the net worth guarantee approach in the House bill. This means that the thrift assistance program created by this legislation will be funded from the resources of the Federal depository institution's insurance agencies and not from the U.S. Treasury.

The Conferees also adopted new asset power provisions for thrifts so that Federally-chartered thrifts can maintain their profitability even during future difficult periods for the housing industry. Both commercial banks and savings and loans will be provided with a new deposit instrument which will be directly equivalent to and competitive with many market funds. This new instrument will enhance the consumer's savings and investment options and enable traditional depository institutions to compete more effectively in the marketplace.

Senator Jake Garn was the principal figure in the Senate on this legislation. Congressmen Stanton, Wylie, St. Germain and Annunzio were leading figures in the House. All will attend today's ceremony.

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS FOR MEETING WITH SENATOR DAN QUAYLE (R-INDIANA)

- Welcome Senator Quayle and congratulate him on his successful efforts in getting our Job Training Partnership Act through the Congress.
- Tell Senator Quayle you are sorry that he couldn't attend the formal signing ceremony for this bill on Wednesday. Sign your letter to Senator Quayle and present him with a signing pen and the letter in commemoration of this event and his leadership role in developing this important legislation.
- Remind Senator Quayle that this bill, which relies heavily on private sector involvement, is certainly preferable to the costly, make-work programs of the past, and that in addition to the one million people who will benefit directly from this program, the nation as a whole will be well-served by its success.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: TELEMISSION ON INVESTMENT IN THE CARIBBEAN
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1982

I am pleased to address this unique TELEMISSION program on investing in the Caribbean. The United States has a strong tradition of economic cooperation with our southern neighbors. This Administration has submitted to the Congress a detailed plan to promote the mutual development of our economies. One of our highest goals has been to increase private sector participation in the development process. While government to government assistance has and will continue to be important -- the most effective tools for creating jobs, and a higher standard of living, remain the talent, resources and plain, hard work of the private sector.

Our Administration is committed to assisting private initiatives here and abroad, and to making Government a partner, rather than an enemy of progress. Our aim is to make your job easier, not harder. Programs such as this TELEMISSION are a good investment of Government resources and experience, because they involve you, the business community.

To our Caribbean friends taking part in this broadcast, let me say: our Administration is firmly committed to supporting your efforts to increase employment and generate economic growth through private foreign investment.

To our own business people watching today, let me assure you that we in Washington want to help you find new investment opportunities.

The Overseas Private Investment Corporation, the Agency for International Development, and other agencies and departments of the Federal Government offer comprehensive programs of support for your objectives. I encourage you to make use of those programs and services we offer. Only through the efforts of private business people, like yourselves, can we spur the growth of our economies and the well-being of all our peoples. Economic progress is everybody's business.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: ATLANTIC MONTHLY 125TH ANNIVERSARY
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1982

Greetings to all of you at The Atlantic Monthly Anniversary Dinner in Boston. I'm told that as part of the program tonight several well-known people will read from the works of authors who've appeared in The Atlantic. Julia Child will read from Whittier, Mayor White from Longfellow -- and David Stockman from William Greider.

It sounds like a fun evening and I'm sorry I can't be with you to celebrate it. Mort invited me to come up and read a passage myself. I'd have liked that because it would be a fitting way to acknowledge the magazine's contribution to our cultural history. You know all over this country people are preserving our historic and natural landmarks. Well, The Atlantic Monthly is a cultural landmark. As the oldest privately-owned magazine, it's been publishing for over half the national life of our country. And I believe Mort Zuckerman deserves a public thanks for his preservation of The Atlantic Monthly.

It truly is part of our heritage. I can almost see Oliver Wendell Holmes, that autocrat of the breakfast table, sitting in his study writing one of his essays for The Atlantic. The articles and poems that first appeared in its pages include classics of our literature that every schoolchild knows -- "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Paul Revere's Ride," Robert Frost's "The Road Not Taken."

