Called to Ministry

Guidelines for the Licensed Lay Ministries and Holy Orders

_in The Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe_
O God of unchangeable power and eternal light:
Look favorably on your whole Church,
that wonderful and sacred mystery;
by the effectual working of your providence,
carry out in tranquility the plan of salvation;
let the whole world see and know that things which were cast down are being raised up, and things which had grown old are being made new,
and that all things are being brought to their perfection by him through whom all things were made, your Son Jesus Christ our Lord; who lives and reigns with you, in the unity of the Holy Spirit,
one God, for ever and ever. Amen.

Section 5: Glossary
Ministry is the work of the whole people of God. Our life in ministry is our response to God’s call to us—God’s invitation to participate in God’s ongoing mission of redemption and reconciliation in all the world.

That mission, as we are taught in the Prayer Book’s “Outline of the Faith,” is “to restore all people to unity with God and each other in Christ.” There is no greater or more noble task in human life. And, of course, it is a mission that can be undertaken in any context—not only in the church. But the church is the place that prepares us to be faithful witnesses and effective disciples in every context of our lives.

Every baptized Christian is equipped in their baptism with gifts for ministry. All of us are invited by God to offer the gifts with which we have been endowed for the good of the church and the furtherance of God’s mission. Sometimes those gifts are best expressed in various ministries the church has discerned and given shape to throughout its history. The church is always at work seeking to understand more clearly the needs it has for gifts and talents in order to respond more effectively to God’s invitation, and to seek and engage those gifts as they are found in the baptized people who comprise the body of Christ.

The late Frederick Buechner famously defined “vocation” as “the place where your deep passion meets the world’s great need.” It is important to remember that there are two parts to that statement: our own individual passions, and the world’s needs. The church is many things, but it is surely a place in the world over which God has a particular and unique claim; and that means whenever we begin to sense a vocation by which to offer our gifts to the church in ministry, we seek to understand whether that vocation, and those gifts, meet the needs of the church.

This is the focus of the work of discernment. Disciples are people who live discerning lives; we are meant always to be seeking more deeply the heart of God, the mind of God, the will of God, the purpose of God, and to be seeking as well the strength and the discipline to align our lives with God’s plan. And because the church is the body of Christ, comprised of just such disciples, the church, too, is always seeking to follow God’s call. We are a pilgrim church, always called onward to follow more nearly the promptings of the Spirit.

Called to Ministry is the work of many people over many years. Its primary authors are the leaders of the European Institute of Christian Studies, the group of leaders within the Convocation whose gifts for ministry include a passion for giving shape and substance to programs of formation for all people in our churches; and the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized, the canonical commission of the Convocation charged with specific responsibilities for assisting and advising the bishop in the management of the ordination process. The document first appeared in 2016; this is the second major edition, and reflects an extensive revision of the materials pertaining to Licensed Lay Ministries in our church. Particular thanks go to The Reverend Michael Rusk, rector of Emmanuel Church, Geneva, for his leadership in this revision; The Reverend Deacon Richard Cole, also of Emmanuel Church, for extensive contributions to the first edition; and to my predecessor in this office, The Right Reverend Pierre Whalon, for his overall guidance in shaping the effort that led to this document.

One of the mistakes we often make is to think there are gradations or ranks in the ministries of the church. We imagine them to be all stacked up somehow, with some on the bottom and others nearer the top. But this is an incorrect and misleading way of thinking about ministry—and, indeed, one that fails fully to grasp the central, radical claim of the Gospel about our fundamental equality.
in God’s love. All ministries in the church are needed, and important; some are lay, and some are ordained. And in this church, the “Episcopal Branch of the Jesus Movement,” one of the most important ways that basic idea is through our commitment to sharing the governance of the church between ordained and lay people. Not surprisingly, one of the things this means in our church is that participating in the governance of the church—through participation in committees and commissions, election to Vestries or to the Convocation’s Council of Advice, and other forms of leadership—is one of the most honored, and important, expressions of ministry.

All people are invited by God to take part in God’s mission in the world. If you are reading this, you are beginning to explore more intentionally what that might mean in your life in the church; and I give thanks for your curiosity and your willingness to offer the gifts with which you have been richly endowed in your baptism. I hope, as you continue in your explorations, you will find worthy challenges and the reward of fulfilling service in your deepening life in the church. May God richly bless you in this work, as he has already richly equipped you for it.

Section 1: Introduction to Vocational Discernment

A Word of Welcome to the Vocational Discernment Process

As the baptized people of God, all of us are called to exercise ministry. “You are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, God’s own people, in order that you may proclaim the mighty acts of the one who called you out of darkness into God’s marvelous light” (1 Peter 2:9). All can offer their personal gifts and talents in the service of Christ and the church in a myriad of ways and in many ways over time. The church is in a constant process of discerning what ministry is called for by God to meet the specific needs of a particular place, time, and context. In hearing this vision and in responding to it, individuals and communities of faith may perceive a calling to a particular kind of ministry. The word “call” is usually used to describe that sense we feel when we discern the possibility of responding to some obvious need, and see ourselves in that role. Another word that will appear from time to time is “vocation”. Sometimes we refer to this as a sense of vocation. The individual’s sense of call and vocation is rooted in the call and vocation of the whole church to be the people of God.

The vision of the Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe is that the gospel mandate is put into practice, in part, by the discernment, training, and licensing of a range of lay ministries in parishes and missions throughout the Convocation. The bishop and Council of Advice perceive a need for these ministries to complement the ordained ministries of bishop, priests, and deacons.

This document, Called to Ministry—Part I, has been prepared as an introduction to discernment for all and as a guide for those who have noticed a desire to be of service in some formal way, and would like to take the steps necessary to become qualified in one of the ministries upon which the church depends. Another document provides guidelines toward ordained ministry. A third document provides supporting annexes.

The question may be asked of what qualities are being looked for and discerned by the Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe as it meets the missional challenges of today. The Holy Spirit has endowed the people of God with a wonderfully diverse array of gifts and we should not quench the Spirit by being too prescriptive as what may be needed. But there are qualities and skills that are particularly valuable in the European context:

- A deep spirituality and love of God as understood by Christians as God the Holy Trinity
- A commitment to regular worship and support of the local parish/mission
- A valuing of the Episcopal Church and its calling to be Beloved Community
- Appreciation of Holy Scripture as interpreted by the Episcopal/Anglican tradition
- A calling to inclusive ministry—reaching out to a specific group of people who may be marginalized in the life of the church and society.
- A passion for social justice to undo the unjust structures of society
- Ability to communicate in the local language(s) as well as English
- For public ministry, the ability to communicate Christian faith in an effective way both in-person and on-line.

Called to Ministry comprises five sections providing background and guidelines for all those in discernment in the Convocation. They are:

As you proceed through the pages that follow, you will encounter some words and phrases that are either new to you or may require some interpretation. Every attempt has been made to ensure that this document is easy to understand, but of necessity some terms are used that need explaining. A comprehensive glossary of terms is provided in Section 5, and you are encouraged to consult the glossary as needed.

When it comes to the training required for the Lay Ministries, the following abbreviations are made:

- EICS The European Institute of Christian Studies. A body in the Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe, appointed by the bishop, responsible for the training of lay and ordained ministries.
- CDSP The Church Divinity School of the Pacific, an Episcopal seminary located in Berkeley, California, with which the Convocation is partnered. CDSP provides study modules from its Center for Anglican Learning and Leadership (CALL).

The Ministry of the Baptized

The primary ministry of the baptized is that of continuing the work of Christ in the world. Ministry is a way of living in the world, aware that God acts in and through every Christian to bring to fruition God’s plan for all creation. It is the way we live when we realize that Christ encounters us in everyone we meet—family, friend and stranger.

One of the greatest challenges of the ministry of the baptized is its invisibility to the unknowing observer. Ministers wear no uniform or identification that sets them apart, confers status or authority, or automatically signals that these good works are done in the name of Christ. Every Christian must discover their own way of letting Christ be known through activities often not regarded as “religious.” This risk to be vulnerable in the name of Christ will often involve stress, conflict and confusion. Its model is Christ’s own public and often invisible presence in the world.

There are many ways to channel Christ’s redeeming love into our troubled world. Not only are we called to be caring, generous, tolerant and forgiving persons ourselves, but we are also called to redeem the mistakes, inadequacies and omissions of each other.

