Verbs Not Nouns

Oscar Wilde once said that if you know what you want to be, then you inevitably become it, and that is your punishment. But if you never know, then you can be anything. We are not nouns, but verbs. We are not a thing, but a person who does things.

I've been sitting with this for the past several months. Growing up you're always asked what you want to be. You're conditioned to think of your life as a noun. What will you choose? Will you be a lawyer, a doctor, a journalist, an artist, or maybe a pastor?

For most of my life thinking of what I wanted to be gave me great anxiety. What if I chose the wrong thing? Or worse, what if I want to be a lot of things, but I have to give them all up because I can only choose one? That was always the root of my anxiety. I hated the idea of losing options.

I think there's great freedom in thinking of ourselves as a series of verbs instead of nouns. I am a pastor, but what that means is I preach, I teach, I lead, and I care for people. I also mother, I run, I create, I write children's books, I do so many things. Thinking of myself and my ministry as a series of verbs has felt less imprisoning to me, and I think it helps sustain the work I do.

Pastor burnout is a real thing, and I have a lot of friends who have chosen to leave the ministry. I've often wondered if part of the problem is that pastors are conditioned to think of themselves as nouns. They can't be anything else but a pastor. Their whole lives are dedicated to the role. That's both noble, but also unhealthy.

I'm finding a lot of life in thinking of myself not as a pastor but someone who pastors, which then gives me space to also do other things, things that help sustain my ministry. I have a pastor support team who asks me monthly if I'm still doing the things I love outside the church. They're helping hold me accountable to viewing myself as a series of verbs instead of nouns, because like me, they know this will only increase my longevity in ministry.

Wherever you are today, maybe release the nouns you hold over yourselves. What would it mean to you to consider yourself as a person who does things instead of being a thing?

Praying for you always,

Pastor Victoria

Coming to the Box Gallery
"Traveling Shoes: Oils and Watercolors by Sherry Houpt"
Exhibit Dates to be determined.

Artist Reception with Guitar Music by Stephen Houpt – date and time to be determined.
Meet the Artist, Wednesday, May 31, 4:00 – 6:00 pm, Box Gallery

Sherry Houpt is an award- winning Dallas artist who works primarily in oils and watercolor. She first put on "traveling shoes" to explore the woods and gardens surrounding her home in Tyler, Texas, and later, Abilene, Texas. Over the years, she has sketched and painted "en plein air" (outdoors) in Texas, the Southwest and Midwest. In October, Sherry had the opportunity to take her art gear and adventurous spirit to the Tuscany area of Italy on an art retreat. Working in the studio and outdoors are both important to Sherry. She loves the translucency of watercolor and the buttery richness of oils. The discipline of working in these mediums keep her engaged with personal expression. The paintings in this exhibit are centered in her abiding sense of love for nature, travel, and people in their environments.

Sherry has a BFA from the University of North Texas, with additional studies at the University of Dallas, Savannah College of Art and Design and in workshops with Stephen Zhang and Kevin MacPherson. During the pandemic, she participated in Streamline Publishing's Watercolor Live, Plein Air Live, and Realism Live.

Sherry's 35 years of experience as an art instructor and former jewelry designer inform many of her creative endeavors. Her work is found in many local collections, and she has shown her art in local, regional, and national juried exhibitions. Professional affiliations include the Nasher Sculpture Center Teacher Advisory Board, volunteer juror for Business Council for the Arts, Plein Air Painters of New Mexico, Plein Air Painters of Chicago, and the Irving Arts Center. Sherry taught Art for more than three decades at the Shelton School, a private school and resource center dedicated to making a difference by serving and empowering the lives of students who learn differently.

"Sherry exemplifies someone who truly lives life as an artist. By consistently showing up for her creative passion, following her curiosity and focusing on the joy of her process, throughout the years, she's created an adventurous artistic style that's as engaging and colorful as her life!"
