Fact and Comment

By Malcolm S. Forbes, Editor-in-Chief

TRYING TO FORCE TV NETWORKS NOT TO PROJECT

election results is—properly—undoable.

YOU KNOW, THIS JUST MIGHT BE A CAPITAL IDEA

The managing partner of a California CPA firm had an inspiration when he noted, in the words of a first-rate Wall Street Journal reporter, that "clients [were] stuffing money into tax shelters to avoid income taxes, while small business clients were scrounging for capital." So, armed only with a shining concept and naiveté about the ways of Washington, three years ago Harvey Goldstein (right) set about getting a provision enacted that would tax-shelter moderate amounts of capital put into small businesses—as is done in real estate and oil drilling. "Isn't it better to give the money to small business than to another apartment building?" he asks.

The tale of his frustrating toil in D.C. was beautifully told by Journal reporter Sanford Jacobs. Goldstein has even made a perceptible, if wee, bit of progress. And he believes, "If I could have 15 minutes with the President, I would have his support for my bill. But you never get that 15 minutes."

He just might be right on the first point and wrong on the second.

Given Ronald Reagan's deep and soundly abiding conviction that small business entrepreneurs are the acorns of our economic oaks, and the President's determination about the incentives that result from tax cuts, why not take a look at Harvey Goldstein's idea?

FORTY-FOUR WHO ARE NOT ANYMORE

Eleven percent of this year's 400 Richest are new. What happened to the gone 44?

Six died. Others ended out because our Unearthing-the-Rich Editors, with each passing year, dig deeper and more deftly and unearth richer.

Some went off the list when the air escaped from their ballooned multi$millions. A number are displaced because their spending resulted in less getting, while new names came on as a result of success on a scale greater than 1983's hot hitters.

As we observed here last year about both this List and its changes—

"What an answer The Forbes Four Hundred is to those who say you can't make it anymore in the U.S.A. There are thousands more mere millionaires than there ever have been before. They started hundreds of new businesses, created tens of thousands of new jobs. They've changed the whole face and foundation of the American economy from one of manufacturers pounding out things to an era of infinite, extraordinary services involving high tech, a knowledge explosion that still defies comparison.

"For every dollar flaunted, hidden or hoarded by this current Forbes Four Hundred, there are 99 to 999 of their dollars at work providing the capital that fuels the free enterprise economy on which every American's personal freedom depends.

"The Four Hundred, individually and in toto, are living proof that the system works. If some of 'em feel their wealth is too much of a burden, I'm sure there'll be no lack of volunteers to relieve them of their load."

CHAMPION'S SIGLER SHOULD BE IN THE NEW CABINET

no matter who wins the election.

And if you have any doubts about it, just read these excerpts from a first-rate article in the New York Times about CEO Andrew Sigler and Champion International's St. Regis acquisition:

"Mr. Sigler said his insistence on long-range planning derives partly from the business he is in. In the paper and plywood industry, where new mills cost more than $500 million and take 5 years to build, and where trees are harvested at least 25 years after they are planted, 'to think you can run a company by concentrating on the next quarter's results is lunacy,' he said.

"Mr. Sigler's determination not to allow a spell of low earnings to disrupt his company was demonstrated in January 1982 when Champion, after freezing the salaries of its employees, cut its quarterly dividend to 10 cents a share from 36 cents rather than lay off any workers.

" 'How can I ask a secretary in St. Paul to freeze her salary when I'm paying out a dividend to the Morgan bank?' he said. 'Everybody was telling me, "You just can't cut the dividend," but I think any policy that puts the welfare of employees below a bunch of institutional investors is crazy.' "

And if he's reluctant to take a Cabinet job, draft him.

AND, ONCE AGAIN, RUPERT MURDOCH SHOWS HIS SAVVY

"If it weren't for Rupert Murdoch, St. Regis would never be part of Champion," observes Mr. Sigler.

Most paper companies are depressed because timber is in huge oversupply as a result of way-down demand for lumber. Yet Murdoch, who uses as much paper as most anybody, recognized that at these relatively depressed prices, a well-run biggie like St. Regis was a buy. He did—5.6% worth—and made a good offer for 50.1% of the rest.

His takeover effort was thwarted, but a $33 million profit on his holdings is a fine balm to heal thwarts.

