Materials

Organic Cotton

Organic Clothing is just not a FAD; these green, organic, sustainable clothes support both the people and planet. Choosing organic clothing feels right, not just for your skin, but also for your conscience. They reduce environmental impact through the use of natural organic cotton which is grown without harmful pesticides & chemicals. This also reduces water usage & helps farmers stay healthy. (Did You know that many farmers suffer life threatening diseases due to use of pesticides without protection of masks & gloves)

Make a difference to your life, the farmers and support both the people and planet. Be the change.

Bamboo

Bamboo is one of the fastest growing plants in the world—emerging shoots have been observed to grow up to 3 feet in 24 hours. But did you also know that it is actually a type of grass? That's right, it's not a tree. What this means for the environment is that all the individual bamboo stalks are connected by a root system underneath the ground. When people come to harvest the bamboo canes by hand, only the stalks that have matured to three or four years are harvested, and the rest are left to grow. Bamboo can absorb a lot of water. The fabric will wick the moisture away from your skin as you sweat. You will feel cooler and more dry.

- Bamboo grows sustainably without harming the earth
- Bamboo gives back to the earth while it grows
- Bamboo fabric is very soft and hypoallergenic
- Bamboo fabric absorbs moisture
- Bamboo protects from UV rays and insulates
- Bamboo fabric is antibacterial and antifungal.

100% Recycled

Made from 60% Organic Cotton Waste + 40% Recycled Post Consumer Polyester (PET bottles) certified by Global Recycle Standard.

This is how we did it –

RENEWED – We salvaged waste cuttings from Organic textile production – which were then shredded back in to soft fabrics.

REJUVENATE – We then added fibers made from recycled pet bottles to create a blend of organic cotton & polyester.

REMAKE – We spun the blended fabrics into fine yarn from which we produced our latest 100% recycled range.
