There was no eye witness to the death of this man as far as can be learned. The body was found by some soldier whose name cannot be discovered, and the information this man gave to the members of deceased's company was that deceased had been shot through the forehead by a sniper; Death was evidently instantaneous, and occurred near EGLISFONTAINE, France, in the Meuse Argonne Offensive on the 30th of September 1918. The ground on which deceased met his death was held. There is some evidence to the effect that the body was buried by Chaplain Cherrington, 346th Field Artillery, but at the time Chaplain of this organization.
