

Greentech Capital Advisors announces the appointment of J. Michael Horwitz as Partner in their San Francisco Office

NEW YORK, April 19, 2016– Greentech Capital Advisors (“GCA”), a leading investment bank and asset management firm focused exclusively on the Sustainable Infrastructure sector, today announced that J. Michael Horwitz has joined the firm as a Partner based in their San Francisco office.

Jeff McDermott, Managing Partner of GCA said, “We are very excited to welcome Michael to the team. We have competed and collaborated with Michael in the sector for many years. Now we can combine our efforts to create the best outcome for our clients. Our business has grown significantly over the past seven years and we look for Michael to advance our continued efforts with our West Coast team as well as our global efforts around Energy Efficiency, Solar Energy and Distributed Generation.”

Michael started his Wall Street career 20 years ago at Alex. Brown & Sons. Since that time he has been involved in asset management, focused on the energy and industrial sectors, created research teams at Pacific Growth Equities and Robert W. Baird at the infancy of the Clean Technology sector and most recently Head of Energy Technology Banking at Baird as a Managing Director.

Michael Horwitz said, “I am excited to be joining GCA as I have admired Jeff and the team’s efforts in the sector for many years. Large multi national companies are comprehensively looking to participate in the enormous growth opportunities in the new energy era. As part of their efforts, I believe GCA uniquely provides the domain expertise and advisory experience these clients need.”