UNLESS YOU'RE PLANNING TO PLAY FOOTBALL

the only thing worse than a suit with padded shoulders is two of 'em.

Letters to the Editor
The Washington Post
1150 15th Street, N.W.
Washington, DC 20071

To the Editor:

Tom Shales' anticipatory "review" of the Reagan-Mondale debate is as shallow as the medium he purports to cover for your newspaper. One can't really fault Shales for having a mind as narrow as his professional focus. One can fault him, however, for failing to stick to his last.

As television critic, his appraisal of the debates would seem to be restricted to how the players used or misused the medium and how the medium conveyed or failed to convey the players. To attack President Reagan for knowing how to use television well out of a patent bias for Mondale's ideological position is like comdemning a chef who dishes up beef stew because the restaurant critic prefers quiche.

President Reagan cannot help having been an actor any more than Tom Shales can help being a tv critic. We are the sum total of our past history. Walter Mondale is, after all, a big boy fully capable of making his own decisions. He has challenged a man he knows to be a skilled performer to a debate. Presumably, the challenge was based on an assessment of Reagan's strengths as well as his weaknesses. Mondale is not buying a pig in a poke.

Shales laments that Reagan will be handed a script for the debate, just as he was for his film roles at Warner Bros. His naivete--real or affected--would be laughable were it not expressed in the pages of the most widely read paper in our nation's capital city. Does Shales think Mondale has no scripts, no briefing books, no rehearsals? If he reads the news and editorial sections of his own paper, he knows that Mondale is in the middle of intensive--pardon the expression--rehearsals.

Tom Shales may or may not prefer Reagan as his president. Fine. That's what the voting booth is for. He may wish to express his political opinions in print. Fine, again. Let him submit an OpEd piece to the Post or transfer to the editorial department. If he insists on writing television criticism, he should keep his rather jejune political views to himself. As a political analyst, he makes a good tv critic.

Sincerely yours,

William J. Wilson

The Honourable Michael Deavers, Esq.,
Presidential Assistant,
The White House,
Washington, D.C.
U.S.A.

Dear Mr. Deavers,

When I had the pleasure of being at your table at the Luncheon given by President and Mrs. Reagan on 4th June, 1984 at the American Embassy in Dublin you were less than happy with the overall publicity which President Reagan's visit was getting here and in the United States. You were, I recall, disturbed at the extent to which the protests by the minority were being highlighted by the Media and I most certainly sympathised with you in the view which you took.

I am happy to say that during the past week the Media in Ireland has adopted a very favourable attitude to the United States and President Reagan arising from the interception of a very substantial and indeed frightening consignment of Arms from the United States for the Provisional I.R.A. As I do not wish to burden you unnecessarily with newspaper cuttings, as I have no doubt but that you have an ample supply of those on your desk already I am limiting the enclosures herewith to parts of two of our largest circulating Sunday newspapers of last Sunday. I hope that you find them interesting.

During the course of Luncheon you mentioned that you thought that President Reagan was a very much underrated Politician but I am glad to see that from all we read here the Polls in the United States show that he in fact stands very high in the regard of the Electorate and looks like a virtual certainty for a second Term in the White House. I had an exceptionally fullsome letter from President Reagan after his visit thanking me for a small gift which I had sent to him and to Mrs. Reagan by way of a welcoming memento of his Visit.

It was for me a most memorable experience to meet President Reagan for whom I have, all through had a very high regard, and I through you again wish him every success in November and trust that you will look forward to another four years in the White House.

Yours faithfully,

Peter D. Maguire.

MEMORANDUM FOR: JIM BAKER
LARRY SPEAKES

FROM: PETER ROUSSEL PR

Some post-debate thoughts ... very briefly.

1. The comments in the Barnes and Wallace pieces -- very unhelpful. How much more of this went on that didn't appear?

   RECOMMENDATION: That Wirthlin be the only campaign official on the press plane. Speakes has already suggested.

2. That we devote every effort possible to a maximum "hype" of the Ohio train trip. This will be the best media event of the campaign -- high anticipation by the press. Best way to get off the debate -- get them focused on this event.

   RECOMMENDATION: Individual color interviews along the route -- Sidey, George Embrey (for Ohio), cut deals with local affiliates along the way, let networks pick up from them. Also, why don't we get some other color types to join on this -- some athletes, etc.