And the writers who've been published in The Atlantic reflect America herself: Henry David Thoreau, Jack London -- I loved him as a kid -- Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson, Ernest Hemingway, John Updike and on and on. The Atlantic Monthly is an American institution and you know how deeply I believe in those.

And, Mort, let me say I am pleased newsstand and advertising sales are up. I wish David Stockman could do for the Federal deficit what he's done for yours. I know that at some point tonight you will probably offer a toast to The Atlantic, and when that point of the evening comes, I'll be joining you in spirit. So, to The Atlantic Monthly: America is in her pages, history is in her words, and another 125 years is in her future.

Thank you, good evening, and the best to you all.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS CONVENTION
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1982

Greetings to all of you attending the National Association of Realtors convention in San Francisco. You know I heard a story the other day ~~that realtors will appreciate. It was~~ about a family that lived in a little apartment in the city but decided to buy a big house in the country. A friend said to the 12-year-old son, "So, how do you like your new house?" And the boy said, "Oh, we love it. I have my own room. My brother has his own room. My sisters have their own room. But poor Mom, she's still in with Dad."

Unfortunately, not enough families have been buying that house in the country, or the suburbs, or the city, because they simply can't afford it. And, as a result, your association has lost over 150,000 members in the last 22 months. This is a terrible figure and words can't describe how deeply it disturbs me.

But we're doing something about it. Slowly but surely, we're turning this economy around and leading it to a solid, non-inflationary recovery. For the first time since Franklin Roosevelt's administration your Government is committed to a long-term plan to restore the U.S. economy. As an editorial in Financial World magazine said a few weeks ago, "Can you even recall one long-term program, let alone the Nation following any plan for more than a few months?" In the time before I arrived here at the White House, there were five totally-recast economic plans in 4 years, and three of these occurred in 1 year alone. You cannot plan a sound future with that kind of pinball economics, bouncing from problem to problem.

I believe this economy needs stability. It needs stability so that inflation will stay down, so that interest rates will come down even further, so that people will invest, so that more people can get back to work. And, as this happens, one of the results will be that millions of Americans can once again afford to buy homes.

Patience is a very hard virtue to counsel in the face of hardship. I know that, but I also know we are making genuine progress, enduring progress. And what we want is a real recovery -- not one that is simply a mirage on the desert. Previous, quick-fix recoveries led to short respites, followed by higher interest and inflation rates, followed by worse recessions. This recovery is going to stick because it is based on a solid, long-term plan.

But there's one more thing I want to say before I let you go back to the business at hand. Even though this is the worst period for housing since the 1930's, you have not asked for subsidy, but rather for sound economic and fiscal policy. I wish all industries were that foresighted. Without fail, the NAR -- its leadership and members -- has supported our efforts to set this economy right. I want to thank you for your support. Yes, it's meant a great deal to the future of the country, but it has also meant a great deal to me personally. There was an Irish poet who expressed my feelings toward all of you at the convention. He wrote, "Think where man's glory most begins and ends, and say my glory was I had such friends."

Thank you, my friends, and God bless you.

PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: NAVY LEAGUE DINNER
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1982

Thank you, John Rau . . . thank you for your leadership of a very important arm of national defense -- the national Navy League.

And thank you, Admiral Dexter, for these great gatherings each year by the New York chapter of the Navy League.

Congratulations to George Ball for his winning way as skipper of this great dinner for a second year.

Congratulations to Zachary Fisher for a "mission accomplished" -- the Intrepid Sea-Air-Space Museum on the Hudson. Vice President Bush, who was a Navy pilot as a young man himself, has reported to me what a powerful focus for defense awareness the Intrepid is in New York City, the communications center for America and the free world. I understand the museum will house the Hall of Heros, dedicated to those Americans who have worn the Congressional Medal of Honor for gallantry and intrepidity beyond the call of duty.

