MEMORANDUM

OFFICE OF THE VICE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON

February 25, 1983

MEMORANDUM TO CRAIG FULLER

FROM: C. Boyden Gray CBG

RE: 504 Handicapped Regulations

Brad Reynolds is determined to publish and hold a series of hearings on proposed changes to the 504 handicapped regulations notwithstanding (1) the potential public backlash from handicap groups, and (2) the likely absence of any public support from any other sector.

It is difficult to assess how much adverse publicity the proposals will generate. Reynolds believes the changes themselves do not justify broad protest, and he is undoubtedly correct as a matter of law. But the handicap groups will use the 504 hearings as a forum for attacking the Administration on a number of related issues over which Reynolds has no control, such as 94-142 (Secretary Bell's controversial handicapped education rules), the Grove City case, "Baby Doe," and OMB Circular A-122. (The 94-142 groups have been sufficiently vocal to stop White House efforts to block-grant 94-142 for two years.)

It is also difficult to predict how little support there will be. But the major, big dollar-saving reforms have already been achieved at the agency level and in court (in transportation and construction), and the proposed changes will not as a practical matter do much more than make the rules more readable and understandable.

Accordingly, while OMB, OPD and OVP approve of the proposals as a matter of law and policy, they all believe that the issues raised by the proposals are predominantly political and that a decision on whether to go forward with the proposals is a political one. (It should be added that unlike most organized minority groups, the handicapped are not predominantly attached to the Democratic party and tend to support Republicans more than Democrats; the pro-life groups are, of course, strong Administration supporters.)

Congressman Michel, who is strongly opposed to the changes, is prepared to call the Attorney General or Reynolds if the White House will not undercut him. Reynolds, on the other hand, says the Attorney General feels strongly enough to see the President on the issue.
