MEETING WITH PRESIDENTIAL ADVISORY COUNCIL ON HIV AND AIDS AND REMARKS

Friday, January 31, 2003

10:50 a.m. – 11:50 a.m.

Indian Treaty Room and Presidential Hall

Margaret Spellings

I. PURPOSE

To highlight your Administration's commitment to fighting HIV/AIDS at home and abroad.

I. BACKGROUND

Today, you will meet with members of the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS (PACHA). The Council provides recommendations on the Federal Government's response to HIV and AIDS. After the meeting, you will deliver remarks to a group of domestic and international leaders in the fight against AIDS, as well as ambassadors from some of the countries most affected by the disease. In addition to highlighting your new global AIDS initiative and some of the highlights from your FY 2004 domestic AIDS budget (including a $93 million increase in AIDS research and a $100 million dollar increase for the AIDS Drug Assistance Program), you will announce Health and Human Service's approval of a rapid AIDS test that will be available for use in more than 100,000 doctors' offices around the country.

Since taking office, you have spearheaded significant advances in combating domestic and global HIV/AIDS. Overall spending on HIV/AIDS increased from $14.2 billion in FY 2001 to $18 billion in your FY 2004 request. You formed the Cabinet HIV/AIDS Task Force, co-chaired by Secretaries Thompson and Powell and strengthened the White House Office of National AIDS Policy (ONAP).

Your FY 2004 budget requests a 4 percent increase in HIV/AIDS research. You have supported funding for domestic prevention, care, and treatment (although you have not, until now, requested increases over congressional levels). You have improved management of HIV/AIDS programs to ensure that more funds are available to those most affected by the AIDS epidemic. You have expanded the capacity of the Community and Migrant Health Center Program and substantially increased support for substance abuse treatment – critical steps in fighting HIV/AIDS.

Even prior to the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, your global HIV/AIDS budget had increased by 87 percent over FY 2001 levels. When your new initiative is implemented, you will effectively triple our investment in global AIDS relief. This will have the following effects:

- Preventing 7 million new infections (60 percent of the projected 12 million new infections in the target countries);
- Providing antiretroviral drugs for 2 million HIV-infected people; and
- Caring for 10 million HIV-infected individuals and AIDS orphans.

You will meet with your Presidential Advisory Council and thank them for their service and have a photo taken with the 35 members. You will then proceed to Room 450 EEOB and give an address to approximately 130 people where you will:

- Reprise highlights of the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief;
- Stress the importance of the domestic AIDS situation, especially in minority communities;
- Stress the importance of a public health/medical approach to the HIV epidemic;
- Announce an increase in the AIDS Drug Assistance Program FY 2004 budget of $100 million dollars;
- Announce the waving of certain Federal regulations thus allowing the rapid HIV test to be widely available

- in health facilities and offices around the Nation; and
- Congratulate Secretary Thompson on being elected to the Chairmanship of the Board of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB, and Malaria

Subject: REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT AND BRITISH PRIME MINISTER TONY BLAIR

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release
January 31, 2003

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
AND BRITISH PRIME MINISTER TONY BLAIR

The Cross Hall

4:12 P.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: It's my honor to welcome Tony Blair back to the White House. We just had a wide-ranging discussion on a lot of issues. I appreciate my friend's commitment to peace and security. I appreciate his vision. I appreciate his willingness to lead. Most importantly, I appreciate his understanding that after September the 11th, 2001, the world changed; that we face a common enemy -- terrorists willing to kill innocent lives; that we now recognize that threats which gather in remote regions of the world must be dealt with before others lose their lives.

Tony Blair is a friend. He's a friend of the American people, he's a friend of mine. I trust his judgment and I appreciate his wisdom.

Welcome.

THE PRIME MINISTER: First of all, can I say how delighted I am to be back in the White House and to see President Bush. And as he's just described to you, we had an excellent discussion, covering all the key issues of the day. And I would like to praise his leadership in the world since September the 11th, particularly, on what I think are the two key issues that face our world today -- which are issues of international terrorism and weapons of mass destruction. And I think both of those issues come together because they threaten the peace and the order and the stability of the world.

And what is essential is that in every respect, in every way that we can we mobilize international support and the international community, in order to make sure that these twin threats that the world faces are dealt with. And I have no doubt at all that we can deal with them. But we should realize those two threats -- terrorism, weapons of mass destruction -- are not different, they're linked. And dealing with both of them is essential for the future peace and security and prosperity of the world.

Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT: Fournier. Here's what we're going to do. I will call upon a reporter. The Prime Minister will call upon a reporter. And we'll do this three different times. Start with you.

Q Thank you, sir. First, quickly to the Prime Minister, did you ask President Bush to secure a second U.N. resolution and to give the inspectors more time? And, President Bush, the U.N. says -- the U.N. inspectors say Saddam is not complying, you say Saddam is not complying, why wait a matter of weeks? What's -- why hold up on the decision?

THE PRESIDENT: First of all, you violated the two-question rule -- as usual. He's had a bad habit of this. I'll start.

Saddam Hussein is not disarming. He is a danger to the world. He must disarm. And that's why I have constantly said and the Prime Minister has constantly said this issue will come to a head in a matter of weeks, not months.

THE PRIME MINISTER: The whole point about the present situation is that when President Bush made his speech to the United Nations, when we went down the United Nations route, we passed Resolution 1441. And I think it really repays reading that, because we said very clearly that Saddam had what we said was a final opportunity to disarm, and that he had to cooperate fully in every respect with the U.N. weapons inspectors.