We are all sent to minister in the midst of the distractions, temptations and evil of the world. To do so requires recollection and mindfulness, patience and charity, and the ability to acknowledge faults, seek forgiveness and try again, and again, and again. It requires trusting that God will empower us each time we seek guidance and open ourselves to receive it.

The ministry of the baptized is exercised in two arenas: within the world and within the church. The primary arena is the world. With lives centered in the community of faith, the people of God are sent out to represent Christ to families and friends, communities, at workplaces and places of leisure, “bearing witness to Christ wherever we may be.”
Ministry Beyond Church Doors

In an ideal world, every person would go about daily life as a biblically knowledgeable representative of the Christian community, able to:

- proclaim the Good News
- live as a faithful steward of God-given gifts
- reflect Christ’s compassion to those who are afflicted
- seek ways to reach out to the oppressed
- and work diligently for justice and peace.

We are constantly re-learning how to open ourselves to the action of God’s Spirit so that we may be channels of God’s love. A supportive congregation will be involved in guiding and sustaining the ministries of its members in their daily lives—their lives in Christ—whatever their occupation or profession. As William Law wrote in the seventeenth century:

As a good Christian should consider every place holy because God is there, so one should look upon every part of one’s life as a matter of holiness, because it is to be offered to God. For as all persons, and all things in the world truly belong unto God, so all things are to be used, and all persons are to act in their several states and employments for the glory of God.

Those in worldly business, therefore, must not look upon themselves as at liberty to live to themselves, to sacrifice to their own humors and tempers, because their employment is of a worldly nature.... It is as much the duty of those in worldly business to live wholly unto God as it is the duty of those who are devoted to Divine service....

Individuals may differ in their employments, but yet all must act for the same ends, as dutiful servants of God, in the right and pious performance of their several callings.

The late James C. Fenhagen, sometime Dean of the General Theological Seminary, wrote:

We are being led to find deep satisfaction in small things... to find the satisfaction in ministry not in what is dramatic or successful in the world’s eyes, but more in the satisfaction of faithfulness and rootedness and the deep pleasure which comes when, by us through the Spirit, we see lives transformed and values changed because of the baptized who see themselves working in the world committed to making a difference. Sunday after Sunday, the Eucharist empowers the church. Life is uncertain, but for us the victory has been won by the resurrection of Christ. It is participating in this victory that gives our ministry power.

We know that all are called to represent Christ in the world. Most people do this quite directly, participating in the world beyond the church’s doors while earning a living and caring for family.

Ministry takes countless forms that stretch beyond the routine of daily life:

- nurturing and serving one’s own family
- acting to feed and shelter the homeless
- working on behalf of all persons with disabilities
- supporting victims of racial and sexual and economic oppression
- caring for children and the elderly
- practicing non-violence
- acting ethically in the workplace
- challenging the comfortable and affluent whose hearts may be hardened against others by fear of failing or by servitude to possessions or status
- sharing one’s faith with a friend
- engaging in the political process
• practicing responsible stewardship of environmental resources.

All of these and more, done for Christ’s sake, are ways in which the baptized proclaim Christ in deed, and summon the world to respond.

Ministries Within the Gathered Church

Seven major elements characterize the life of most congregations, sustain energy, and support member’s ministries in the world: Worship; Christian education; Pastoral ministry; Outreach to the poor and those in need; Evangelism; Stewardship; and Administration. All the baptized people of God may participate in one and very often more of the ministries simply as active members of the congregation. Those who wish to give greater emphasis and take on a larger and more responsible role may become a Vestry member. Another calling may be to consider the church’s calling to one or more of the lay licensed ministries. Still others may be called to one of the Holy Orders of priest or deacon.

Worship

Corporate worship is the primary point of contact and shared experience for all the baptized. It is the community’s center of religious expression, from which all other ministries of the congregation originate and are regenerated. In the contemporary understanding of the Eucharist in the Episcopal Church, all the baptized participate and the expression of this participation can be found in reading the lessons, leading the Prayers of the People, being a Eucharistic Minister or Visitor, the ushering, and the behind scenes role of being a member of the Altar Guild. A Worship Leader, licensed by the bishop, may lead Services of the Word in a parish or mission. A Preacher is licensed to preach. An Evangelist has a role in sharing the good news of Christ and a Catechist teaches the Christian faith through preparing candidates for Baptism and Confirmation. These lay ministries complement the ministries of bishop, priest, and deacon and are a witness to the inclusive, empowering love of God that utilizes all the gifts of the people of God.

The call to the Convocation is to develop these lay ministries to reveal the richness of ministry to which God calls us. In worship we render our grateful praise and thanksgiving, confess our sins, intercede for those in need, and seek guidance and strength for the tasks that lie ahead—whatever our daily vocation may be. All baptized people may also assist in planning and conducting worship, and serve as acolytes, choir or altar guild members, lectors, intercessors, and ushers.

Since the beginnings of the Episcopal Church, the canons have provided for licensed readers to assist the clergy and to conduct certain services when no clergy are available. In 1991, a major revision of Title III, the ministry canon, formalized a number of additional roles and established criteria for preparation and procedures for licensing. In 2003, an additional revision of Title III further refined these positions. (See the excerpts of the canons in the separate document of Annexes, and Section 2: Licensed Lay Ministries in this document.) The licensed ministries related to worship are Eucharistic Minister, Eucharistic Visitor, Preacher, and Worship Leader.

Christian Education

Next to worship, Christian education probably has the most influence on the life of church members. Most congregations sponsor educational programs and religious instruction for people of all ages, including church school classes for children, inquirers’ and Confirmation classes, adult forums, youth groups, parenting programs and vacation Bible schools. These offer opportunities for life-long learning, ever deepening exposure to the riches of Scripture and tradition, church doctrine and history, the inspirational lives of the saints, the example of the great prophets and martyrs, and the powerful witness of prayerful men and women throughout history.
Through educational programs, contemporary Christians explore centuries of the church’s knowledge and experience in order to relate it to everyday life in their own time and place. While Clergy may offer leadership in the educational life of the congregation, the community must also raise up lay educators to sustain and deepen the intellectual and spiritual life of its members.

In the Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe, the European Institute for Christian Studies (EICS), the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized (COMB), the Commission on Ministry with Children and Youth, and Education for Ministry (EfM) offer opportunities for growth and learning beyond the parish. Notification of these and other opportunities is distributed through the communication systems of the Convocation. The licensed ministry related to Christian education is that of Catechist.

Pastoral Ministry

Pastoral ministers in a congregation include all who share in building and bonding the community, and in nurturing and shaping the membership and congregational activities. They coordinate the congregation’s internal life and the organizations that complement its worship and education. Such ministry also recalls the early church’s understanding of itself as a mutually interdependent community whose members minister to one another, share each other’s gifts, and prepare to move out into the world.

Pastoral activities that support the life of the congregation thus extend well beyond conventional “pastoral visits” from the Clergy. They include prayer chains and telephone support networks, preparing and sharing food, arranging congregational fellowship, and the multitude of ways in which every Christian expresses care for each other through prayer and presence. Some communities have hospitals that offer training in pastoral ministry. Many congregations offer training to their people in pastoral ministries. Those wishing to pursue this more deeply as a licensed minister may consider becoming a Pastoral Leader.

Outreach

Each congregation’s ministry extends beyond its own membership. Outreach means living the Gospel by ministering to those in need. Begun in worship and fellowship, these activities lead outward in service to:

- The sick: bringing flowers, food and companionship to the sick or those confined to their homes; assisting with worship and fellowship in nursing homes; preparing meals for the homebound; walking for cancer research; running to raise money for AIDS or other causes; praying for healing; the poor and oppressed: sharing food, clothes, furnishings and money with the needy at home and abroad; responding to migrants and refugees; staffing soup kitchens, clothing exchanges and shelters; visiting prisoners; working for just labor laws and full employment; addressing the underlying causes of poverty, hunger, homelessness;

- The young and the weak: providing child care, pre-school programs and after-school programs; sponsoring sports and crafts programs; tutoring, mentoring; housing and staffing counseling centers; support for others whose needs are not physical but emotional and/or spiritual, opportunities for sharing one’s journey in Christ.

- LGBTQIA+: reaching out to all who feel marginalized; living out the motto, “God loves you, no exceptions”; welcoming and integrating all God’s people within the baptized people of God.

