JEREMIAH 26:1-19

One day God told Jeremiah to go to the temple and stand in the courtyard. God said, "Speak all the words I have told you, Jeremiah, to all the people there."

So Jeremiah went to the temple to give God's message to the people. Jeremiah said to the people, "If you do not listen to God and obey Him, He will destroy this temple."

All the people yelled at Jeremiah. They did not like what Jeremiah told them. "How dare you tell us these things?" they shouted. Then all the people crowded around Jeremiah while he stood in the temple courtyard.

Some of the officials at the palace in Judah heard about the trouble and they went to the gate at the temple. Some religious leaders at the temple told the officials that Jeremiah was saying things against the city.

But Jeremiah spoke up. He said, "It is certain that God sent me to the temple to speak all these things to you. Correct your ways and obey God. Perhaps He will not punish you."

Then the officials knew Jeremiah was God's messenger. Jeremiah had told them what God said, and now the people should ask God to forgive them.