As Dr. Blix said in his report to the Security Council earlier this week, he's not doing that. And therefore, what is important is that the international community comes together again and makes it absolutely clear that this is unacceptable. And the reason why I believe that it will do that is precisely because in the original Resolution 1441, we made it clear that failure to disarm would lead to serious consequences.

So this is a test for the international community. It's not just a test for the United States or for Britain. It's a test for the international community, too. And the judgment has to be, at the present time, that Saddam Hussein is not cooperating with the inspectors, and therefore is in breach of the U.N. resolution. And that's why time is running out.

Andy.

Q A question for the President, if I may. What is the status, in your view, of any second resolution? Is it something that you think it's worth spending time and energy trying to assemble and, if so, why?

THE PRESIDENT: First, let me reiterate what I just said. This is a matter of weeks, not months. Any attempt to drag the process on for months will be resisted by the United States. And as I understand the Prime Minister -- I'm loath to put words in his mouth -- but he's also said weeks, not months.

Secondly, I want to remind you, I was the guy that went to the United Nations in the first place. I said, why don't we come together as a world to resolve this issue, once and for all. Why doesn't the United Nations stand up as a body and show the world that it has got the capacity to keep the peace.

So, first of all, in answer to one part of your question, this just needs to be resolved quickly. Should the United Nations decide to pass a second resolution, it would be welcomed if it is yet another signal that we're intent upon disarming Saddam Hussein. But 1441 gives us the authority to move without any second resolution. And Saddam Hussein must understand that if he does not disarm, for the sake of peace, we, along with others, will go disarm Saddam Hussein.

Steve.

Q Thank you, sir. Mr. President, is Secretary Powell going to provide the undeniable proof of Iraq's guilt that so many critics are calling for?

THE PRESIDENT: Well, all due in modesty, I thought I did a pretty good job myself of making it clear that he's not disarming and why he should disarm. Secretary Powell will make a strong case about the danger of an armed Saddam Hussein. He will make it clear that Saddam Hussein is fooling the world, or trying to fool the world. He will make it clear that Saddam is a menace to peace in his own neighborhood. He will also talk about al Qaeda links, links that really do portend a danger for America and for Great Britain, anybody else who loves freedom.

As the Prime Minister says, the war on terror is not confined to just a shadowy terrorist network. The war on terror includes people who are willing to train and to equip organizations such as al Qaeda.

See, the strategic view of America changed after September the 11th. We must deal with threats before they hurt the American people again. And as I have said repeatedly, Saddam Hussein would like nothing more than to use a terrorist network to attack and to kill and leave no fingerprints behind. Colin Powell will continue making that case to the American people and the world at the United Nations.

THE PRIME MINISTER: Adam.

Q One question for you both. Do you believe that there is a link between Saddam Hussein, a direct link, and the men who attacked on September the 11th?

THE PRIME MINISTER: That answers your question. The one thing I would say, however, is I've absolutely no doubt at all that unless we deal with both of these threats, they will come together in a deadly form. Because, you know, what do we know after September the 11th? We know that these terrorists networks would use any means they can to cause maximum death and destruction. And we know also that they will do whatever they can to acquire the most deadly weaponry they can. And that's why it's important to deal with these issues together.

Q Mr. President and Prime Minister, if I could, sir, the arms inspectors made their report on Monday this week. You've both made clear that it's a question of weeks, not months. And here we are at the end of the week and the Iraqis are suddenly inviting the arms inspectors back to Baghdad for further consultations. Could I ask both of you what you make of that?

THE PRESIDENT: Let's see if I can be polite. Saddam Hussein has had 12 years to learn how to deceive, and I would view this as more deception on his part. He expects to be able to convince 108 inspectors that he is open-minded. The only way that he can show that he is truly a peaceful man is to not negotiate with inspectors, is not to string the inspectors along, but to disarm in front of inspectors. We know what a disarmed regime looks like. We know what it means to disarm. There's no negotiations. The idea of calling inspectors in to negotiate is a charade. If he is going to disarm, he must start disarming. That's the only thing he needs to talk to the inspectors about, is, here, I'm disarming.

THE PRIME MINISTER: That's absolutely right. If you look back at the history of this, for 12 years, he's played these games. And that's why it's so important to realize what the U.N. inspectors were put back in to do. The U.N. inspectors -- and this is the crucial point, because it's on this basis that the whole issue of the U.N. authority rests -- the U.N. inspectors did not go back into Iraq to play a game of hide-and-peek with Saddam. They didn't go back in as a detective agency. They went back in under an authority that said that they had to cooperate fully, in every respect: the interview of witnesses, not just access to sites; honest, transparent declarations in the material they had. They're not doing that.

Now, why are they calling back the inspectors? I think it's fairly obvious. It's because as the pressure grows, they want to play the same games as they've been playing all the way through. That's why it's important we hold to the path that we've set out. They have to disarm. They have to cooperate with the inspectors. They're not doing it. If they don't do it through the U.N. route, then they will have to be disarmed by force.

Nate.

Q Mr. President, an account of the White House after 9/11 says that you ordered invasion plans for Iraq six days after September the 11th -- Bob Woodward's account. Isn't it the case that you have always intended war on Iraq, and that international diplomacy is a charade in this case?

