THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

June 27, 2000

Dear Joe:

Thank you for your letter concerning the possible sale of U.S. attack helicopters to Turkey.

As you know, a U.S. manufacturer is competing for the contract against two foreign firms, and the Turkish government has not made a final decision. If Turkey selects the American company, our export license decision will be based on the full range of considerations required by law as well as our conventional arms transfer policy.

As a NATO ally, Turkey has important obligations to the Atlantic Alliance and legitimate defense needs. I believe the United States should support Turkish efforts to meet both, consistent with our arms transfer policies. We review all potential military sales and transfers to Turkey on a case-by-case basis, to ensure weapon system transfers do not contribute to regional instability.

During the license request review, we also consider human rights. The government of Prime Minister Ecevit has made significant progress in this regard over the past year. The Ecevit administration, working with the National Assembly, has removed military judges from state security courts, cracked down on torture and other illegal activity among security forces, and enacted laws designed to strengthen protection for parties that express what some in Turkey see as unorthodox views. Violence and PKK terrorism in southeastern Turkey has abated.

Reflecting the new situation in the region, Foreign Minister Cem recently suggested publicly that ethnic Kurds be allowed to write, broadcast, and study in their mother tongue. Ahmet Necdet Sezer, a widely respected reformist and former Chief of the Turkish Constitutional Court, was inaugurated as Turkey's President on May 16, and has reiterated calls for democratic reform and commitment to the rule of law at home and abroad.

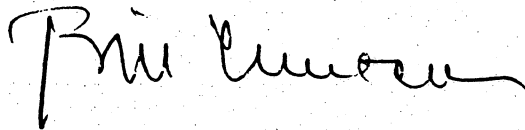

The Ecevit government is also achieving economic progress with far-reaching reforms on pensions and international arbitration. Prime Minister Ecevit has ushered in much-needed fiscal discipline, which is bringing down inflation and preparing the groundwork for sustained growth in Turkey.

Such initiatives influenced the EU's decision to grant candidate status to Turkey last December in Helsinki, a development strongly supported -- indeed, made possible -- by the Government of Greece. As part of its progress toward EU accession, Turkey agreed in Helsinki to work to resolve bilateral disputes in the Aegean.

Regarding Cyprus, I am determined to do everything I can to promote a comprehensive, just, and final resolution to the dispute on the island. I am hopeful that the ongoing talks between the parties will prepare the way for progress. The very fact that the talks reconvened last December after a stalemate of more than two years suggests that there is some new thinking among Greek and Turkish Cypriots, and in Athens and Ankara as well.

Again, thank you for writing.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read "Bill Clinton". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "B" and a long, sweeping underline.

The Honorable Joe Knollenberg
House of Representatives

Dear Mr. Stinson:

Thank you for your letter regarding defense sales to Turkey. I am confident that as Ankara modernizes its defense systems, they recognize the unrivalled quality provided by U.S. manufacturers.

If Turkey decides to buy American and we are asked to approve a license, we will look at several factors -- including our general support to Turkey in its efforts to increase its defense capabilities.

We also review all U.S. arms sales in the context of our Conventional Arms Transfer Policy, which includes important human rights considerations. Turkey is making significant progress in improving its human rights policies. We hope that President Sezer will continue efforts to enhance democracy, economic prosperity, and human rights for all Turkish citizens.

May 26, 2000

The Honorable William J. Clinton
The White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

We write to ask for your support of defense sales to Turkey. As you know firsthand from your successful visit last year, Turkey makes a vital contribution in the Balkans, in enforcing sanctions on Iraq, in the Middle East Peace Process, in the Caucasus, and most importantly in Central Asia. Turkey also is critical to an enlightened energy policy for Caspian oil and gas. Turkey is a model of secular democracy for the Islamic world.

Mr. President, in the relatively near future, this NATO ally will be making major procurement decisions on new defense purchases. These include helicopters, airborne early warning systems, tanks and naval systems along with a host of ancillary electronics and equipment. These sales represent thousands of high value jobs for American workers. They also provide a positive economic multiplier effect in our communities and represent billions of dollars in export credits for the United States.

Keeping the road open for American defense sales is essential. Failure to approve the next major transfer will be the precedent that eliminates any American suppliers from major sales that will follow. Just as we vigorously support Turkey's candidacy for the European Union, so should we bolster the elements in Turkey who support an active and democratic role for Turkey by ensuring that America remains a reliable supplier of advanced equipment for Turkey's security needs.

Sincerely,

Staff Secretary:

Regarding attached package, Staff Secretary edits were made to para 1; however, per Tracey the 'will' edit to para 2 was not made because we are making a general policy assertion (see Tracey's handwritten note).

FYI, Mr. Chabraja is no longer w/General Dynamics. The new Chairman and CEO is Mr. Chuck McQueary. We also changed the first sentence of this letter to: Thank you for your firm's letter vice your letter.

Copies have been updated.