And good luck tonight to Robert Sarnoff for your launch of the National Science Center for Communications and Electronics. Communications is a key to survival -- and electronics, the product of American brainpower, is a key to the future, as Charles Brown, your industry guest of honor tonight, so well knows.

America has just demonstrated again at the polls -- as we have done through wars and depressions -- the fundamental strength of democracy: the freedom for all Americans to be heard without fear of suppression or reprisal.

As we pursue our program to strengthen our country economically, militarily and morally, America needs, more than ever, the special qualities of leadership exemplified by your guest of honor from the Armed Forces.

I called him "a soldier's soldier" with respect and affection -- the way he is pictured in the cartoon by Bill Mauldin . . . with Willie and Joe in a foxhole on Anzio beachhead, where he won his battlefield commission. I say, with all Americans, I am very glad and grateful that Sgt. John Vessey did "stay in the Army."

Today he is Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, the Marines, and yes, the Coast Guard.

Tex, you forgot the Coast Guard buttons on that fine navy blue blazer you gave me at the dinner last year -- but don't worry, I had them added next to the Marines!

General Vessey, members of the Navy League, and honored guests, I am confident that the challenge we have accepted together -- rebuilding America's defense to protect our peace and freedom -- can and will be met. Thank you for your invaluable support and God bless you all.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1982

It is a real pleasure to take this opportunity to speak with you as you open your biennial board of directors meeting. The Airline Pilots Association, from the barnstorming days of your founding to today's jumbo jet pilots, have been known for your courage, dedication and professional commitment to safety. Your record is one to be proud of. I thank you on behalf of the hundreds of thousands of Americans who trust you every year with their lives.

You and your colleagues in the airline industry have been some of the first to feel the effect of economic difficulties, and have been hurt by the recession we're now working our way out of. As you know, I've been working closely with your President, J.J. O'Donnell, and I want you to know that his input and your support have been a real help in forwarding our recovery program.

With your assistance we've been able to convince the Congress to reduce taxes and hold down the growth of spending -- although not yet to the degree we would like. Our return to principles of fiscal responsibility has begun to lift our economy from the economic swamp created by decades of big spending and big deficits.

America is recovery-bound. Inflation -- which was public enemy number one when I took office -- is down from its 1980 peak of 18 percent to a rate of 5.1 percent so far this year. Interest rates, once as high as 21½ percent, are now 12 percent and we will bring them lower still. The markets are surging. People are investing and saving again. All this means that, soon, our economy will expand again, creating real and lasting jobs, and the prosperity we all have been working for.

Our path is difficult, but what are our choices? Returning to the tax and tax, spend and spend, borrow and borrow policies that got us into this mess is no answer. Double-digit inflation and sky-high, job-wrecking interest rates are no alternative. We must never again mortgage our future and that of our children to pay for the excesses of yesterday.

We've accomplished much in the little more than 1 year and 1 month that our program has been in place. Runaway spending has been checked, taxes have been reduced, inflation has been cut in half, and the crippling interest rates are finally tumbling. Unemployment is still too high, but we are tackling that problem, too.

I am confident that the American people have the strength and vision to hold to our course, applying long-term solutions to long-term problems. With their support, and the help of organizations like ALPA, no obstacle is insurmountable, and no challenge is too great. Together, we will make this country great again.

Thanks, and God bless you.

- Thank you for your support of the South Florida Task Force. It is an outstanding example of cooperation and of our commitment to stop drug trafficking and related crime.
- Congratulations on overcoming the court challenge filed by the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws to spray a cannabis patch with Paraquat. We have called for the responsible use of herbicides as a legitimate means for reducing the supply of marijuana.
- I have always believed that it is important to reduce the supply of drugs, but it is equally important to reduce the demand. Mr. (Henry) Saylor, Carlton Turner has informed me of the efforts of your daughter-in-law, Nancy, on behalf of the Florida Junior League and others in the area of drug abuse education and prevention. Efforts like these are just what it takes.