THE PRESIDENT: Actually, prior to September the 11th, we were discussing smart sanctions. We were trying to fashion a sanction regime that would make it more likely to be able to contain somebody like Saddam Hussein. After September the 11th, the doctrine of containment just doesn't hold any water, as far as I'm concerned.

I've told you the strategic vision of our country shifted dramatically, and it shifted dramatically because we now recognize that oceans no longer protect us, that we're vulnerable to attack. And the worst form of attack could come from somebody acquiring weapons of mass destruction and using them on the American people, or the worst attack could come when somebody uses weapons of mass destruction on our friends in Great Britain.

Recently, Tony Blair's government routed out a poison plot. It should say to the people of Great Britain, there is a present danger, that weapons of mass destruction are a danger to people who love freedom. I want to congratulate you on your fabulous job of using your intelligence and your law enforcement to protect the people of Great Britain.

Today, Italy rounded up yet another cell of people who are willing to use weapons of mass destruction on those of us who love freedom.

And so, no, quite the contrary. My vision shifted dramatically after September the 11th, because I now realize the stakes. I realize the world has changed. My most important obligation is to protect the American people from further harm. And I will do that.

Thank you all very much.

Subject: REMARKS BY THE VICE PRESIDENT TO THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE WINTER MEETING LUNCHEON

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Vice President

For Immediate Release

January 31, 2003

REMARKS BY THE VICE PRESIDENT
TO THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE
WINTER MEETING LUNCHEON

The Mayflower Hotel, State Ballroom
Washington, D.C.

12:20 P.M. EST

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Thank you, all. (Applause.) Thank you, very much. (Applause.) Thank you. (Applause.) You're never going to get lunch this way. (Applause.) Thank you, all, very much. (Applause.)

Well -- (laughter) -- thank you. I appreciate very much that warm welcome. And, Ann, I want to thank you for your kind words today. And I'm delighted to have an opportunity this afternoon to spend some time with all of you. And, Governor -- Marc has done a superb job, obviously, as our RNC chairman. (Applause.) And he's got some great talent working with him in people like Ann Wagner and Jack Oliver. And they're a delight for those of us in the administration to have an opportunity to work with, as well, too.

The President and I are grateful to all of you for the tremendous effort that went into last year's campaign -- efforts that made all the difference in November elections. By your good work and by the leadership of a great President, the Republican Party is today the majority party. And now we intend to accomplish -- (applause) -- now we intend to accomplish great things on behalf of all the people of the United States. And I think after the speech the President gave on Tuesday, I know all of you are as proud as I am of President George W. Bush. (Applause.)

And as the President pointed out on Tuesday, we have a very full agenda for the nation for next year and beyond. This is going to be a consequential year in the history of our nation and in the history of freedom. We have many responsibilities, and we do not have the luxury of taking them on one at a time. We must meet them all. And under the leadership of President Bush, the government will work to build greater prosperity all across the land, and we will answer every danger and every enemy that threatens the American people.

This year we will honor a binding commitment to older Americans, working together to improve Medicare and to give all the seniors in the country the choice of a health plan that includes prescription drugs. The American system of quality care in the world offers the highest medical capabilities possible, and we must not undermine that quality with a nationalized health care system that dictates coverage and rations care. Nor should we stand by as the health care system is undermined by unfair and frivolous lawsuits against doctors and hospitals. (Applause.)

The lawsuit culture makes everyone pay more for health care. And it is causing many parts of America to lose qualified doctors. It's time to end these abuses with strong medical liability reform. It's also time for bold steps to enhance our energy independence and to improve the environment in ways that earlier generations would not have dreamed possible. The President has sent Congress a comprehensive energy plan to promote efficiency and conservation, and to develop cleaner technology and produce more energy right here in the United States. In addition, we plan to launch a major research project so that America leads the world in developing cars powered by hydrogen. With a major commitment to this enterprise, we will make the air cleaner and our nation much less dependent on foreign sources of energy.

Under President Bush, we will continue building a culture that upholds the dignity of every life. We will encourage the compassionate work of faith-based and community groups all across the country. And as a great nation, we will set a high standard for humanity by passing a law against human cloning and ending the practice of partial-birth abortions. (Applause.)

For the well being of America's families, we are working every day to set this economy on a path of rigorous long-term growth. President Bush has a very clear philosophy: We recognize that government does not create wealth, nor does it create jobs. The role of government is to remove obstacles standing in the way of economic growth.

America has faced a recession, terrorist attack, corporate scandals, stock market declines, and yet we have the strongest, most resilient economy the world has ever known. But we cannot be satisfied until everyone who wants to work can find a job. Our mission is to speed up economic growth and to add new jobs across the country.

Two years ago, Congress approved the Bush tax cut -- but held back on all of the tax relief until 2006. We believe that if tax relief is good enough for Americans several years from now, it is even better for America today. (Applause.) Instead of gradually reducing the marriage penalty, we should do it now. Instead of slowly raising the child credit to $1,000 by 2010, we should raise it now and send the checks to America's families as quickly as possible. And to promote corporate responsibility and governance, immediately draw more money into the markets, to treat taxpayers fairly, and encourage savings and investment, we are asking Congress to end the unfair double-taxation of dividends. (Applause.)

Under the President's plan, Americans will receive $98 billion in tax relief over the next 16 months. Nearly half of that amount -- $47 billion -- are tax cuts for small business owners. And to help ensure that small business people, farmers and ranchers can pass along their life's work to the next generation, we want to eliminate the death tax once and for all. (Applause.)

