None but the malicious or the ignorant can say that American public opinion opposes or seeks the elimination of what they call the profit motive. It is, however, true that we increasingly turn against the excess profit motive. In this we do not destroy ambition nor do we seek to divide our wealth into equal shares on stated occasions. We recognize the greater ability of some to earn more than others; and we do say that the ambition of the individual to assure himself or herself security, reasonable leisure, and a decent living throughout life is a higher ambition than the desire to earn ten million dollars.

Hyde Park, Sept. 18 1944.

In the spring of 1917, just before or after we declared war, the Secret Service found in the safe of the German Consul in New York, a document headed: "To be eliminated". The first name on the list was that of Frank Poll; mine was the second, followed by about eight or ten others.

As a result, the Secret Service asked us both to carry revolvers as we both habitually walked to and from our offices. I was given the revolver and the shoulder holster. I wore them under my arm for three or four days. Although a fair shot with a revolver, I realized that it would take me about 30 seconds before I could reach inside my overcoat and coat, haul out, cock, aim and fire. By that time I would normally be dead with the assassin half a mile away!

I put the revolver in the top table drawer where it remained for 25 years.

Hyde Park, Sept 18 1944

This little German revolver was given me by Elliott in Tunis, in 1943. He had taken it from a German officer captured by the American forces.

Franklin Roosevelt

Hyde Park, Sept 18 1944.

Raymond P.R. Neilson painted this from a photograph of The President and President Vargas and Admiral Jonas Ingram, Commander in Chief in the South Atlantic. The photograph was taken at Natal, Brazil on my return from Africa, Jan. 1943.

Vargas and I are debating whether the jeep will also carry Ingram!
