Dear Michael

Failing to reach Super Bowl XIX hurts doubly:

- a) Because the Redskins are not in it;
- b) The NFL has drastically
reduced the Redskins quota of Super Bowl tickets.

From what now becomes a meager supply of those tickets, I have instructed the Redskins office to send you, by Certified Mail, four (4) tickets to Super Bowl Sunday, January 20, Palo
Alto, California.

Linebacker #57

Ht: 6-4 Wt: 237 NFL Year: 6th

The Redskins' third leading tackler (111), Rich is one of the few players who never comes out on defense. A second team All-NFC selection, he is another in the long line of Penn State linebackers. In his career in Washington he has started games at each of the three linebacking positions. Rich had two pass interceptions and 1½ QB sacks during the regular season, while adding another fumble recovery and QB sack in the playoffs.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20220

April 2, 1985

Dear Mike,

Thank you for your kind letter and thoughtful gift. I will never forget our work on the 50th Presidential Inaugural, and the Galvano set of the Inaugural medal will look great in our home.

The ten weeks or so that we spent preparing for the Inaugural had a lasting impact on my life. As a part time advancement man, I was thrilled to have the opportunity to work on the ultimate event for the President. Most of all, however, I was probably forever changed as the result of having the opportunity to work with people like you, Bill, Ron and the others. The caliber of this group was of the highest magnitude. Their drive to do the best for the President and the Nation was overwhelming.

I am sure you are looking forward to your new endeavor, but I will miss your not being in the White House. The enormity of the job of being the President can engulf most individuals. Were it not for your efforts over the past four years, we would have never had the opportunity to see President Reagan's depth and compassion as he carried out his duties. In comparison, it's much easier to sell policies or programs than it is to make a nation understand and appreciate a president's personality. You did your job extremely well.

Sherrie and I wish you the best of luck.

Sincerely,

Paul

The Honorable
Michael K. Deaver
Deputy Chief of Staff and Assistant to the President
The White House
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Deaver:

I hope you will not consider me too forward but I want to pass along a few thoughts. You can consider whether they will be worthwhile in the debate at Louisville, and particularly in response to questions.

One, I wrote you earlier about Jimmy Carter's introduction of Mondale in Atlanta before the convention in San Francisco. He said in substance that he had never initiated a policy or made an important decision that he had not consulted with Mondale and Mondale had always agreed with him. The exact language is in the New York Times about two months before the convention and I think someone would have no trouble in finding it.

Two, I am not capable of making the decision but it seems one way to dismiss the argument over religion would be to say, "If Mr. Mondale wants to continue dividing religion against religion, he can do so." I said that religious values ought to be observed by public officials and the President."

Three, as Mondale continues to attack the President on his "conversion" to negotiations with the Societs on arms control and other subjects, I think the President on good ground. As I understand, he has said that talks should go forward on a Cabinet level and has not ruled out a summit meeting. It is obvious that the Soviets would not meet to discuss anything important without long preparation in the politburo and other sources and certainly such thorough preparation would be made by the President. I don't know whether Mondale is still talking about a freeze but I think that the President could say that all such subjects would be a part of any negotiations. I believe such a freeze would probably give the Soviets an advantage and they would not want to give it up. I attended the SALT talks as an observer and had to study a great deal about nuclear weapons and negotiations.

note

Four, the Democrats and part of the media continue to talk about the Beirut bombing. Unfortunately, it appears to me that they have made some dent on this issue. I am sure that this matter has been and is being fully discussed.

Five, I noticed in today's paper that Mondale challenges the President's competence. I suggest this might be answered by saying "Mondale is becoming desperate. He challenges me on my sincerity, my leadership, my truthfulness, and even my religion. He is very desperate and has a right to be."

With kindest regards to you,

Yours sincerely,

John Sherman Cooper

Dear Mr. Deaver:

I am taking the liberty of writing you because you have been so kind to me and I remember so well the times I came to see you during the first year of President Reagan's term.

There is no doubt in my mind that the President's staff and advisors are keeping up with all things that will help him in his present race. Nevertheless in reading the New York Times recently I have seen articles that might be useful as Mrs. Ferraro is the opposing candidate for Vice President. These articles mentioned New York City having the worst statistics of any major city in the United States, a City Councilman had bought a surplus tractor to clean up the streets in his ward, the subways were criticized, and it was noted that nothing had been done about the proposed Westway Park.

I have been ill for some time and at home and am getting much better and I am looking forward to a great Reagan victory in November.

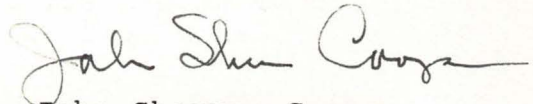

I remember that when I talked to you in the White House, I said adverse criticism about Social Security could be very harmful. In my experience, this is still true.

Dear Mr. Deaver Mike

I would like to express my appreciation and thanks to the competent and cooperative advance staff that came to New Jersey for the President's July 26 visit.

I understand that Grey Terry, who headed the group, is a true professional at his job. Mr. Terry's attitude and actions were most diplomatic in the midst of some sensitive local political situations.

Mr. Stephen Hart, Press Advance, did an exceptional job with the press.

In addition, Frank Mermoud, lead advance from Reagan-Bush '84 and his assistant, John Fisher, are to be complimented on the excellent job they did -- the program at Elizabeth City Hall, as I'm certain you would agree, was flawless.

I commend these gentlemen on their work and performance. They are excellent representatives of the President and I would welcome their return to New Jersey anytime.