Yesterday's fourth quarter economic growth figures, I think, underscore the need for Congress to pass the President's jobs and growth plan just as quickly as possible. The President's proposals will reduce the tax burden on the Americans by $670 billion over the next 10 years. By leaving more money in the hands of the people who earned it -- people who will spend and invest and save and add momentum to our recovery -- we'll help create more jobs and ultimately increase tax revenue for the federal government. The return path to a balanced budget is to be found in faster growth in the American economy and spending discipline in Washington, D.C. In all of these proposals -- from better care for seniors, to legal reform, to greater energy independence, to the growth of jobs -- all of this will allow people to see the kind of focus, the clarity of purpose, and the sense of duty that Americans have come to know and admire in President George W. Bush.

With those same qualities of character he has also led the nation in a time of great difficulty and danger. And he's leading the world in an urgent battle against a very difficult foe, a scattered network of killers. Great decisions and crucial hours lie ahead in this war. But let there be no doubt, we will prevail. (Applause.)

Since the attacks of 9/11, every level of our government has taken important steps to protect America against terrorism. We created the Department of Homeland Security to mobilize against a wide range of possible threats. More than 50,000 federal screeners are deployed at our airports. We've put more marshals on airplanes and stepped up security at our power plants, ports and border crossings. And we've begun inoculating troops and first responders against smallpox and are stockpiling enough smallpox vaccine for every American.

We're using new technologies to detect weapons of mass destruction. We're developing a Terrorist Threat Integration Center to merge and analyze all threat information in a single location in the federal government. We're beginning to field a defense against ballistic missiles, and we are launching Project BioShield, a comprehensive effort to develop and to make available modern, effective drugs and vaccines to protect against attack by biological and chemical weapons or other dangerous agents.

With these measures, we seek to guard our nation against new and fearsome dangers. But while the threats we face are unprecedented, our responsibilities are very familiar. Once again, we are defending ourselves and the safety and survival of civilization itself. And as President Bush said, we accept this responsibility.

Today, America leads a worldwide coalition that is sharing intelligence, hunting down terrorists and freezing the assets of terrorist groups and front organizations. We've deprived al Qaeda of its stronghold in Afghanistan. And as we have seen just this week, we continue to disrupt their efforts in that part of the world.

We've captured or killed leading al Qaeda terrorists and have disrupted their chain of command. Our law enforcement and intelligence officials are working long and hard to stop terrorist plots, both here and abroad. And while many of their successes go unheralded, I can tell you that numerous terrorist attacks against the United States and our allies have been thwarted since 9/11.

The United States and our partners have also dismantled terror cells in Italy, Spain, Great Britain, Germany, France, Singapore and Malaysia. We've frozen millions of dollars in terrorist assets and arrested more than 3,000 suspected terrorists worldwide. And we have taken out of business many of the top al Qaeda leaders responsible for murdering innocent Americans and other citizens.

We will continue to hunt for those remaining at large. Where al Qaeda and its allies are concerned, we are dealing with a network that operates in 50 or more countries; that has murdered Americans in Bali, in Kuwait, in Yemen and in Jordan; and that is determined to acquire and to use weapons of mass destruction against us and our allies.

Against such enemies, America and the civilized world have only one option: Wherever terrorists operate, we will find them; wherever they dwell, we will hunt them down. We will also continue our efforts to address the very serious danger posed by the outlaw regime in Iraq. We will not permit a brutal dictator with ties to terror and a record of feckless aggression to dominate the Middle East and to threaten the United States.

Twelve years ago, Saddam Hussein agreed to disarm Iraq of all of its weapons of mass destruction. For 12 years he has violated that agreement, pursuing chemical, biological and nuclear weapons even while U.N. inspectors were in Iraq. Last fall, thanks to the leadership of President Bush, the U.N. Security Council unanimously passed a resolution giving Iraq one final chance to disarm. Inspectors were sent to Iraq not to determine whether Saddam has weapons of mass destruction, but simply to confirm that Iraq truly is disarming. Unfortunately, the declaration that Iraq provided to the United Nations last month about its weapons and missiles program clearly demonstrated that Saddam has absolutely no intention of complying with the world's demands.

Some time ago, the U.N. confirmed that Iraq had sufficient material to produce over 25,000 liters of anthrax, more than 38,000 liters of botulinum toxin, and as much as 500 tons of sarin, mustard, and VX nerve agents. We know that he had some 30,000 munitions capable of delivering chemical agents and several mobile biological weapons laboratories designed to produce germ warfare agents on the move. Yet Saddam Hussein has neither accounted for, nor destroyed these instruments of terror. And his desire for nuclear weapons is undiminished. Saddam Hussein is continuing his decade-old game of defiance, delay and deception. He's blocking unrestricted aerial reconnaissance -- as called for in the U.N. resolutions. His security agents are hiding documents and materials from U.N. inspectors. His intelligence agents are posing as scientists. And Saddam Hussein has decreed that real scientists who cooperate with U.N. inspectors will be killed, along with their families.

Saddam Hussein's pursuit of weapons of mass destruction poses a grave danger -- not only to his neighbors, but also to the United States. His regime aids and protects terrorists, including members of al Qaeda. He could decide secretly to provide weapons of mass destruction to terrorists for their use against us. And as the President said on Tuesday night, it would take just one vial, one canister, one crate to bring a day of horror to our nation unlike any we have ever known.