3. Lay out debate post-mortem plan for the Vice President's press staff. If worked well for us; can do the same for them.

4. Wonder if some impact couldn't be scored in next debate by having the President answer an appropriate question with: "I don't need two minutes to answer that. The American people know where I stand on that. The answer is yes. Period!" Might be effective for dramatic impact as contrasted against these long, drawn-out answers.

5. Campaign stops have fallen into a monotone routine. Rallies are well-produced and colorful, but have lost their impact on press. We need to supplement our standard trip fare with more events like the train trip. One thing is an unannounced "spontaneous" story.

6. Before the campaign is over, schedule a stop so that there is an overnight in one of those cities the press particularly likes for overnights -- San Francisco, New Orleans, Las Vegas.

FEMA Oversight Hearings. The oversight hearings by Subcommittee Chairman Gore (Science and Technology) on possible improprieties in FEMA were deferred. FEMA Congressional Relations staff believe that time will run out in this session before the hearings can be rescheduled.

Balanced Budget Amendment. The House rejected Rupublican efforts to bring up the Blanced Budget Constitutional Amendment, by a vote of 238 to 179. The House did pass legislation requiring the President to submit a plan for a balanced budget every time he submits a budget that will run a deficit. The Senate Judiciary Committee may vote out the Constitutional Amendment, but no final action by the Senate is expected this session.

Even better are the polls. Its great & be a Republican. Your pal is magnificent - and in no small measure, I'm sure, extraordinary credit is due & you. Keep it up, Mike, - you're a winner from any vantage point and so is your friend!

Fall has arrived in Sacramento - To me, that is the best time of the year - warm days, cool nights - beautiful. Good for tennis & whatever. And, of course, it is the prelude & skiing and a few other winter enjoyments. The economy is in an upward move in the arts and that helps our business, as well as theirs. Its been enjoyable this year. Fortunately, I (like you, apparently) look forward & coming & work. It is likewise upbeat and helps disaster frayed nerves. I suspect in, in second thought, that your

You are a long way from Sacramento, I of course, and you may not be aware of our current desegregation issue within the Sacramento School District. Another story in the continuing saga of any School District problems. We have recently completed two months of Public Hearings that resulted in Community 5 - School District 6 in representative viewpoints of the public & any thoughts of moving Kids in any effort to desegregate some of our schools. Now we look forward to finding some reasonable means whereby the School Board can arrive at a decision without the need for a court directed mandate. I'm convinced we can do it, but there is some tough ~~se~~ sledding ahead.

I became aware I am going this year on the Public ~~Employees~~ Employment Relations Board. This is the Board that, in a quasi-judicial capacity, is responsible for administering three laws associated with Kindergarten through University levels. I would dearly love to get involved. I want so far as I contact friends I guess like Ray Brophy, Kirk West, Bill Cunningham and others. It is a Senate confirmation and strictly is a top concern of the Governor as it who represents him on the Board. Anyway, I'm still fretin' and stewin' and the time is drawing near. The impact on my business is a substantial concern but I am nevertheless still interested. I'm just cocky enough & think I could do something positive if I were a member. Any thoughts?

GBA

Well, Mike, I'm sure you have a few hundred things to do in the next 24 hours (that's a 36 hour day) and you'll be going 60 M.P.H. - If the past is any indication of the next 24 or 36, you'll get it done — and well.

Please say hello to Carolyn. Hope she, if not with you, get a chance to visit Tahoe this summer.

REQUEST: Presidential meeting with Attorney General William French Smith

PURPOSE: To discuss the status of the immigration bill.

BACKGROUND: On September 26, the Conference on Immigration recessed subject to the call of the chair over an impasse on a Frank (D-Massachusetts) anti-discrimination provision. Concerns were also present at that time over controls on the ultimate cost of the bill.

In the last few days a small group of conferees, centered around action by Representative Schumer (D-New York), have attempted to break that impasse by putting forth new proposals to guarantee costs and to severely restrict the unacceptable provisions of the Frank amendment. Conference Chairman Peter Rodino (D-New Jersey), on the basis of some apparent receptivity to these proposals by Senate sponsor Alan Simpson (R-Wyoming), has called the conference to meet at 2:00 p.m. on Tuesday, October 9.

