MEETING WITH EDUCATION LEADERS

DATE: July 19, 1983
LOCATION: Cabinet Room
TIME: 2:00 P.M. (45 minutes)
FROM: Craig L. Fuller

I. PURPOSE

To continue the dialogue with primary and secondary education leaders in an effort to promote Administration education initiatives.

II. BACKGROUND

These groups represent the major interest groups in public primary and secondary education. The National Association of State Boards of Education promotes lay control of education. The National Association of Secondary School Principals seeks the improvement of secondary education through the promotion of high professional standards. The National Association of Elementary School Principals tries to enhance the image of elementary principals as educational leaders. The American Federation of Teachers, with close ties to the AFL-CIO, works to obtain exclusive bargaining rights for members, improve professional standards, improve discipline, toughen curriculum, and require strict teacher competency examinations. While at odds with many Administration proposals, it has promised cooperation in implementing several proposals of the National Commission on Excellence and is open to further discussion on merit pay. The National Education Association, AFT's larger, bitter rival, was invited to attend but as of now has chosen not to participate.

Topics of discussion are: The entire issue of excellence, improving technology, merit pay/master teacher concepts, improvement of elementary school efforts, Federal and State roles in the future, teacher and student testing, discipline, salary increases, and your opinions on the Federal role.

III. PARTICIPANTS

- Secretary Bell
- Ms. Jolly Ann Davidson, President-elect, Phyllis Blaunstein, Executive Director, National Association of State Boards of Education

TALKING POINTS FOR THE MEETING WITH EDUCATION LEADERS

- o Pleased to welcome representatives from the Elementary and Secondary School Principals Association and the Association of State Boards of Education...and of course it is good to welcome back the representatives from the American Federation of Teachers.
- o Regretfully, your colleagues at the NEA have elected not to attend today. (Secretary Bell and Craig Fuller both spoke with Don Cameron, Executive Director, NEA and invited their participation)
- o I want you to know that I am encouraged by the response around the country to the Report from the Commission on Excellence in Education.
- o I would like to spend our time together talking a bit about what your organizations have been able to do and how we might help encourage educators, administrators and school boards advance the recommendations contained in the report at the local level.

POINTS TO MAKE DURING THE MEETING

- o State by state accomplishments are impressive:
 - Master teacher/merit pay concepts are being initiated in Tennessee, Florida and Virginia;
 - higher standards are being imposed in Mississippi, California, Utah and Florida;
 - longer school days are under active consideration in Florida, California and North Carolina
 - the list of states and local school boards that have these education reforms at the top of the agenda is encouraging.

o The Administration's effort is designed to improve the quality of education--we believe and the American people believe in:

- the recommendations of the bipartisan Commission on Excellence in Education
- competency tests for teachers
- teacher pay based on merit (merit pay/master teacher programs as designed by the states)
- incentives to attract bright students into teaching
- emphasis on the basics to prepare our young people for the future.

[NOTE: A briefing paper on state and local actions around the country is attached as is a briefing paper on the latest situation with our math and science legislative initiative.

HIGHLIGHTS OF SIGNIFICANT STATE EFFORTS IN ACHIEVING EXCELLENCE

The following activities represent significant efforts being undertaken by various States which are consistent with the recommendations of the report of the Commission on Excellence.

MASTER TEACHER PROPOSALS

- 1) Tennessee--During this year's legislative session, Governor LaMar Alexander of Tennessee introduced to the Tennessee legislature his well-known Master Teacher proposal along with a related program for master principals and administrators. Largely due to the efforts of the Tennessee Educators' Association (TEA), an affiliate of NEA, the Governor's proposals were defeated during the regular session. The Governor's office, however, has not given up the effort. When the legislature re-convenes next January, the Governor will re-introduce the plan with some changes, hoping that a rising tide of favorable public opinion and a few modifications will make the proposal acceptable to the teachers' union.

