PRESIDENTIAL TAPING: NATIONAL VOLUNTEER WEEK
FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1983

Neighbor helping neighbor is truly an American tradition. And April 17th to the 23rd, we are recognizing that tradition through National Volunteer Week. In communities across the country volunteers are being saluted for their selfless giving of talent, time, and love.

We have much to be thankful for in America, but perhaps our most precious assets are the millions of volunteers. This is their week and let's let them know just how much they mean to us. Thank you and God bless you.

Attachment: Remarks

It's a pleasure for me to welcome to the White House today the distinguished representatives of the legal profession who have gathered to witness the signing of the Proclamation designating May 1st as "Law Day U.S.A." For over a quarter of a century, we Americans have set aside this day to commemorate our shared commitment to the principle inscribed over the entrance to the Supreme Court: "Equal Justice Under Law."

The theme of this year's observance is "Sharing in Justice," highlighting the importance of active participation by all citizens in our legal system. Justice Cardozo once wrote: "The process of justice is never finished, but reproduces itself, generation after generation, in ever-changing forms, and today, as in the past, it calls for the bravest and the best." Just as every citizen must have the opportunity to enjoy the legal rights secured by our forebears, so too every citizen must share the responsibility of preserving those rights so that our commitment to justice can be passed on to succeeding generations. That responsibility takes many forms, including voting, jury duty, and serving in local government. As we observe Law Day this year, let us reaffirm the responsibility of Americans from all walks of life to serve justice, so that we can continue to share its blessings.

And now I shall sign the proclamation.