These activities and many others bear witness to God’s love and saving power, and create opportunities for sharing one’s personal faith and love for God.
Evangelism
Evangelism means proclaiming the Gospel by witnessing to the power of Christ to transform our lives, and inviting others to share in the transforming life of the community that is Christ’s Body on earth. Evangelistic ministry includes:

- the new member: inviting a person to one’s church; welcoming the new members into your midst.
- neighborhood Bible studies: sharing one’s own knowledge and experience of the Word.

While all baptized Christians are called on to be evangelists, those particularly gifted in this ministry and interested in a more formal role may consider becoming a licensed Evangelist.

Stewardship
Stewardship expresses in tangible form the gratitude and generosity of members in response to God’s love. It also provides the physical and organizational structures that make possible the congregation’s worship, life and ministry at home and beyond.

Through personal stewardship every baptized Christian shares in the community’s offering of itself to God, in service to the world.

Administration
Administration ensures the “institutional maintenance” of the congregation—its communications, finances, maintenance of building and property, stewardship, membership records, office activities and general administration.

Ministry in Daily Life and Discernment
Every member of a congregation is involved in aspects of these seven elements of the community’s life, the activities most readily identified as “ministry.” Every member is also called to live as a disciple of Jesus Christ in all aspects of daily life at home with family and friends; in the workplace with co-workers, customers, clients, bosses and employees; and in the community as responsible neighbor, good citizen, honest taxpayer and informed voter.

The church is not the only place where we experience God. We can experience God through the week. The church is the place we gather once a week to celebrate the ways in which God has been with us the other six days.

In everything, we are called to be a vehicle of God’s presence in the world. Given the new challenges each day brings, this requires both flexibility and a sensitivity to those around us in order to recognize how God might wish to love them through us. Are we willing to be used by God in answer to someone else’s prayer?

Discovering and affirming gifts and talents can be an exciting process. Discernment involves exploring how these gifts and talents equip each individual to minister both in the church and in the world. Such a process can help individuals and congregations deploy the great mix of gifts in response to God’s call, to witness to God’s love for the whole creation.

Personal discernment is as important for the person who enjoys preparing church suppers as for one called to priesthood. Knowing our gifts and using them to the degree that God intended is deeply satisfying. It provides freedom to express who we are in the context of obedience and service to God.

Being intentional about identifying gifts and talents may bring surprising results when unused or hidden attributes are brought to light. The cook may learn that others appreciate her reading ability.
as a lector. The mechanic may become a welcome visitor to the elderly. The doctor may become the fastest dishwasher on the kitchen crew.

Within the context of prayer and study, vocational searching often leads to questions about the various “orders” of ministry and the individual’s proper place within that matrix. God calls all Christians into ministry. Those called to the ministry of the baptized have a full and unique ministry as they continue to channel Christ’s redeeming love into our troubled world. Christians who experience God’s converting power in their lives will participate actively in corporate worship and fellowship, and in the programs and outreach projects of the congregation that best match their individual gifts and interests. Some may be called to a life of prayer and service as members or associates of a religious order. Others may be moved to pursue employment in church-related programs, serving full-time within the church community—teaching, managing buildings and financial affairs, directing outreach and service programs, as a musician, secretary or administrator.

In addition, intentionally using gifts and talents for the purpose of glorifying God can bring meaning to our lives. When our Lord said to Saint Peter, “Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets,” the apostle answered, “At your word I will.” He was not going to do something different from what he had been doing daily, but this very thing he had been constantly doing, he did now with a sense of vocation and as an act of responsive obedience. The sense of vocation may alter the whole condition of life. It may take one from an office to the priesthood, as it took Matthew from his customs to his discipleship. It may take another into the religious life or out to the mission field. It may, on the other hand, only change the motive and quality of the life, leaving it the same but transfigured and vastly enriched.

The Baptismal Covenant

The Baptismal Covenant is a series of renunciations and affirmations spoken by all candidates on the threshold of baptism, or on behalf of children too young to speak for themselves, in the presence of the whole congregation. It is often renewed in the context of a Sunday service when the bishop is present. It is important to reflect on this basis of our faith as a part of the discernment process. How does the discerning person live out this statement in his/her daily life? It is found in The Book of Common Prayer, pp. 304-305, and is included in the Annexes.

What does the term “vocation” mean?

What has brought you to the point of discovering this document? Whether it was personally observing some need, or matching one of your skills with some work that clearly needs to be done, or perhaps noticing another person doing something that you would also like to do, or as a result of your study of Holy Scripture, you are really responding to your call. You have taken the first step towards finding a path ahead that will enrich your own life, and the lives of others. It is a path that will encourage your spiritual life, and one that will explore and develop all that you have to offer, and desire to offer. This path is called discernment.

What does the term “discernment” mean?

Discernment is a process that allows us to distinguish between our own willfulness and God’s will; between our own self-defined purpose and God’s intended purpose for us; that is, God’s call to us to ministry. The verb discern comes from the Latin discernere, which means to separate or to distinguish accurately one choice, option, or object from another. The process of discernment, when applied to Christian vocation (the Latin root is vocare, “to call”), is the process by which we bring clarity and insight to the ministry to which we are being called by God.
Discernment is seldom a linear process that moves quickly or neatly and in an orderly fashion. Indeed, the discernment process is a life-long journey that continues even after we have initially reflected upon the issue of vocation. Discernment is at the heart of everything we do in life. It is important to understand that the work of discerning our ministry within the church is not merely a private or personal matter. Ministry is expressed within the church, and the leaders of the church have the continuing task of discerning the needs of the church for ministry as it responds in each new age to God’s call in mission. This means that work of discernment is something each of us does within, and in dialogue with, the community of faith that is the church. It is never sufficient for an individual to decide that they are called to one particular ministry or another; instead, our sense of call must be brought into conversation with the ways in which the church discerns the match between her people’s gifts and her needs in ministry. The more responsibility and authority entrusted by the church in a given ministry, the more rigorous and demanding are the processes of discernment.

So, welcome to this process! Some of your preconceptions will be challenged, and some of your innermost feelings will be encouraged.

While a sense of call is always personal, the development of ministries needs to be organized and, in many cases, supervised. The next paragraphs show how this works.

Processes for ordained and licensed ministries

As some go through a process of discernment, they may find themselves called to one of the lay licensed ministries or to ordained ministry. The licensed ministries are an expression of a particular commitment of being an active parishioner, require at least some training, can often involve more responsibility, and are carried out under the oversight of the priest-in-charge and the bishop.

The bishop of the Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe oversees the processes for becoming an ordained minister, and issues licenses for those kinds of ministry requiring oversight. Some of these processes must also conform to requirements of the church known as canons—that is, the guides and rules of The Episcopal Church as an entity, and as a result of the acts of the regulatory body of the church, known as General Convention, over the years.

Two groups assist the bishop in discharging this supervisory role. These groups consist of appointed members. They are:

COMB — Commission on Ministry of the Baptized

The role of COMB members is to oversee the actual discernment process for the ordained ministry of priest and deacon. For those exploring a vocation to be a priest or deacon, COMB journeys both with the individual and the parish/mission, providing resources for those whose job it is to assist in the discernment process i.e., clergy, discernment committee members, Vestry members, etc.

EICS — European Institute for Christian Studies

The role of EICS is to assess, facilitate and deliver the various kinds of training both for lay and ordained ministries.

For those called to a lay or ordained ministry, it is important to speak with your priest who will enable you to explore the path of discernment. For those called to lay ministries, the priest will communicate directly with the bishop. For those exploring a calling to be a priest or deacon, COMB will be contacted.
Training for licensing

Canon III: Ministry of the Constitution and Canons of The Episcopal Church provides the rubrics for ministry. Like each diocese of The Episcopal Church, the Convocation of Episcopal Churches in Europe has its own specific applications of the canon on ministry. The bishop of the Convocation invites those priests with legal responsibility for a parish or mission to discern to which of the licensed ministries a person is called. The priest informs the Vestry/Bishop’s Committee and then commends the person to the bishop for licensing. The bishop will refer the person to the European Institute of Christian Studies (EICS) so that the individual’s training needs may be assessed. EICS will assess the training needs and advise the bishop how much training will be required. Prior learning is taken into account. The bishop may license the person to a ministry while training is ongoing.