That is why confronting the threat posed by Iraq is not a distraction from the war on terror, it is absolutely crucial to winning the war on terror. (Applause.) America seeks a world at peace, but we will not accept a serious threat to our country, to our friends, and to our allies. Next Wednesday, Secretary of State Powell will present information and intelligence to the U.N. Security Council about Iraq's ongoing defiance. Our purpose is not simply to follow a process, it is to end the terrible threats to the civilized world. As the President said the other night, the course of this nation does not depend upon the decisions of others. Whatever action is required, whenever action is necessary, we will defend the freedom and the security of the American people. (Applause.)

Fellow Republicans, in this critical hour all of us are proud to be part of a cause larger than ourselves. We will support our President as he confronts every threat from every source that could possibly do harm to our country. We will make America stronger, better and more secure. And in all that we are called to do, we will serve the highest ideals of this nation -- liberty and justice -- in a world at peace. Thank you very much. (Applause.)

Subject: REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT ON GLOBAL AND DOMESTIC HIV/AIDS

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release
January 31, 2003

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
ON GLOBAL AND DOMESTIC HIV/AIDS

Room 450
The Dwight E. Eisenhower Executive Office Building

11:31 A.M. EST

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you all for coming. I'm honored you all are here. I'm so grateful that many from the diplomatic corps are here.

This is an historic year for America. It's a year of great consequence. It's a year in which we have an opportunity to work with others to shape the future of our globe. We have a chance to achieve peace. We have a chance to achieve a more compassionate world for every citizen. America believes deeply that everybody has worth, everybody matters, everybody was created by the Almighty, and we're going to act on that belief and we'll act on that passion.

You know, the world looks at us and says, they're strong. And we are; we're strong militarily. But we've got a greater strength than that. We've got a strength in the universality of human rights and the human condition. It's in our country's history. It's ingrained in our soul. And today we're going to describe how we're going to act -- not just talk, but act, on the basis of our firm beliefs.

I want to thank Tommy, he's the new chairman of the board of the Global Fund. He's also the Secretary of Health and Human Services, doing a great job for our administration. I want to thank so very much the ambassadors from Guyana and Uganda for standing up here with us today. I appreciate the other ambassadors from the continent of Africa and the Caribbean for being here.

With us as well is Bill Frist, a United States Senator, Majority Leader, passionate advocate of good health care for every citizen on the globe; a man with whom this administration will work, along with Russ Feingold, from Wisconsin, to make sure that the proposal becomes real. That means funded. (Laughter and applause.)

There's no doubt in my mind that when you've got the Majority Leader and a distinguished senator like Senator Feingold teaming up together, that this will get done. It's just a matter of time.

I'm honored that Mark Malloch is here -- Mark Malloch Brown is here, who is the U.N. -- administrator of U.N. develop program. I want to thank the U.S. Surgeon General, Carmona is here with us. Rich, thank you for coming. Andrew Natsios is USAID administrator. Dr. Zerhouni of NIH is with us. Tony Fauci is here with us. There are a lot of docs here today. (Laughter.) Julie Gerberding of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Thank you, all, for coming today. Les Crawford is the deputy commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration.

And, of course, a man who is on my staff who is going to make an enormous difference here and abroad as direct advisor to the President, and that's Dr. Joe O'Neill, who's the director of National AIDS Policy. He's about as fine a human being as you'll ever know. He cares deeply and his care has had -- he's got a lot of influence, let me put it to you this way, because of his convictions.

As I mentioned, we're a strong nation. But we're also a blessed nation. And it's important for our citizens to recognize that richness is one thing. Recognizing that we're blessed gives a different perspective, I think. I think it enhances the fact that we have a responsibility. If you're blessed, there is a responsibility to recognize your blessings in a compassionate way. Blessings are a two-way street. We've got to understand in this country that if you value life and say every life is equal, that includes a suffering child on the continent of Africa. If you're worried about freedom, that's just not freedom for your neighbor in America, that's freedom for people around the globe. It's a universal principle.

As I said in my State of the Union, freedom is not America's gift to the world, freedom is God's gift to humanity. Freedom means freedom from a lot of things. And today, on Africa, in the continent of Africa, freedom means freedom from the fear of a deadly pandemic. That's what we think in America. And we're going to act on that belief. The founding belief in human dignity should be how we conduct ourselves around the world -- and will be how we conduct ourselves around the world.

I want you all to remember, and our fellow citizens to remember, that this is nothing new for our country. Human dignity has been a part of our history for a long time. We fed the hungry after World War I. This country carried out the Marshall Plan and the Berlin Airlift.

Today we provide 60 percent -- over 60 percent of all the international food aid. We're acting on our compassion. It's nothing new for our country. But there's a pandemic which we must address now, before it is too late. And that's why I took this message to our fellow citizens, that now is the time for this country to step up our efforts to save lives. After all, on the continent of Africa, 30 million people have the AIDS virus -- 30 million people. Three million children under the age of 15 have the AIDS virus. More than 4 million people require immediate drug treatment. Yet, just about 1 percent of people receive drug treatment. It is a significant world problem that the United States of America can do something about. We can be involved.

