The Campaign Trail

In this presidential election year we thought it would be interesting to look at campaigning through the exuberance of youth and wisdom of the aged.

The following campaign speech, by an ambitious young contender for the office of President and her campaign manager, was originally discarded. We feel it deserved attention. It was written by Linda Dianne Yonitis, age eleven and her campaign manager John Rutroff also age eleven, both of Orlando, Florida. Linda is the daughter of one of "the Confectioner" researchers, Gerry Yonitis.

Mr. Ralston Coffin Hewitt, age 90 has been active in the confectionery industry for many, many years, has written hundreds of articles aimed at the edification and advancement of his salesmen and customers and is currently editing a book he has written called "Aim Your Life for a Star (Life of a Salesman)". Mr. Hewitt reviews for us with nostalgia, his connection with Theodore Roosevelt.

I KNEW TEDDY ROOSEVELT

By Ralston C. Hewitt, age 90
Editor and Correspondent Van Nuys, California

In 1910, while I was in high school, I wrote an article entitled, "Theodore Roosevelt, Our Greatest Living American." This was for a contest and it won an award.

In 1912, Theodore Roosevelt ran for President of the United States on the Progressive (Bull Moose) Party ticket. His opponents were Woodrow Wilson, Democrat and William Howard Taft, Republican. Roosevelt was the most popular, but the others had the regular party backing. Anyway, Roosevelt was my man.

I was associated with a group of young hopefuls — an offshoot of our activities in Plymouth Church — and we met in the home of one of our members there, a Mr. Noden.

We decided to back Teddy Roosevelt for the presidency. It entailed a lot of work. This was before the advent of radio and television, so all promotions were by talk and by the newspapers.

We set out to do the job. We got a soap box and put a stick on it and on that stick was an American flag. All of us were "orators," for we had been active in our school debating team and oratorical contests. We were now to face the general public.

My first assignment was to make a speech down under the Brooklyn Bridge. I stood up on the soap box and made my speech. The audience was a general segment of the population from that area, which included some derelicts. It was a heckling experience. As the campaign progressed I got to speak in more agreeable circumstances.

During the campaign, Teddy Roosevelt came to Brooklyn. As he rode by City Hall, he saw me standing on the soap box imploring my audience to vote for him.

"There's a boy after my own heart," he said, and to my great astonishment invited me to ride in his limousine.

I visited Teddy's home in Oyster Bay many times after that ride in the limousine, and always thought of him with the greatest admiration. To me and many others Teddy was "Our Greatest Living American." The development of his body from that of a weakling boy to that of a strong man was his own accomplishment. And he had a brain to match.

To me and to many of my young associates of that time, Teddy Roosevelt was the "Bull Moose" for us to follow. He was a great leader and inspirer. His two greatest sayings were: "Speak softly, but carry a big stick," and "The man who never made a mistake never did anything, but the man who made too many mistakes lost his job."

(She comes on the stage and the audience cheers and claps)

Thankyou! Thankyou!

*I've come here to try to convince you to vote for me. I will lower taxes as low as I can.
I will feed the hungry! I will make sure that there is beef on every hamburger bun! Now, look to economy!*

*I will decrease unemployment. When I'm finished with this country
you will want to rename it Yonitis States insted of United States!*

Dear Howard,

Congratulations, you did it again. I thought when you became Senate Majority Leader you had hit the top, but apparently not.

I remember the days when I was starting my chamber career in Bristol, Tenn. and you were the Jr. Senator for Tenn. but look at you now.

I wish I could have said hello when you were in Florida last week, but maybe I can get you to Key West soon. The fishing and tennis is better here anyway.

It may be possible that we may see each other sooner. Randy Moore, President of the Chamber of Commerce invited the President to the Commissioning Ceremony for the USS Key West. (letter dated Feb. 4th 1987) We wrote Bill Henkel, and he passed our request on to Frederick J. Ryan for a decision. (letter from Bill to Randy dated Feb. 9th 1987) It appears that the ceremony will be around the 15th of August. Unless the President comes, then the ceremony will be whenever he wants it.

Good luck in your new position. If I can ever be of help to you here in Key West, all you have to do is call.

Your Friend

Congratulations! What a critical time to have you filling this important role for both our President and our country. I wish you every success in the months ahead.

NFIB has long been a supporter of many of the goals of the President and the Administration. We will look forward to working with you and your team during these coming months in seeing that the agenda is carried forward. Last week, the Vice President reviewed with several hundred White House Conference on Small Business delegates the role the Administration hopes to play in accomplishing the small business agenda as set by that Conference last August.

I am enclosing a copy of an NFIB news release of today extending public support to your efforts. Again, Howard, my best wishes for a most successful undertaking.

BUSINESS LEADER PRAISES CHOICE OF BAKER
AS WHITE HOUSE CHIEF OF STAFF

Washington, D.C., March 4, 1987---The head of the nation's largest small-business organization has praised the selection of Howard Baker as the new White House Chief of Staff.

John Sloan, Jr., president of the National Federation of Independent Business, said President Reagan has made an "outstanding choice" in naming Baker to succeed Donald Regan.

"I have known Howard Baker for many years. He is an outstanding leader, a skilled politician and a dedicated American. He will give the president the support he needs to put the unfortunate mistakes of the past several months behind him and get back to the business of running the country," Sloan said.

The NFIB president said reducing the deficit, dealing with the trade imbalance and preventing Congress from enacting European-style mandated employee benefits must be at the top of the administration's list of priorities. "We wish the president and his new chief of staff every success, because without strong leadership in the White House, the pro-business environment President Reagan has worked to create will soon disappear," Sloan said.