How to get started

You will have thought about your decision to follow your call, you will have prayed about it and you may have discussed it with your partner or friends. The very first practical step in the process is to prepare a personal statement. This document is the basis for your initial discussion, which will be with your priest. The statement will contain your vital information, your background, your educational qualifications, your personal and professional obligations, your affiliations and your motivation. The material contained in your completed personal statement will assist your priest in guiding you forward and will be a part of your discernment process. The information you provide will be available to the bishop, to the various persons, boards, committees and institutions that will become involved in your development and formation.

We recommend familiarizing yourself with the various ministries as outlined in this document—whether seeking discernment yourself or assisting or supporting someone else in discernment—in order to have a broad sense of the possibilities, qualifications and expectations of the various ordained and licensed lay ministries.

Ministries in The Episcopal Church

Ordered ministries

The Episcopal Church has maintained the threefold order of ordained ministry of bishops, priests and deacons which has characterized Christ’s One, Holy and Apostolic church since its earliest days. For those discerning a possible call to the priesthood, the ministry of this order, as described in the ordinal, is:

• To proclaim in preaching and in personal life the Gospel of Jesus Christ
• To preside at the celebration of the Eucharist and administer the Sacraments
• To bless and declare forgiveness of sins in the name of God
• To share with the bishop and other clergy (priests and deacons) and the laity in the decision-making bodies of the church—Council of Advice, the various committees and commissions of the Convocation, the annual Convention of the Convocation, and in governing and advisory bodies of the General Convention.

Further information about exploring a vocation to the priesthood can be found in Called to Ministry: Part II—Holy Orders, and at page 531 of the Book of Common Prayer.

For those discerning a possible call to the diaconate, the ministry of this order, as described in the ordinal, is:
• To make Christ and his redemptive love known to the world, and to interpret to the church the needs, concerns and hopes of the world
• To proclaim both in the ministration of God’s word and sacraments, and in one’s personal life the Gospel of Jesus Christ
• To share with the bishop and other clergy and laity in the in the decision-making bodies of the church.

Further information about exploring a vocation to the Diaconate can be found at Called to Ministry: Part II—Holy Orders, and at page 543 of the Book of Common Prayer.

Licensed lay ministries
For those discerning a possible call to explore a specific lay ministry, there are many ministries in The Episcopal Church to consider, seven of which require licenses:

• A Pastoral Leader is authorized to exercise pastoral responsibility, lead public worship and preach within a specific congregation where no clergy leadership is present. It is a role that may include significant administrative responsibilities. Congregations in need of a Pastoral Leader will be identified by the bishop as the circumstances arise. Read more: Section 2A
• A Worship Leader is authorized to lead Morning and Evening Prayer in a congregation with permission of the bishop and under the direct supervision of the Clergy or a Pastoral Leader. Read more: Section 2B
• A Preacher is authorized to preach with permission of the bishop and under the direct supervision of the Clergy or a Pastoral Leader. Read more: Section 2C
• A Catechist is authorized to prepare people for baptism, confirmation, reception or the reaffirmation of baptismal vows with permission of the bishop and under the direct supervision of the Clergy or a Pastoral Leader. Read more: Section 2D
• An Evangelist works with and is supervised by the Clergy, primarily within the context of their own congregation, to inspire, encourage and equip others to be effective witnesses to the Good News. Evangelists must be comfortable sharing their own faith stories in order to draw others to God. Read more: Section 2E
• A Eucharistic Visitor is a layperson authorized to take Holy Communion following the service to members of the congregation unable to be present. Eucharistic Visitors should act under the direction of a deacon, if any, or otherwise under the priest or a Pastoral Leader. Read more: Section 2F
• A Eucharistic Minister is authorized to administer the Chalice at a Celebration of the Holy Communion. Eucharistic Ministers should act under the direction of a deacon, if any, or otherwise under the priest. Read more: Section 2G

Ministries not requiring a Bishop’s License
There are a number of ministries with the church that do not require licenses, yet are important to the worship and witness of the church. Examples of these include, but are not limited to:

A Lector is a parishioner trained and appointed by the Member of the Clergy to read the Lessons, lead the Psalm, or lead the Prayers of the People.

An Intercessor is a person responsible for preparation and delivery of the Prayers of the People. Ushers welcome newcomers, distribute bulletins, assist in seating and guide the congregation during distribution of Communication.

Altar Guild members prepare and maintain supplies and vessels used during Eucharistic services.
Other ministries. Leadership from the laity is needed in many areas of the church’s life to assure the vitality of congregations. A primary task of clergy in charge of congregations is to identify, encourage, and empower those with gifts for these roles. Stewardship, Outreach, Music, and assistance in worship (acolytes and crucifers) are examples of these important ministries; there are many others.

Summary of process for licensed ministries

Note: In this document the member of the clergy or other leader exercising oversight of the congregation or other community of faith—known canonically as “clergy in charge”—will be identified simply as “local clergy.”

Section 2: Licensed Ministries

The Rich Diversity and Intrinsic Unity of Christ’s Body

For just as the body is one and has many members, and all the members of the body, though many, are one body, so it is with Christ. For in the one Spirit we were all baptized into one body—Jews or Greeks, slaves or free—and we were all made to drink of one Spirit.

Indeed, the body does not consist of one member but of many. If the foot would say, “Because I am not a hand, I do not belong to the body,” that would not make it any less a part of the body. And if the ear would say, “Because I am not an eye, I do not belong to the body,” that would not make it any less a part of the body. If the whole body were an eye, where would the hearing be? If the whole body were hearing, where would the sense of smell be? But as it is, God arranged the members in the body, each one of them, as he chose. If all were a single member, where would the body be? As it is, there are many members, yet one body. The eye cannot say to the hand, “I have no need of you,” nor again the head to the feet, “I have no need of you.” On the contrary, the members of the body that seem to be weaker are indispensable, and those members of the body that we think less honorable we clothe with greater honor, and our less respectable members are treated with greater respect; whereas our more respectable members do not need this. But God has so arranged the body, giving the greater honor to the inferior member, that there may be no dissension within the body, but the members may have the same care for one another. If one member suffers, all suffer together with it; if one member is honored, all rejoice together with it.

Now you are the body of Christ and individually members of it. And God has appointed in the church first apostles, second prophets, third teachers; then deeds of power, then gifts of healing, forms of assistance, forms of leadership, various kinds of tongues. Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers? Do all work miracles? Do all possess gifts of healing? Do all speak in tongues? Do all interpret? But strive for the greater gifts. And I will show you a still more excellent way.

—1 Corinthians 12:12-31

The years of reflection and revision that yielded the 1979 Book of Common Prayer of the Episcopal Church affected much more than simply the liturgical life of the church. In many ways, visible and invisible, it was a response to a growing sense of God’s call to raise up the ministry of all people in the work and witness of the church.

For most people attending a Sunday morning service in the Episcopal Church today, the changes wrought in 1979 are difficult to notice—because they now seem to self-evidently part of who we are. The participation of the laity in the worship life of the church—as lectors, eucharistic ministers, preachers—seem natural to us. But it is not merely our worship life that was shaped by these things. The old adage lex orandi, lex credendi—the law of prayer is the law of belief—helps explain why disputes over the form and content of liturgical actions were so bitter, even bloody, in the early years of the Reformation. But it might be somewhat more accurate today to speak instead of via orandi, via ecclesiae—the way of prayer is the way of the church. When our worship life more broadly and more substantively involves the participation of the laity, the rest of the ministry of the church begins to reflect that general movement.

This section of Called to Ministry examines in detail the canonically defined Licensed Ministries open to lay people in the Episcopal Church. It is perhaps important to note that while ordained ministries may be received between churches in full communion with each other—so, for example, deacon in the Scottish Episcopal Church may serve as a deacon in the Episcopal Church—the same is not true of lay ministries. A person licensed as a Worship Leader in the Episcopal Church is not recognized as a Lay Reader in the Church of England, for example, as that church understands the term; and a Lay Reader in the Church of England does not by virtue of that status become licensed in any lay ministry of the Episcopal Church.

Discerning and Directing Lay Ministries

In the Episcopal Church, the primary responsibility for identifying potential vocations to ministry, lay or ordained, lies with the clergy in charge of a congregation. Part of the leadership exercised by clergy in our congregations is identifying, encouraging, and developing the gifts God has bestowed on all the baptized for the ministry of God’s church. For all ministries, both lay and ordained, the clergy in charge of congregations have a primary role in nominating individuals for ministries; and in the case of all lay ministries, clergy provide basic formation and oversight of those licensed to perform these ministries.