Tommy mentioned the images, the horrible images, that take place in Africa. It's important for our fellow citizens as they listen to the dialogue on this initiative to understand that there are mass burials and unmarked graves on the continent of Africa. So many people are dying. But the graves are unmarked. The pandemic is creating such havoc that there are mass burials, that there are wards of children that are dying because of AIDS. Not a ward, not some wards, but wards after wards full of dying children because of AIDS. That there are millions of orphans, lonely children, because their mom or dad has died -- children left, in some cases, to fend for themselves.

Because the AIDS diagnosis is considered a death sentence, many folks don't seek treatment, and that's a reality. It's as if the AIDS pandemic just continues to feed upon itself over and over and over again, because of hopelessness. This country needs to provide some hope -- because this disease can be prevented and it can be treated, that's important for our fellow citizens to know. Anti-retroviral drugs are now dramatically more affordable in many nations, and these drugs are used to extend the lives of those with HIV. In other words, these drugs are really affordable.

And when the treatment has come to Africa, it is also important for our citizens to understand the effect of that treatment. It's called the Lazarus effect. When one patient is rescued by medicine, as if back from the dead, many others with AIDS seek testing and treatment, because it is the first sign of hope they have ever seen.

We have the opportunity to bring that hope to millions. It's an opportunity for this nation to affect millions and millions of lives. So that's why I've laid out the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief. I called it in my State of the Union a work of mercy, and that's what I believe it is.

With the approval of Congress, we will devote $15 billion to the fight AIDS abroad over the next five years, beginning with $2 billion in the year 2004. (Applause.) I've been asked whether or not we're committed to the Global AIDS Fund. Well, first of all, I wouldn't put Tommy as the head of it if we weren't. And more importantly, he wouldn't have joined if we weren't.

And so we're still committed to the Global AIDS Fund to fight disease. This program in no way diminishes our commitment to the fund. We will continue bilateral AIDS programs in more than 50 countries. We've already got bilateral relations with 50 countries with whom we're working on AIDS, and we'll continue that program.

But this plan that I've laid out in front of the Congress and will work with members of the Senate and the House on will dramatically focus our efforts. You notice I didn't say, "focus our efforts," I said, "dramatically focus our efforts." And that's important for the American people to understand, because we want to bring a comprehensive system. It's more than money that we bring, we bring expertise and compassion and love and the desire to develop a comprehensive system, work with people in Africa to do so, for diagnosis and treatment and prevention.

We are determined to turn the tide against AIDS. And we're going to start in 14 African and Caribbean countries, where the disease is most heavily concentrated. We whip it in those 15 -- or 14 -- we will show what is possible in other countries.

We're going to be involved with the fund. We'll continue to have bilateral aid. We want to have intense focus where the need is most severe, and show the world what is possible -- not just show our fellow citizens or show the folks on the continent of Africa, but the world needs to see what we can do together. The model has been applied with great success in Uganda. Anybody who knows the issue of AIDS on the African continent appreciates the efforts of Uganda. And we feel like that it can be duplicated. And that's the mission, the goal. Even though we're on 14 countries initially with this major focus, we understand there's suffering elsewhere, and we want to expand beyond. We want to encourage others to join us, as well.

The funding will initially go toward expanding existing hospitals, and of course, drawing on the knowledge and the expertise of local physicians. That makes sense. You've got a doc in place; we want to encourage that doc to be able to continue his or her healing. We'll build satellite facilities that can serve more people. Of course, we'll provide antiretroviral drugs, and as well, work with folks on the ground for education and care.

It's important for our citizens to know that the infrastructure is -- it's hard for many Americans to imagine the lack of infrastructure that we're working with on the continent of Africa. So we use motorcycles, trucks, bicycles. We use nurses and local healers to go to the farthest villages and farms to test for the disease and to deliver medications that will save lives. It doesn't matter how the medications get there; what matters is they do get there.

The facilities across Africa and the Caribbean will have now the medicine. And our fellow citizens must understand that the reason they do is because of your generosity, the taxpayers of the country. I hope when our citizens absorb that knowledge -- the massive attempt to save lives -- that they feel proud of their country, and proud of the compassion of America. We're going to work with other governments, of course, private groups, there's all kinds of faith-based programs involved on the continent of Africa, and we welcome that, of course. And we encourage that. And we thank you for that.

A fellow named Father Edward Phillips is here. Where are you, Father? Right there, yes. I thought you were Father Edward Phillips for a minute. (Laughter.) He is in Kenya, works in Kenya. He's obviously followed his faith. He leads an organization that provides testing and treatment in Nairobi. He's helped thousands of people every year. He ought to be giving this speech, not me, because he knows what it must feel like to play a significant role in saving lives. And that's what we're here to talk about today, how best to save lives.

And here's what the experts believe that will be accomplished, the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief. In this decade, we will prevent 7 million new infections. They will treat at least 2 million people with life-extending drugs. We'll provide humane care, of course, for those who suffer and, as importantly, for the orphans.

To me, that's just the beginning. But it's a pretty good start. Most important thing is we're providing hope, which is immeasurable. How can you possibly measure the benefits of hope? There's no -- we can't quantify that. But it certainly can be qualified by saying a hopeful society is a heck of a lot better society than what they found on the continent today.

This project is urgent, and as we move forward on this program we will continue to call upon other nations to join. The United States doesn't mind leading and we believe others have a responsibility as well, that we're not the only blessed nation. There are many blessed nations. And we hope they join us. And as well, we've got a lot of work to do here in America. It's important for our fellow citizens never to think that one initiative, or a major initiative, in Africa doesn't mean we're going to forget the 900,000 people living in America today who carry the HIV virus. Of course we'll never do that. It's important for our citizens to understand that there's 40,000 new infections every year in this country. It's an issue. It's an issue we must continue to deal with.