Beyond any general pay hikes, Governor Alexander's plan envisions separate career ladders for teachers, ranging from apprentice to Master Teacher, with wide pay differentials between the levels. The evaluation process would involve peer and supervisor review and would allow each teacher the opportunity for an evaluation and a possible step up to a higher level every few years.

- 2) Florida--This year in Florida, the process of determining teacher evaluation standards and methods will begin. By the 1984-85 school year, some Florida teachers will receive higher pay than their peers, based on their respective merit. A bill, signed into law Tuesday (July 12th) by Governor Robert Graham, provides for a two-tiered system, the "Florida Merit Compensation Program." The program calls on each of the State's school districts to develop its own merit plan, which will be reviewed by the newly-formed Florida Quality Instruction Incentives Council and approved by the State's Department of Education. Once approved, these programs will be funded through a central trust fund. The same fund will be used to support the second tier of the program, a State-wide master teacher career ladder. Unified, stringent guidelines will be used throughout the State to determine which teachers may become Associate Master Teachers and Master Teachers, thereby earning a few additional thousand dollars. Their selection will be based on attendance, experience, educational preparation (advanced degrees), and an evaluation by their principal, a fellow teacher, and a non-teaching subject specialist. Appropriations for the $80 million package, which also includes enhancement of math, science, and computer education and the establishment of a longer school day, should be signed into law Monday, July 18th.
- 3) Virginia--For the 1984-86 biennium, Governor Charles Robb has proposed the funding of a Pay-for-Performance pilot program through which grants would be given to local districts to test various approaches to performance-based teacher pay. While details of the $500,000 program remain to be worked out, the Governor has suggested that all local pilot projects would include the following: 1) direct participation of teachers; 2) separate selection procedures for excellent teachers and administrators; and 3) monitoring and full disclosure of results, with a public report to the Governor. In his proposed budget for the upcoming biennium, Governor Robb also recommends an annual 10 percent increase in teacher salaries.

HIGHER STANDARDS/REQUIREMENTS

- 1) Mississippi--This Spring, the State of Mississippi Higher Education Commission established new requirements for admission to the State's universities, effective the Fall of 1987. Under these new requirements, college applicants must complete 13.5 academic units for admission, as follows: four units of English, three of math, three of science, two of social studies, and one and one-half units of a foreign language or other academic subject.
- 2) California--As one part of its major K-12 educational reform proposal currently pending before the California Legislature, the State is proposing to increase high school graduation requirements. Other components of the omnibus proposal include additional incentives for teaching math and science, streamlined procedures for teacher dismissal, funds for textbooks, a 10 percent increase in beginning teacher pay, and extra pay for extra duties ("mentor teachers"). At this time, the program has yet to be adopted, pending resolution of disagreements over the proposed budget to fund the program. State sources estimate that the final education budget will total approximately $800 million; adoption is expected early during the week of July 18 (see below).
- 3) Utah--At the end of 1982, the University of Utah Board of Regents announced the raising of admissions standards for students seeking enrollment is the Fall of 1987. The announcement, which was widely disseminated by the media in full page advertisements, was favorably received by the public. These strengthened standards are expected to result ultimately in the raising of high school graduation requirements around the State.
- 4) Florida--As one part of an $80 million education improvement bill, the enhancement of math, science, and computer education has been authorized in the State of Florida. Governor Robert Graham signed the authorizing bill last Tuesday (July 12), and plans to sign the appropriations bill Monday, July 18th. The bill requires the Florida Commissioner of Education to provide a plan for State-wide educational improvement in the areas of math, science and computer education. It authorizes the Legislature to provide categorical funding to local school districts excelling in these areas to fund the purchase of scientific equipment and computers, to fund various related efforts at planning centers associated with schools throughout the State, to establish teacher scholarship/loan programs, and to fund visiting scholar programs whereby individuals with Ph.D.s will be brought into high schools to teach for one year. The bill also includes provisions for merit pay/master teachers and a longer school day (see below).