Under the General Canons, the Commission on Ministry of the Baptized (COMB) “advise[s] and assist[s] the bishop” in “the determination of present and future opportunities and needs for the ministry of all baptized persons” and “in the designing and oversight of the ongoing process for recruitment, discernment, formation for ministry, and assessment of readiness therefor” (General Canons, Title III, Canon 2, Section 2 (b) and (c)). In the Convocation, responsibility for the development of implementation of programs for formation has been given to the European Institute for Christian Studies. COMB has a central role in the discernment of those called to ordained ministry is important, and spelled out in the General Canons; in the case of lay ministries, the principal discernment role lies with local clergy, while COMB’s role is to assist the bishop in establishing these guidelines.

In two specific cases of licensed lay ministries—those of Pastoral Leader and Worship Leader—the bishop may ask a candidate identified by clergy in charge of the sponsoring congregation to meet with members of COMB for an informational interview, with a view to advising the bishop on an individual’s formation needs for that ministry. In all cases of lay ministries, a license granted by the bishop is understood to be exercised under the direct oversight of clergy in charge of a congregation, and never separate from them. At any time the bishop may, at the request of clergy, revoke a license issued for one of the below lay ministries.

Section 2A: Pastoral Leader

A Pastoral Leader is a lay person authorized to exercise pastoral or administrative responsibility in a congregation under special circumstances, as defined by the Bishop.

Applicants for the ministry of Pastoral Leader are recommended by the clergy in charge of their sponsoring congregations to the bishop. The recommendation will outline the nature of the ministry envisaged and the qualities that the candidate would bring though exercising this ministry. The Bishop will refer candidates to EICS who will establish an appropriate training program. The Bishop may license a candidate prior to the completion of training.

The Pastoral Leader is a confirmed communicant in good standing or, subject to guidelines established by the Bishop, a communicant in good standing. The Pastoral Leader functions with the permission of the Bishop and under the direct supervision of the Bishop’s Office. Once licensed, the Pastoral Leader functions at the discretion of the Bishop. The license is only valid within the congregation in which the Pastoral Leader is a member at the time of licensing. A Pastoral Leader, however, with written permission of the Bishop, may serve another congregation within the Convocation when clergy are not available. The Pastoral Leader, under the direction of the Bishop’s Office, will pursue a program of continuing education set out by EICS.
Training

Applicants for the ministry of Pastoral Leader will be trained under a program devised by EICS appropriate to this ministry, and, if necessary, modified according to the applicant’s previous education and experience. The program may be primarily self-study or distance study and may include reading material, seminars, webinars or actual courses. Applicants will also need to undertake a program of Clinical Pastoral Education, which takes the form of on-the-job experience in some clinical setting, approved by the Bishop. The areas of study are:

Section 3: Holy Orders

Ordained ministry in The Episcopal Church

As noted in Section I, The Episcopal Church, throughout its history, has maintained the threefold nature of ordained ministry inherited from the earliest, undivided church.

Deacons (from the Greek διάκονος) were the first order of ministry to emerge following the day of Pentecost and the commissioning of the apostles to be the leaders of the church, the newly constituted Body of Christ alive and at work in the world. As the church grew, and as the ministry of serving the needs of the poor and vulnerable in fulfillment of Christ’s commandment of neighbor-love became a hallmark of the early church, the need grew to commission individuals gifted for the ministry of service to others on behalf of the community of faith. All baptized Christians are called to care for and serve the poor in Christ’s name; deacons have a unique responsibility to interpret the world’s needs into the church’s life and witness, and to bring the church’s ministry to the world. A sign of this responsibility are found in the liturgical roles typically reserved for deacons—proclaiming the Gospel in the service of Eucharist, leading the intercessions offered by the people, and dismissing the people out into the world. Deacons historically have a direct responsibility to the bishop, which is expressed in, but not limited by, service in the setting of a congregation.

All people in ordained ministry are first ordained as deacons. Some people are called to a distinctively diaconal ministry; in the Episcopal Church, these people are known as Vocational Deacons. Those in whom the church has discerned a call to the priestly ministry are sometimes referred to as “Transitional” Deacons; they will go on to be ordained to the priesthood after serving the church as a deacon for a period of time defined by the canons, and determined by the bishop. In a sense, however, all ordained ministry has its foundation in diaconal ministry.

Those in whom the church discerns a call to the Vocational Diaconate sometimes serve as deacons in the congregation that sponsored them for ordination. Of course, once ordained, a deacon—Vocational or Transitional—is a deacon in the whole church. Moreover, as noted above, deacons—in the words of our canons—“serve directly under the authority of, and are accountable to the bishop, or in the absence of the bishop, the Ecclesiastical Authority of the Diocese.” This means the bishop has the authority to assign deacons to ministries in the Convocation.

Priests (from the Greek πρεσβύτερος, literally “an elder”) were the last of the orders of ministry to emerge in the history of the church. Scripture mentions the ordination of elders (Acts 14:23), but does not provide a clear record of the emergence of this ministry (in contrast to that of bishops and deacons). Still, it is clear that the ministry of priests emerged very early and from sheer necessity. The sacramental life of the church—the authority to bless, to absolve, to consecrate the Eucharist, to invoke God’s divine presence in the physical world of creation by sanctifying things set apart for God’s service—had remained uniquely the role of the apostles, and later, as their successors, bishops. But the growth of the early church meant that bishops alone could not adequately provide the sacramental ministry needed by faithful communities. As churches grew in places apart from the bishop’s seat in a given place, leaders were needed whose depth of faith and strength of character was such that the bishop could entrust to them those aspects of the church’s sacramental ministry necessary for life together in Christian community.

Priests, like deacons, are never members of the congregations they serve. Their membership is in the clergy of the diocese (or in our case, Convocation) of which they are a part. They are expected to live in mutual accountability to each other, and in communion with the bishop whose ministry they exercise in a given congregation. The expectations guiding the exercise of the priestly ministry, and of the personal and professional conduct of priest, are found in both formal and informal sources—the canons of the church, the customary set out by a bishop, and the received traditions and best practices of the church.

This is one of the reasons why it is a long-established practice of the church that a priest, when ordained, does not return to the sponsoring congregation to function in priestly ministry. The responsibilities of formation, pastoral confidences, and admonition that are part of the life and work of priests cannot be exercised as the church needs them to be exercised among people whom one has first known as a fellow-member of that community. If the sense of call to ordained ministry is felt to be one that will be expressed within one’s own community, the church understands that as a call to the Vocational Diaconate.

Bishops (επισκοποι) are understood to be the successors of the apostles, with a ministry that calls them to “contend for the faith that was once for all entrusted to the saints” (Jude 1:3). The bishop is the chief pastor of the church and the chief defender of the integrity of the faith—spoken of, in our church, as “the doctrine, discipline, and worship” of The Episcopal Church. As a reflection of the way in which our Anglican inheritance was shaped and influenced by the experience of Revolution in America, bishops in our church are elected by the people and clergy whom they will lead in a diocese; and, in a further expression of that idea, the election of a bishop in this church must be consented to by a majority of both those bishops with jurisdiction over dioceses and the people of the church, as reflected in the Standing Committees (comprising both lay and clergy members) of each diocese.

The purpose of ordained ministry in God’s church

Taking all this in view helps to explain why it is certain orders of ministry are authorized to do certain things and not others. Those rules are part of our tradition, yes, but they are not only that; they emerged from, and continue to serve, the needs of the church brought into being by the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

This point cannot be too strongly stressed, and we invite you to give it prayerful consideration as you consider your own vocation in the church. A vocation to ordained ministry must bring together two things, identified through a process of discernment as fruitfully connected: The gifts, skills, and character of an individual Christian desiring to serve the church; and the needs of the church for ordained ministry, as the church has discerned them. Ordination never has the purpose or the function of validating an individual’s spirituality or giving public approbation for the strength of one’s faith. This church neither identifies candidates for ordained ministry nor ordains new members of the clergy based only on a consideration of their way of articulating their sense of a vocational call.

One other word of caution. In the tradition of the church, certain forms of distinction are given to ordained clergy, as a mark of respect or honor. Examples of this include the use of honorific titles (“The Reverend,”) or the wearing of distinctive vesture in the liturgy (stoles, chasubles) or in day-to-day life (clerical collars). All of these things are products of tradition; they have no standing either in Scripture or (in this church) in canon.