The AIDS diagnosis still obviously brings tremendous grief and worries in parts of our society. And so the budget I've submitted and worked with Congress on -- it will be a request for $16 billion for domestic HIV prevention and care and treatment, a 7 percent increase over '03. (Applause.) It's a $93 million increase for AIDS research, $100 million more to support the AIDS drug assistance program. (Applause.) This is a program which provides funding to purchase AIDS related medicines for those without health coverage. And we're going to help those abroad and we'll help those at home, as well.

We must also move quickly to increase the number of people who are tested for HIV. How can you treat if you don't test? How can you help if you don't know? And so the Food and Drug Administration recently has approved a new HIV test, which can provide results in less than 30 minutes, with a 99.6 percent accuracy. (Applause.)

So today I've got an announcement to make, and it's this, that the Department of Health and Human Services, after a lot of careful review, has waived regulations so that the test will soon be more readily available to doctors and public health facilities throughout the country. (Applause.)

As I've said, it's going to be a significant year for our country. I'm a person who believes that there's no obstacle put in our path that we can't overcome, I truly believe that. I love what our country stands for. I love the strength of America. The strength of America really is the -- lies in the hearts and souls of our fellow citizens.

As we move forward into the 21st century, there's no doubt we can help the people on the African continent, while we help our own folks at home with the deadly disease. There's no doubt we can arrest the pandemic. There's no doubt we can bring hope in all parts of the world, not only in Africa, but in neighborhoods in our own country where people wonder what the American Dream means. There's no doubt in my mind we can make the world more peaceful.

Today's initiative is one -- it's a step toward showing the world the great compassion of a great country. Thanks for coming, and God bless. (Applause.)

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

January 31, 2003

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I am pleased to announce the return of Governors Island to the people of New York. Last April, I informed the Governor and the Mayor of my intention to make this transfer, and today, the transfer is complete. Also, I am reaffirming our support for the Governors Island National Monument, which now will encompass approximately 22 of the Island's 172 acres, including historic Castle Williams and Fort Jay.

Governor Pataki and Mayor Bloomberg have shared with me their vision of a Governors Island dedicated to public and civic purposes. New York's stewardship of the island combined with the National Park Service's management of the Monument will lead to the development of an outstanding resource for the people of New York and all who visit.

I commend the parties that worked together to make this historic transfer a reality, including the National Park Service, the General Services Administration, the United States Coast Guard, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and especially the State and City of New York.

Remarks

Radio Address
February 1, 2003
Draft #5

Good morning.

Earlier this week I reported to the American people on the state of our union. I asked Congress to join me in meeting the great challenges that confront our Nation, with the courage and resolve our times require.

Working together, we will strengthen our economy and lay the foundation for sustained growth, so that every person who wants to work can find a job. We will modernize Medicare to make sure that seniors can choose the coverage that fits them best, including coverage for prescription drugs. We will reform America's medical liability system, to cut down on excessive lawsuits that are driving up the cost of health care. We will make America less dependent on foreign sources of energy, by speeding up development of pollution-free cars that run on hydrogen. We will renew the hope of welfare reform, and support the faith-based and community groups who bring hope and healing to children who need mentors, and men and women who struggle with drug addiction.

The qualities of courage and compassion that we strive for in America also determine our conduct abroad. Across the world, we are meeting the threat of terrorism to make the world safer, and confronting the grave dangers posed by outlaw regimes. At the same time, America can also make this world better, by bringing the merciful powers of modern medicine to people in great need.

Today, in Africa, nearly 30 million people have the AIDS virus – including three million children under the age of 15. To meet this growing crisis, I am proposing the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief. This comprehensive plan will prevent seven million new AIDS infections ... treat at least two million people with life-extending drugs ... and provide humane care for millions of people suffering from AIDS, and for children orphaned by AIDS. Facilities across Africa will have the medicine to treat AIDS – because it will be purchased with funds provided by the United States. I am asking the Congress to commit 15 billion dollars to fight AIDS overseas over the next five years, beginning with two billion dollars in 2004. This plan, coupled with our ongoing efforts, will nearly triple our current annual spending on the global fight against AIDS, malaria, and Tuberculosis.

Our efforts to combat AIDS in Africa are made more difficult by a severe food shortage sweeping that continent – a crisis that affects up to 30 million people in southern Africa and the Horn of Africa, particularly Ethiopia. Hunger, sickness, and grief have left people across the continent even more vulnerable to the effects of AIDS.

Across the Earth, America is feeding the hungry – more than 60 percent of international emergency food aid comes as a gift from the people of the United States.

Building on this commitment, my budget for 2004 calls for more than one billion dollars to meet emergency food needs worldwide. Today I announce a new proposal for a 200 million-dollar Famine Fund – to bring immediate assistance to Africa and other regions facing starvation. Money from the fund will be available to purchase food supplies directly, or to support farmers in food production. We will encourage friends around the world to set up similar funds, and leverage our combined resources to provide the most help to famine-stricken lands.

Through all of our efforts to fight disease and hunger, we can spare people in many nations from untold suffering. In Africa especially, millions are facing great affliction, but with our help they will not face it alone. America has a special calling to come to their aid, and we will do so – with the compassion and generosity that have always defined the United States.