PREVIOUS PARTICIPATION: The President met with the Attorney General and Senator Simpson on September 27 to discuss the immigration bill.

DATE AND TIME: Tuesday, October 9 prior to 1:00 p.m.

Dear Mr. Deaver:

When is our government going to learn how to protect American citizens in Lebanon? I am speaking as a Republican and a supporter of Pres. Reagan.

There is absolutely no excuse for the latest bombing of our Embassy in Beirut. It does not take a safety engineer to figure out that the Steel Gates should have been put up first, then the concrete blocks. How can anybody be so stupid to leave the gates to the last. Had the gates been up, the Embassy building and lives could have been saved.

It makes one so disgusted to see the stupidity that was allowed. Is that the best brain power that can be mustered for the safety of Americans? It is long overdue for those responsible to make some changes. Yes, to be fired.

One more thing. There will never be peace in Middle East as long as Israel is allowed to dictate our Middle East foreign policy. It seems that you people in Washington will never learn that Jews and Arabs have to be treated as equals.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Deaver:

Enclosed are two flyers promoting the book The Triumph of the American Spirit--The Presidential Speeches of Ronald Reagan. I hope that it will be of interest to you and others in your office.

I would like to think that this book would be a useful reference work for everyone at the White House as well as a fitting remembrance of the first four years of the Reagan Presidency. My coeditor Gregory J. Pamel and I hope that this compilation of President Reagan's speeches and the essays that Senators East and Hatch and Congressman Crane wrote on them will provide readers with as much pleasure as we derived from editing them.

If you have any questions about ordering the book, please do not hesitate to contact our publisher at the number listed in the enclosed flyer; if you have any other questions, please do not hesitate to call me at (313)764-8929 (home) or (313)763-2050 (Michigan Yearbook of International Legal Studies.

Dear Mr. Deaver:

Enclosed are two flyers promoting the book The Triumph of the American Spirit--The Presidential Speeches of Ronald Reagan. I hope that it will be of interest to you and others in your office.

I would like to think that this book would be a useful reference work for everyone at the White House as well as a fitting remembrance of the first four years of the Reagan Presidency. My coeditor Gregory J. Pamel and I hope that this compilation of President Reagan's speeches and the essays that Senators East and Hatch and Congressman Crane wrote on them will provide readers with as much pleasure as we derived from editing them.

If you have any questions about ordering the book, please do not hesitate to contact our publisher at the number listed in the enclosed flyer; if you have any other questions, please do not hesitate to call me at (313)764-8929 (home) or (313)763-2050 (Michigan Yearbook of International Legal Studies.

Good luck with this year's campaign.

Sincerely,

Emil Arca

Dear President Reagan:

Please find below a copy of a letter which I wrote to the Cleveland Plain Dealer and which was published on August 23, 1984.

I believe you might find it interesting enough to pass on to the Olympic Committee for reference with regard to future Olympiads.

Sincerely,

Carol J. Zaas

Non-medalists deserve recognition

How nice of our country to honor our 200 Olympiad XXIII medalist winners with parades and parties. This is all well and good. However, what about the other 300 or so athletes — the non-medal winners?

Granted, they did not win medals, but they did put in as much time, effort, heartache and practice as the winners did. Why shouldn't they also be honored and invited to participate in the parades and dinners like the athletes who won the medals?

These non-winners were as much a part of our country's participation in the Olympiad as were the winners.

Dear Sir:

Attached is a copy of an article from a newsletter "The Treasury Intelligence Advisor."

It discusses relationships between Mrs. Ferraro and her husband John Zaccaro with known organized crime figures.

If true, and it probably is, or the newsletter editor would be facing a huge libel suit, it could be of some assistance in the outcome of the 1984 elections.

Don't be overconfident like Mr. Dewey's advisors were just before he was defeated for the presidency. As shows us voters that the present "en fighting program" the president is reke is real.

Time is running out - Get with

Yours tru

"It is amazing to see how the liberal television networks and most of our liberal press have almost totally ignored the connections between Ferraro/Zaccaro and organized crime. They prefer to report on their "discovery" that Geraldine bakes her own blueberry muffins, and her less controversial campaign contribution violations. This writer believes the Justice Department or an independent commission should launch a full investigation into Ferraro's and Zaccaro's connections with the pornography division of organized crime and their other underworld connections."