All those who come discerning a call to ordained ministry have genuine gifts to offer; and one purpose of the discernment process is to identify and clarify those gifts and to consider their alignment with the needs of the church. At the same time, all those who come discerning a call also bring to that conversation needs of their own—needs for inclusion, for acceptance, for service, for leadership. That is entirely legitimate, and the work of discernment is done best when both gifts and needs can be fully and prayerfully examined. That said, the need for distinction—a desire to be seen as somehow different, set apart, or above others—is not well aligned with success in the life of ordained ministry. The teaching of the Epistle to the Philippians about the kenotic nature of Christ’s ministry is wise counsel to those beginning the work of discerning a call to ordained ministry in the church; a deep capacity for self-awareness, as well as the humility that grounds the discipline of “self-emptying” to be filled with God’s grace, is the best foundation on which to build a life of service in orders.

The Needs of the Church in Our Time and Context

Each diocese in the Episcopal Church must discern God’s call in mission for the years ahead, and how that call shapes the church’s evolving needs for leaders in ordained roles. At the same time, once ordained in any capacity, one is ordained in the whole church—not merely in the Convocation or a given diocese. Because of this, a particular responsibility rests with the leadership of the Convocation, and especially the bishop and the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized, to discern those needs within the Convocation, while being apprised of the wider trends shaping the needs of the whole church for ordained ministry.

This document is written in the first half of the twenty-first century, within the mission context of Europe. The Episcopal Church is present in eighteen countries; the Convocation encompasses seven of these. Our context is profoundly secularized. Anglicanism, the broad tradition of which we are a part, has no native home in continental Europe. Of the four Anglican jurisdictions present in Europe, two are the result of expatriate communities forming for worship (The Episcopal Church and the Church of England), while two others are nationally defined and the result of a conscious, costly choice to separate from the Roman Catholic Church at the time of the First Vatican Council (The Iglesia Española Reformada Episcopal in Spain, and the Igreja Lusitana Católica Apostólica Evangélica in Portugal).

Our communities are a mix of expatriates from the United States and other English-speaking countries and the local communities we serve. While most of our parishes were founded by American expatriates, they are no longer a majority community in any of the Convocation’s congregations. We are multilingual and multiracial, drawn from many continents and cultures, and representing many of the Provinces of the Anglican Communion. Presiding Bishop Michael Curry has spoken of us as “the most diverse judicatory in the entire Episcopal Church,” and we recognize ourselves in that description.¹

We have discerned a call to ministry in the Convocation as a migrant church and a church on the move. We believe God calls us to a ministry far beyond chaplaincy to a local community of English-speakers, but to a vibrant ministry of service to those who, like us, are migrants in our midst. That can take many forms; people experiencing the vulnerability of dislocation and refugee status, as well as people migrating away from the secularism of their culture and upbringing into an exploration of faith in Jesus Christ.

We also know that The Episcopal Church has been marked by its growth as a church on the frontier. There is an important and legitimate critique being brought to the “doctrine of discovery” that justified the westward movement of European migration, first across the Atlantic and then across the North American continent—a movement that was enabled by enslavement and resulted in the destruction of countless indigenous communities and the lives that flourished in them. Yet it is possible at one and the same time to acknowledge and lament that reality and still see how the formative ideas about ministry in the Episcopal Church—and especially our understanding of missiology, the response of the church to God’s call in mission—were shaped by the experience of moving with the frontier. (This lies at the heart of why the formal name of our church is “The Domestic and Foreign Missionary Society” of the Episcopal Church. We, in the Convocation, are a large part of what “Foreign” signifies in that name.

In no small way, the Convocation is where The Episcopal Church lives out its frontier experience in the early twenty-first century. We are the church on the frontier—on the frontiers of secularism, on the frontiers of a place where we have no part in the deep local religious histories of the places in which we gather and serve. We are a church exploring the frontiers of truly diverse, truly multilingual, truly multicultural faith communities—all the while seeking to discern, name, and uphold what makes us at the same time distinctively Episcopal.

The Church’s Needs for Ordained Leadership

With all this in view, the ordained leaders the church needs in the coming decades will bring gifts and passions that can help communities flourish as they respond to God’s call in mission. These gifts are:

- A deep and grounded spirituality and sense of confidence in God’s presence and purpose in their lives.
- A demonstrated capacity for leadership in communities and organizations.
- A willingness to engage in conversation with others about matters of spiritual life and meaning, founded on skills for listening and a capacity for empathetic understanding.
- An ability to offer a compelling, apologetic argument for the Christian faith.
- A capacity for living by a rule of life, and a willingness to conduct one’s personal and professional life within the discipline of the profession of ministry.
- Skills in languages and cross-cultural living and working.
- A commitment to seeking, developing, and celebrating the gifts of all people for the full expression of the ministry of the church.
- A willingness to work through the church to extend the gifts of sacramental life to all people, regardless of race, class, ethnicity, sexual orientation, or gender identity.

Aspirants for entry into the ordination process will be asked to share with those who walk with them in discernment how they see their own lives reflecting these needs of the church.

Discernment, Formation, and Deployment

The canons of the Episcopal Church, together with long-established practices for the work of discernment, shape the path from aspiration to ordination. As a general observation, there are three phases to this work:

The process of discernment which brings together those sensing a call to ordained ministry with representatives of a congregation and the wider church to explore together this call with reference to the church’s needs. At different points along this path, the bishop decides whether an aspirant should proceed to the next step of the process. The end of the discernment process is a determination as to whether an aspirant is admitted as a postulant to the ordination process.

The process of formation for the ministry to which the postulant is called. The time of formation prepares a postulant for the requirements set out in the canons for those being ordained as deacons and priests in the church. The first stage in this process is formation as a postulant for ministry; within a period of time set out by the canons, customarily after eighteen months of postulancy, determination is made as to whether a postulant should proceed to become a candidate for ordination. When the period of candidacy has been successfully completed, the bishop presents
Note that at various points along this path, decisions are made as to whether an individual proceeds to the next step in the formation process. In essence, this means that the time of formation is also a period of continuing discernment. At any point, an individual in the formation process may decide not to continue with their formation, and leave the process leading toward ordination. In addition, at any time up to approval as an ordinand the bishop may remove an individual from the process of formation and terminate their continued participation in the ordination process in the Convocation.

The deployment process is the time at which a newly ordained person first enters into the work of that order of ministry. It is a time of continued formation in the life and work of ministry, and responding to new expectations about gathering with clergy colleagues, being in relationship with the bishop, and taking part in programs designed to further one’s preparation for service to the church.

The Discernment Process

The Discernment process is designed to help an individual and the wider church discern together whether that person is called to an ordained ministry in the church God is calling into the future.

Whether an individual senses a call to ordination as a deacon or a priest, the initial steps of the process are the same. As a part of these early steps, an individual is expected to be open to questions about the nature of their vocation, and the clarity of their understanding about the ministry of the order to which they are called.

The narrative description below follows the path illustrated in the flowchart included as Figure 1 (next page). As an introductory note, it is the expectation of the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized that any person seeking to become an aspirant in the Convocation will have been part of a congregation of the Convocation for a period of at least two years, and ideally will have taken an active part in parish organizations during that time. In addition, it is an expectation of COMB that any individual beginning a formal process of discernment will have taken part in a Discernment Conference organized by COMB.

- The individual aspirant meets with the clergy in charge of the congregation to express an interest in ordained ministry.
- Following this conversation, the clergy in charge decides whether it is appropriate to inform the bishop of the individual’s interest.
- The bishop then interviews the individual, most likely during the next congregational visitation. This interview should take place in the presence of the clergy in charge.
- Following this conversation, the bishop decides whether to authorize the formation of a parish discernment committee. The bishop also notifies COMB of this decision. The individual then becomes a Nominee.
- The clergy in charge of the congregation, working with the Nominee, identifies a group of between five and seven people to serve as a parish discernment committee. The clergy in charge notifies the bishop’s office of the membership of this committee for the bishop’s approval.
- A member of COMB trains the parish discernment committee on how to approach their work. It is important that members of this committee have the ability to consider both the gifts of the individual Nominee and the needs of the church in undertaking their conversations. A member of COMB may be a member of the parish discernment committee.
- The Committee comes to a decision and makes a recommendation to the Vestry.