- 5) Kentucky--In January, the State Higher Education Council raised requirements for entrance to State institutions, requiring 20 minimum credits (including four of English, two of math, two of science--biology and chemistry). The State Board of Education also adopted a 20 credit minimum for high school graduation, including four in English, three in math, and two in science. In response to concern that stricter minimum requirements could increase the school drop out rate, the State undertook a study of districts which had required the 20 credit minimum for several years. No significant impact on the drop out rate was evident. The new minimum standards have not yet been implemented State-wide, awaiting clearance by the State Legislative Research Committee.
- 6) Iowa--Governor Branstad recently signed into law a program providing grants to local districts totalling $50 for each pupil enrolled in a first year of foreign language instruction and $25 per pupil for enrollment in advanced math or science classes. Additionally, the law provides a State guaranteed student loan program for highly qualified students wishing to enter the teaching profession and a loan program for teachers desiring to upgrade their skills in science and math. This effort is quite consistent with the goal of attracting high quality students into teaching and strengthening the skills of inservice personnel in these critical areas.

LONGER SCHOOL DAY/YEAR

- 1) Florida--On Tuesday July 12, Governor Graham signed into law a bill implementing a new State-wide requirement for a longer school day. The law requires a minimum of seven instructional periods in the school day, and increases the required total hours of instruction per school year from 900 to 1050. The law, which takes effect in the 1984-85 school year, also includes provisions for merit pay/master teacher and the enhancement of math, science and computer education throughout the State. The Governor intends to sign an $80 million appropriations bill on July 18, which will provide funds required for implementing the program.
- 2) California--Included in the State's major educational reform package for grades K-12 is a proposal for lengthening required instructional time. Interestingly, the proposal does not mandate that this be achieved by an increase in the length of the school day or year, but merely mandates that a certain number of additional minutes of instructional time be provided. The proposed increases are as follows: kindergarten--900 additional minutes; grades 1-3--a 25 percent increase or 10,000 additional minutes; and grades 4-12--a 28 percent increase or 12,000 additional minutes. As with other components of this education package, adoption of this proposal is contingent upon adoption of a State budget.
- 3) North Carolina--The State Board of Education has reviewed its first issue paper generated in response to the NCEE report, the topic of which was extension of the school day/year. The Board endorsed a three-year pilot project to test whether increased time in school results in improved student achievement. Two districts begin this pilot effort this month.

LEADERSHIP

A number of States (New Mexico, Utah, New Jersey, and Maryland, to name a few) and local school districts have established their own task forces to determine steps which should be taken to implement the Commission's recommendations. Governors and State legislators are taking a particularly strong role in this process, challenging educators and educational organizations to provide leadership in shaping the excellence agenda.

PARTNERSHIP WITH THE PRIVATE SECTOR

A number of excellent examples exist which illustrate the benefits of strengthening cooperation between public education and the private sector. To name a few:

- 1) The Business Partnership--This Minneapolis-based organization of business and community leaders has made education improvement a major priority, focusing largely on education finance and increased standards.
- 2) The Atlanta Partnership--In operation for five years, this group has promoted the Adopt-A-School Program, linking schools in the district with corporate sponsors. The program has been so successful that practically all schools in the district now have some linkage with the Partnership.
- 3) The California Roundtable--This organization of business leaders has been very active in urging educational reform and in supporting additional tax levies to upgrade educational programs.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: STATE DINNER ENTERTAINMENT
TUESDAY, JULY 19, 1983

What a magnificent performance. Listening to Byron Janis work his magic tonight, I am sure we can all understand why a critic once said of him: "he can take a sound, shape it, breathe life into it and bring an audience to the edge of its seat in anticipation of the next moment." Sir, you are truly a master, and we thank you for beginning with us this fortieth anniversary year of your concert debut. On behalf of grateful audiences whom you have inspired for 40 wonderful years, thank you and "happy anniversary!"
