Dear Ms. Blume:

Regarding your letter of April 24, 1984 and Mr. Deaver's inability to meet with us:

Are you saying that President Reagan's PR man is so integral to his everyday functioning that Mr. Deaver cannot slip away for a 45 minute or even half hour interview with the press?

Now there's a story.

Please confirm, or have Mr. Deaver or President Reagan confirm.

Sincerely,

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April 24, 1984

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Blyskal:

Thank you for your recent letter in which you express your interest in interviewing Mr. Deaver.

As you can well imagine, Mr. Deaver has an extremely heavy schedule each day as he assists the President in his official duties. Therefore, many activities that he would like to participate in are difficult to schedule and, unfortunately, your request is one of those situations. I am so sorry that he will be unable to accommodate you at this time.

My best to you in your endeavor with William Morrow & Company.

Sincerely,

Donna Blume

Dear Ms. Blume:

This is to request an interview with Michael Deaver.

We are working on a book about the public relations profession for William Morrow & Co. and would like to talk to Mr. Deaver about the work he does for the White House as well as that which he did for his California public relations firm.

Last December we interviewed David Gerqen, who was very helpful; now we would like to expand our coverage to include Mr. Deaver.

Mr. Michael Deaver

Dear Mr. Deaver:

As an ex-marine I remember the advisory to "take the high ground and win the battle." With respect to our actions in South America, President Reagan is letting his congressional opposition take that position.

They cite their disingenious concern ad nauseum that "our boys not be killed to protect corrupt governments" as reason to oppose the President in his attempt to prevent the "Cubanization" of Nicaragua and its neighbors.

If the President would only "sit down" with the American people via television and tell them exactly what the threat is and why he needs their support to meet it, I believe that certain congressmen would find their fatuous position untenable.

In summary, Mr. Deaver, the President's "weapon of communication" must be used now or the costly use of our weapons of war will surely follow.

Sincerely yours,

Kenneth E. Wyman

Dear Ms. Donna L. Blume:

This is to seek Mr. Deaver's formal recognition as an Adjunct Contributor to Mr. Deaver's Speechwriting ... at no charge, of course.

I am offering Mr. Deaver my complimentary executive speechwriting services because of my admiration for him personally and the Reagan Administration, in general.

I am attaching a recently received letter from Muffy Brandon, as you well know, former Social Secretary to Mrs. Reagan. I very much appreciated Muffy's flattering comments in my regard.

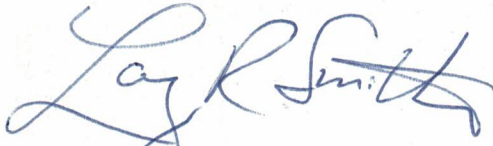

I remain hopeful Mr. Deaver can take advantage of my speechwriting expertise from time to time.

Incidentally, I am on the official freelance speechwriting roster for the Washington, D.C. office of the prestigious global PR firm of Hill and Knowlton, Inc.

Since I would be performing my services for Mr. Deaver strictly on a complimentary basis, I would appreciate a formal declaration by your Office, equivalent to that cited in Paragraph 1, which would be suitable as a Press Release for distribution to the media.

Thank you, Donna.

Cordially,

As you know, I worked very closely with Mr. Jim Rosebush, Chief of Mrs. Reagan's Staff at the White House during the last few years and I am sure that your speechwriting efforts will be greatly appreciated there. I cannot think of a finer lady to write speeches for.

With my very best wishes to you, I remain,

Dear Mike:

Congratulations on your successful trip splendid.

Congratulations also on your much deserved recognition by U.S. News and others for playing such an important role in the President's many successes.

And per our recent conversation, I hope you understand that my efforts are also intended to "communicate" a message -- and while we under-seem to agree that the medium often is the message.

Dear Mr. Deaver,

I am writing this letter to you as a long time supporter of President Reagan and one who worked hard for the President in the 1980 campaign and hope to help in whatever way is possible this year.

You are no doubt flooded with mail, calls, etc but I could not resist passing along something I saw recently and wanted to call it to your attention. You or your staff may already have picked up on this but by chance you haven't - -
- here goes - -

Recently (2-3 weeks) there was a T.V. program (mixed the name) that followed the "Saturday Night Live" theme - spoof on political figures, names in the news, etc. I don't even know which channel it was on or I have Manhattan Cable TV with about 24 channels going. It may not have been a major network and perhaps a syndicated show or special - a show that dealt in "blooper" etc. - but anyway please write me - I'll do the best I can from memory - hope I haven't lost you!

It ~~seems~~ should Walter Mondale replying to a T.V. journalist's question (~~actually~~ actual interview) about use of PAC money. Mondale made his usual rambling response (actually more like Ted Kennedy trying to tell Roger Mudd why he wanted to be President ! ! ? !) and talked as follows :
(~~con~~)

" yes, I'm aware ⁽¹⁾ of the use of PAC money and as you know, I have always stated I did not approve of such and (2) if one will check you will see that it is perfectly legal and appropriate to use and therefore (3) I would have to say that I am not for having it used on my behalf and (4) given all the circumstances one should realize what my position on this matter ~~is~~ and that is how I will handle this matter. " - Mondale was shown answering or rather fielding this question with is face in a box and as each distorted phrase was uttered, words were written in each corner of the box (It was actually a tape of a live interview with Mondale himself) -

4. Now you have my answer

3. IT'S NOT OK

2. IT'S O.K.

1. I'M AGAINST IT

LIVE TALKING

The above is not accurate, only to give you the idea. What was actually said and depicted on the screen was even better (or more damaging to Mondale) but this gives you the idea. It would make a great T.V. commercial during the campaign - like

"Here is Walter Mondale - a man you can count on for a straight answer ??? " and then the commercial on it saw done on the program - the lead in, etc.

Mr. Deaver, with your staff and contacts, I'm sure you can track this down and hopefully get a screening (a tape if not illegal, etc) etc, and observe it as it was presented. It was well done and really made Mondale look comical, un-presidential, unsure of himself and very much like the old political hack he is associated with. I think it might be the best commercial of the campaign and catch attention with it being so humorous and still taking the high road on you and only showing Mondale speaking his own words. — I promise you that if you see this, you will see what I am trying to say.

My best to you and the White House staff and warm regards to President and Mrs. Reagan. They are wonderful people and are great for this country.

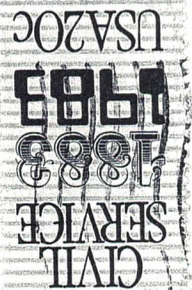

Keep up the good work you are doing.

Sincerely,

Frank Phillips