If the recommendation of the committee is to support the Nominee in moving ahead in the process, the Vestry (or Bishop’ Committee) votes on that recommendation. The recommendation takes the form of a letter from the Vestry to the bishop supporting the Nominee for postulancy, and must be signed by two-thirds of the members of the Vestry. The canons require that the Vestry’s letter also include a commitment on the part of the community to “pledge to contribute financially” to the Nominee’s preparation for ministry, and to “involve itself in the Nominee’s preparation for ordination” to the order to which they are called.

The clergy-in-charge submits a separate letter, alongside this recommendation, giving their views on the Nominee’s gifts for the ordained ministry of the church. Both of these documents are submitted to the bishop’s office.

If the Vestry has voted to support the nomination, the Nominee formally accepts the nomination of the Vestry in a communication sent to the bishop’s office.

The Nominee also completes the “Application for Postulancy” form and submits this to the bishop’s office.

With the Vestry’s nomination form, clergy letter, acceptance of nomination, and application for Application for Postulancy in hand, the bishop now decides whether the Nominee should move forward formally in the discernment process. If the bishop decides that the individual should not continue, the process of exploration may be repeated at a later date, at the bishop’s discretion. An individual admitted to the discernment process at this point is formally an “Aspirant.” The bishop’s decision is communicated to the individual in writing, with a copy provided to the clergy in charge of the sponsoring congregation.

If admitted to the formal process, the Aspirant must take the following steps before a formal interview with the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized:

- Completion of the Background Check Release form
- Completion of the “Hold Harmless” agreement
- Completion of the “Behavior Screening Questionnaire”
- Completion of the Medical Examination form. Note: This form may be completed by a physician of the aspirant’s choosing.
- Completion of the “Life History Questionnaire” (of which more below).
- All of these forms are sent to the bishop’s office and are made part of the Aspirant’s file.
- The bishop appoints a mental health professional to conduct an interview with the Aspirant. If it is necessary for the Aspirant to travel for this interview, the Convocation will provide for the costs of travel and lodging consistent with the Convocation’s travel policies.
- The aspirant sends the “Life History Questionnaire” directly to the mental health professional. This document is not sent to the bishop’s office and is not part of the applicant’s file; its purpose is to provide background to the mental health professional.
- Following the interview, the mental health professional appointed by the bishop sends a completed “Mental Health Assessment” form to the bishop’s office.
- The bishop, with all of the above information in hand, decides whether the aspirant should proceed forward to a formal interview with the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized. If the bishop decides not to permit the aspirant to continue forward in the process, that decision is communicated in writing. The bishop also determines whether the aspirant may reenter the process in the Convocation at a later date.
If the Aspirant moves forward in the process, a time for a formal interview with members of the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized is arranged. This is typically at a retreat organized for the purpose, with other Aspirants.

The Aspirant’s file, as held in the bishop’s office, is shared with members of COMB as background for the conduct of their interviews.

If the Aspirant chooses to move forward to a formal interview with the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized, and the outcome of the process is to determine that the Aspirant is not called to ordained ministry, the Aspirant may not again apply for postulancy in the Convocation. It is important to keep this in mind in weighing the decision of whether or not to proceed with formal interviews.

The members of COMB conduct their interviews with the Aspirant, following which the Commission sends to the bishop a report on the Aspirant with a recommendation.

The Council of Advice also conducts an interview with the Aspirant, typically via web conference.

With the recommendation from COMB in hand, the bishop makes a decision as to whether to permit the Aspirant to move forward in the discernment process.

The canons require that before granting admission as a postulant, the bishop shall:

- Determine that the aspirant is a confirmed adult communicant in good standing in the Episcopal Church;
- Confer in person with the Aspirant; and,
- In the case of those considered for postulancy to the priesthood, consult with the Aspirant regarding financial planning and the resources that the aspirant will draw on while preparing for ordination.
- Upon admission, the Aspirant becomes a Postulant, within the meaning of the General Canons of the Episcopal Church.

The Formation Process: Postulancy and Candidacy

The formation process involves the individual, the sponsoring congregation, any institutions of education attended by the individual, the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized, the Director of Ordinands, the Council of Advice, and the bishop. The bishop’s role is to determine, at specific points along the path, whether an individual proceeds from one step to the next of a process; and to set in place a means of assuring that the requirements of the canons are fulfilled as each person moves towards ordination. A more detailed description of the Formation process is set forth in a handbook for postulants and candidates.

The canons set out two phases of the formation process: Postulancy and Candidacy. Both are times of preparation for the ministry to which one has been called. In addition, both are times of continued discernment, with the understanding that as one learns more about the nature and expectations of ordained ministry, a clearer view will be formed about one’s own sense of call to that ministry.

Some of the requirements of postulancy and candidacy are set out in the canons. They must write to the bishop for times each year (on the Ember Days), reporting on their academic and spiritual growth and sense of call. They must be in relationship with the Convocation’s Director of Ordinands, with whom they will develop a Plan for Formation appropriate to the needs of the church in ministry, their personal circumstances, and the canonical requirements for ordination.

Other requirements are put in place by the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized and the European Institute for Christian Studies, the Convocation’s commission for formation. Postulants and Candidates should attend an annual retreat at a time organized by the Convocation. They must have a Spiritual Director, with whom they meet at least twice a year. They should also enter into the disciplinary expected of all ordained clergy in the church of reading the daily office.

While the canonical requirements for Vocational Deacons and those called to ordination as a priest vary in some ways, certain requirements and provisions are common to both:

• Once an individual is a postulant, at a certain point determined by the Plan for Formation they must apply to be made a candidate for ordination.

• Candidates must remain in canonical relationship with the Convocation, unless, for reasons acceptable to the bishop, the Candidate requests to be transferred in that status to another diocese. (Postulants may not transfer their canonical relationship.)

• The bishop has sole discretion over whether to remove a postulant or a candidate from the ordination process. The decision to do so must be communicated in writing to the individual and the individual’s sponsoring parish, the Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized, the Director of Ordinands, and the Council of Advice.

• Once an individual is a candidate, at a certain point determined by the Plan for Formation they must apply for ordination to the order to which they and the church have discerned they are called.

• All those preparing for ordination in this church must document that they have received training regarding:
  » Prevention of sexual misconduct against both children and adults; » Civil requirements for reporting and pastoral opportunities for responding to evidence of abuse;
  » The Constitution and Canons of The Episcopal Church, with particular emphasis on the disciplinary canons (Title IV); and
  » The church’s teaching on racism.

• An individual must be at least twenty-four years of age when first ordained.

• The Commission on the Ministry of the Baptized must provide to the bishop a certificate recommending ordination of the individual.

• The bishop must present to the Council of Advice certain documents specified by the canons; and the Council of Advice must vote to certify that the canonical requirements for ordination have been met.

The Deployment Process

Once ordained, a member of the clergy is a member of the clergy of the Convocation (or of the diocese in which they then serve), and no longer a member of the parish that sponsored them for ordination. They live under the discipline of the canons of the church.

It is important to note that ordination as either a deacon or a priest in The Episcopal Church does not provide any assurance of employment in that order of ministry. Employment in The Episcopal Church is a matter undertaken at the level of individual congregations, and there is no minimum compensation provided by the Convocation (or any diocese) to any ordained member of the clergy when they are not providing their services to a congregation.

All ordained clergy are expected to create and maintain individual profiles on the website of the Office of Transition Ministry. The Archdeacon of the Convocation is a resource for clergy seeking information about creating or updating their OTM profile.
All ordained clergy in the Convocation are also expected to take part in two retreats each year organized by the bishop’s office, as well as in the annual Convention of the Convocation, unless prohibited for reasons communicated to the bishop.

As noted above, Deacons are, by canon, directly answerable to the bishop, and it is for the bishop to determine both where they serve and under what provisions. Ideally, if a deacon is serving a congregation, a Letter of Agreement between the deacon, the congregation, and the bishop will be put in place clarifying the ministry to be served; the resources to be provided to the deacon in the conduct of their ministry; and providing for periodic mutual ministry reviews.