-- a portfolio review service, on a consulting basis.

Effective immediately, I am prepared to work on a one-on-one basis with individual investors and corporations. Every three months, I will personally review all aspects of a portfolio, from taxes to stocks, and will then offer my conclusions, suggestions, and recommendations.

I can tell you right up front that the desired objective of my services will be to show a three percent real return -- and I want to emphasize "real" -- on capital every year. Real means after taxes, and adjusted for inflation. If a three percent real return doesn't sound very exciting, permit me to point out that historically, that is how the world's biggest fortunes (Rothschild, for one) have been built.

Another way to understand what this would mean is to perform a quick analysis of your own investment capital, plus your annual income. Consider how a three percent real rate of return would impact them over a five-year period. I do not believe that this objective is overly ambitious; I believe it is both realistic and achievable.

For this consultation service, I will charge individual investors $500 per quarter, with the fee for the first two quarters, or $1,000, payable in advance. For corporations, our consultation services will encompass financing strategies, posture, and over-all direction, including indirect capital-raising services. We would necessarily have to discuss how involved a situation might be before I could reasonably quote any rates.

If this sounds like a service that would interest you, please call me at (206) 243-9115 to discuss it further, or write Larry Abraham, Financial Management Services, Suite 1105, 18000 Pacific Highway South, Seattle, Washington 98188.

IT'S ALL IN THE "FAMILY"

Speaking of Geraldine Ferraro, as we were earlier, at least she has brought some excitement to what has been an unbelievably boring campaign. But the press could have made her life a lot hotter than it has. Why have the mass media been so gentle with her? There is certainly plenty of material here for a full-blown national scandal, as Don McAlvany reports in The McAlvany Intelligence Advisor. Here is what Don had to say this month:

"The real scandal is not Geraldine Ferraro's illegal campaign contributions (i.e., $130,000 in 1978) or falsification of Congressional financial reporting forms; it is not even her and her husband's $65,000 underpayment on their 1978 income taxes -- though these offenses were far greater than those which got Idaho Congressman George Hansen a Congressional censure and 15 months in jail.

"The real scandal is her organized crime and pornography connections. It seems that Ferraro has received a number of campaign contributions from organized crime figures who also happen to be close family friends and business associates of her and her husband, John Zaccaro. Michael 'Mike the Baker' LaRosa, a convicted labor racketeer described in his 1982 racketeering trial by an undercover FBI agent as a 'conduit between the five New York organized crime families and corrupt union leaders,' had made three campaign contributions to Ferraro over the past four years (the most recent on 5-8-84). LaRosa, who pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn in April '82 to a federal charge of racketeering, has had business dealings with John Zaccaro's and Geraldine Ferraro's real estate firm for two decades. Geraldine Ferraro was a director and treasurer of that firm most of that time. (The $130,000 in illegal campaign contributions were run through this firm in 1978.)

"In August, it was reported in a New York magazine that the Ferraro/Zaccaro firm had once rented one of their buildings (as a residence) to Aniello Dellacroce, the one-time second in command of the Carlo Gambino crime family.

"Forty yards up the street from John Zaccaro's office is a 7-story building co-owned by Zaccaro, Ferraro and Manny Herman, and managed by Zaccaro. Two floors of this Zaccaro/Ferraro building are the distribution center for the pornography division of organized crime. Star Distribution, the renter, is headed by Theodore Rothstein, convicted in 1981 of moving pornographic films across state lines. Star's vice president, Robert Di Bernardo, identified by New York's Organized Crime Strike Force as a member of the organized crime family of Sam "The Plumber" DeCavalcante (and also convicted along with Rothstein) distributes hardcore pornography on behalf of the DeCavalcante and Gambino crime families. Distributed from the Zaccaro/Ferraro building are such porno favorites as "Whips and Chains," "Smut," and "Screw" magazines.

"Shortly after the above Zaccaro/Ferraro organized crime/pornography connection surfaced, it was learned that another Zaccaro managed building (at 68 Mott Street) is one of the biggest gambling dens in Chinatown, a wholly owned subsidiary of the Chinese mob.
