SCHOOLPAY RELEASES THE SCHOOL OFFICE TERMINAL

Districts Support All Online, Mobile and In-Person Payments from One System

MADISON, WI (May 5, 2014) – SchoolPay (www.schoolpay.com), the only enterprise-level payment software exclusively built for K12, today announced an important addition to its suite of features, the School Office Terminal. The School Office Terminal is different than other “virtual terminals” because it is uniquely configured to work with the existing payment needs and accounting configuration at a school or school district. The School Office Terminal completes the company’s ambitious mission to manage every in-person, mobile, and online payment in a school or school district, from a single system.

“Districts love taking payments electronically. The efficiencies are tremendous. Funds flow faster and reduction in work creates hard dollar savings. To date, in-person payment has been the one area where funds could not move electronically. There are options available, like traditional terminals or new mobile payment products but they are one dimensional,” said David Dunaway, President and CEO. “Some of the new mobile payment products are appealing to schools but as stand-alone services they do not work in conjunction with a district’s existing payments or accounting system. The School Office Terminal, by being part of SchoolPay, does work with a district’s overall payment and accounting systems. Schools can now have all online, mobile, and in-person payments handled via one system, SchoolPay.”

SchoolPay’s School Office Terminal is available to all current and new SchoolPay customers. There is no additional charge for the School Office Terminal. It is simply included when a district or school purchases SchoolPay the award-winning payment system for Schools.