Priests operate more autonomously as ordained clergy. When newly ordained, the canons require that the bishop assign a mentor priest to them to help in their continued formation for ministry, for a period of at least a year. Those not working in a congregation setting must provide to the bishop’s office an annual report on how they have exercised their ministry (Canon I.6.2). Priests working in secular employment must request permission to do so from the bishop; and any priests who move into the geographic area of the Convocation, described as the member states of the Council of Europe, and who do not have an appointment in a congregation of the Convocation, must advise the bishop’s office of their presence within sixty days of arriving (Canon III.9.3(e)(2)).

A Closing Word

In the Episcopal Church, ordained ministry is a distinct, but not a higher, form of ministry in God’s church. Like all forms of ministry, it exists for the purpose of answering to God’s call in mission. The essence of that call, as taught in “An Outline of the Faith,” is “to restore all people to unity with God and each other in Christ” (BCP, p. 855). All expressions of ministry, in any part of the church, are best understood to be focused on the work of the church, and not the needs of the individual ministers. That in itself is a countercultural stance over and against the culture within the Western, wealthy, secular cultures in which our church is called to serve. In our conversations with those who seek to discern a call to ordained ministry in the church, we seek a deep understanding of the teaching of Jesus to his disciples:

“You know that the rulers of the Gentiles lord it over them, and their great ones are tyrants over them. It will not be so among you; but whoever wishes to be first among you must be your slave; just as the Son of Man came not to be served, but to serve...” (Matthew 20:25-28a)
Section 4: Excerpts from the General Canons

The following pages are an excerpt from the Constitution and Canons of The Episcopal Church as revised by the Eightieth General Convention of 2022. The pages excerpted, all from Title III (Ministry), present the sections having to do with:

- Canon 3: Of Discernment
- Canon 4: Of Licensed Lay Ministries
- Canon 5: Of General Provisions Respecting Ordination
- Canon 6: Of the Ordination of Deacons
- Canon 7: Of the Life and Work of Deacons
- Canon 8: Of the Ordination of Priests
- Canon 9: Of the Life and Work of Priests
Canon 3: Of Discernment

Sec. 1. The Bishop and Commission shall provide encouragement, training, and necessary resources to assist each congregation in developing an ongoing process of community discernment appropriate to the cultural background, age, and life experiences of all persons seeking direction in their call to ministry.

Sec. 2. The Bishop, in consultation with the Commission, may utilize college and university campus ministry centers and other communities of faith as additional communities where discernment takes place. In cases where these discernment communities are located in another jurisdiction, the Bishop will consult with the Bishop where the discernment community is located.

Sec. 3. The Bishop and Commission shall actively solicit from congregations, schools and other youth organizations, college and university campus ministry centers, seminaries, and other communities of faith names of persons whose demonstrated qualities of Christian commitment and potential for leadership and vision mark them as desirable candidates for positions of leadership in the Church.

Sec. 4. The Bishop, Commission, and the discernment community shall assist persons engaged in a process of ministry discernment to determine appropriate avenues for the expression and support of their ministries, either lay or ordained.

Canon 4: Of Licensed Ministries

a. A confirmed communicant in good standing or, in extraordinary circumstances, subject to guidelines established by the Bishop, a communicant in good standing, may be licensed by the Ecclesiastical Authority to serve as Pastoral Leader, Worship Leader, Preacher, Eucharistic Minister, Eucharistic Visitor, Evangelist, or Catechist. Requirements and guidelines for the selection, training, continuing education, and deployment of such

3. Written notice of the election of a Rector, signed by the Wardens, shall be forwarded to the Ecclesiastical Authority. If the Ecclesiastical Authority is satisfied that the person so elected is a duly qualified Priest and that such Priest has accepted the office to which elected, the notice shall be sent to the Secretary of the Convention, who shall record it. 4. Rectors may have a letter of agreement with the Parish setting forth mutual responsibilities, subject to the Bishop's approval.

3. Any Priest serving as a Chaplain on a military installation, Department of Veterans’ Affairs Medical Center, or Federal Bureaus of Prisons Correctional Institution shall not be subject to Canons III.9.3.e.1 or III.9.4.a. After having determined that the person will have and use opportunities for the exercise of the office of Priest, the Bishop, with the advice and consent of the Standing Committee, may approve the Priest’s continued exercise of the office on condition that the Priest report annually in writing, in a manner prescribed by the Bishop, as provided in Canon I.6.2.

2. a. A Priest not in parochial employment moving to another jurisdiction shall report to the Bishop of that jurisdiction within sixty days of such move.

b. The Priest:

c. Letters Dimissory not presented within six months of their date of receipt by the applicant shall become void.

d. If a Priest has been called to a Cure in a congregation in another Diocese, the Priest shall present Letters Dimissory. The Ecclesiastical Authority of the Diocese shall accept Letters Dimissory within three months of their receipt unless the Bishop or Standing Committee has received credible information concerning the character or behavior of the Priest concerned which would form grounds for canonical inquiry and proceedings under Title IV. In such a case, the Ecclesiastical Authority shall notify the Ecclesiastical Authority of the Diocese in which the Priest is canonically resident and need not accept the Letters Dimissory unless and until the Priest shall be exculpated. The Ecclesiastical Authority shall not refuse to accept Letters Dimissory based on the applicant’s race, color, ethnic origin, sex, national origin, marital status, sexual orientation, disabilities, or age.

e. A Priest shall not be in charge of any congregation in the Diocese to which the person moves until obtaining from the Ecclesiastical Authority of that Diocese a certificate in the following form:

(Signed) __________________________________________

b. If the Ecclesiastical Authority of the Diocese or equivalent jurisdiction of the Church in full communion with The Episcopal Church accepts the testimonial, the canonical residence of the Priest transferred shall date from such acceptance, and notice of acceptance shall be promptly forwarded by the Priest to the Ecclesiastical Authority in the sending Diocese. Such notification from the receiving Ecclesiastical Authority may be in the following form:

If any Priest of The Episcopal Church shall express, in writing, to the Bishop of the Diocese in which such Priest is canonically resident, an intention to be released and removed from the ordained Ministry of this Church and from the obligations attendant thereto, including those promises made at Ordination in the Declaration required by Article VIII of the Constitution of the General Convention, it shall be the duty of the Bishop to record the matter. The Bishop, being satisfied that the person so declaring is acting voluntarily and for causes, which do not affect the person’s moral character, and is neither the subject of information concerning an Offense that has been referred to an Intake Officer nor a Respondent in a pending disciplinary matter as defined in Title IV of these Canons, shall lay the matter before the Standing Committee, and with the advice and consent of a majority of the Standing Committee the Bishop may pronounce that the person is released and removed from the ordained Ministry of this Church and from the obligations attendant thereto, and is deprived of the right to exercise in The Episcopal Church the gifts and spiritual authority as a Minister of God’s Word and Sacraments conferred in Ordination. The Bishop shall also declare in pronouncing and recording such action that it was for causes which do not affect the person’s moral character, and shall, at the person’s request, give a certificate to this effect to the person so removed and released from the ordained Ministry.

Upon receipt of such writing, the Ecclesiastical Authority shall proceed in the same manner as prescribed in Section 8 of this Canon.

Sec. 11.

If a Priest submitting the writing described in Section 8 or 9 of this Canon be the subject of information concerning an Offense that has been referred to an Intake Officer or a Respondent in a pending disciplinary matter as defined in Title IV of these Canons, the Ecclesiastical Authority to whom such writing is submitted shall not consider or act upon the written request unless and the disciplinary matter shall have been resolved by a dismissal, Accord, or Order and the time for appeal or rescission of such has expired.

Sec. 12.

In the case of the release and removal of a Priest from the ordained Ministry of this Church as provided in this Canon, a declaration of release and removal shall be pronounced by the Bishop in the presence of two or more Priests, and shall be entered in the official records of the Diocese in which the Priest being released and removed is canonically resident. The Bishop who pronounces the declaration of release and removal as provided in this Canon shall give notice thereof in writing to every Member of the Clergy, each Vestry, the Secretary of the Convention and the Standing Committee of the Diocese in which the Priest was canonically resident; and to all Bishops of this Church, the Ecclesiastical Authority of each Diocese of this Church, the Presiding Bishop, the Recorder of Ordinations, the Secretary of the House of Bishops, the Secretary of the House of Deputies, the Church Pension Fund, and the Board for Transition Ministry.

Baptism is the foundation for all future church participation and ministry.

The Convocation, as part of The Episcopal Church, is enabled by, and subject to the authority of, the canons.
