Faith Connection

If Jesus were walking around today, I can only imagine that he'd be described with terms like weird, bizarre, nuts, or at the very least strange. Think about it: he preached love for enemies, he was derided for healing, and finally he died while forgiving those who tortured him. Why? Because his priorities were not those of this world but those of His Father in heaven. Instead of being concerned about possessions, reputation, success, or personal gain of whatever sort, Jesus was more concerned about love and what was best for others. Bella's priorities become radically altered when she falls in love with Edward. She grows more concerned about Edward and his family than even her own safety. As Christians we are called to love like Jesus, to take on his priorities, even when those priorities bring decisions others could call weird.