Thank you for listening.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

MEETING WITH MAYOR BLOOMBERG AND GOVERNOR PATAKI

Friday, January 31, 2003

9:45 a.m. – 9:55 a.m.

Oval Office

Karl Rove / Margaret Spellings

I. PURPOSE

To greet Governor George Pataki and Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who would like to thank you for the transfer of Governor's Island to the people of New York.

II. BACKGROUND

You met with Governor Pataki (R) and Mayor Bloomberg (R) on April 1, 2002, to discuss the transfer of Governor's Island by the General Services Administration (GSA) to the people of New York through a sale of the Island for a nominal value. The meeting today is an opportunity for the Governor and Mayor to thank you for the transfer and to discuss their plans for the Island.

The actual details of the sale have taken several months to work through. In order to effect the transfer for low but fair market value (as required under law), significant land use restrictions were negotiated. The City and State have yet to finalize their development plan for the Island, but their intent is to utilize the Island for various educational and public purposes, with commercial development permitted only in limited circumstances.

Immediately subsequent to the conveyance of the Island, the National Park Service will receive back approximately 22 acres, which include the historic Castle Williams and Fort Jay. By proclamation, you will redeclare this portion of the Island to be the Governor's Island National Monument, thus assuring continued National Park status of these historic buildings. (The monument was first created by President Clinton in January 2001, but must legally be "re-proclaimed" as part of the overall transaction.)

The Office of Legal Counsel at the Justice Department has opined that the transfer complies with the Balanced Budget Act of 1997.

History of Governor's Island

The 172-acre Island, located one-half mile south of Manhattan, became a U.S. Army base in 1812. It was turned over to the Coast Guard in 1966, and in 1986 President Reagan, along with French President Francois Mitterrand, relit the Statue of Liberty, in celebration of its 100th anniversary. Two years later, President Reagan met with Mikhail Gorbachev on the Island for disarmament negotiations. In 1996, the Coast Guard relinquished Governor's Island to the GSA.

III. PARTICIPANTS

Governor George Pataki (R, NY)
Michael Bloomberg (R), Mayor, New York City

Gail Norton, Secretary of the Interior
Steve Perry, Administrator, GSA

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

MEETING WITH PRESIDENT'S ADVISORY COUNCIL ON HIV AND AIDS AND REMARKS

Friday, January 31, 2003

11:00 a.m. – 11:35 a.m.

Indian Treaty Room and Presidential Hall

Margaret Spellings

I. PURPOSE

To highlight your Administration's commitment to fighting HIV/AIDS at home and abroad.

II. BACKGROUND

Today, you will meet with members of the President's Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS (PACHA). The Council provides recommendations on the Federal Government's response to HIV and AIDS. After the meeting, you will deliver remarks to a group of domestic and international leaders in the fight against AIDS, as well as ambassadors from some of the countries most affected by the disease. In addition to highlighting your new global AIDS initiative and some of the highlights from your FY 2004 domestic AIDS budget (including a $93 million increase in AIDS research and a $100 million dollar increase for the AIDS Drug Assistance Program), you will announce Health and Human Service's approval of a rapid AIDS test that will be available for use in more than 100,000 doctors' offices around the country.

Since taking office, you have spearheaded significant advances in combating domestic and global HIV/AIDS. Overall spending on HIV/AIDS increased from $14.2 billion in FY 2001 to $18 billion in your FY 2004 request. You formed the Cabinet HIV/AIDS Task Force, co-chaired by Secretaries Thompson and Powell and strengthened the White House Office of National AIDS Policy (ONAP).

Your FY 2004 budget requests a 4 percent increase in HIV/AIDS research. You have supported funding for domestic prevention, care, and treatment (although you have not, until now, requested increases over congressional levels). You have improved management of HIV/AIDS programs to ensure that more funds are available to those most affected by the AIDS epidemic. You have expanded the capacity of the Community and Migrant Health Center Program and substantially increased support for substance abuse treatment – critical steps in fighting HIV/AIDS.

Even prior to the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, your global HIV/AIDS budget had increased by 87 percent over FY 2001 levels. When your new initiative is implemented, you will effectively triple our investment in global AIDS relief. This will have the following effects:

- Preventing 7 million new infections (60 percent of the projected 12 million new infections in the target countries);
- Providing antiretroviral drugs for 2 million HIV-infected people; and
- Caring for 10 million HIV-infected individuals and AIDS orphans.

You will meet with your President's Advisory Council and thank them for their service and have a photo taken with the 35 members. You will then proceed to Room 450 EEOB and give an address to approximately 130 people where you will:

- Reprise highlights of the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief;
- Stress the importance of the domestic AIDS situation, especially in minority communities;
- Stress the importance of a public health/medical approach to the HIV epidemic;
- Announce an increase in the AIDS Drug Assistance Program FY 2004 budget of $100 million dollars;
- Announce the waving of certain Federal regulations thus allowing the rapid HIV test to be widely available in health facilities and offices around the Nation; and
- Congratulate Secretary Thompson on being elected to the Chairmanship of the Board of the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, TB, and Malaria

Subject: 2002-2003 HoS Call List

Angela -- My apologies again for taking so long to get this done. Here is completed list for 2002 plus what we've done thus far this year. I haven't had time yet to do a thorough "scrub" to make sure I've got everything. If you see any glaring problems, please let me know and I will correct. Thanks again, Ralph
