

Toward God

Psalm 11:7

Remember this: The righteous Lord loves what is right and just, and every godly one will come into his presence and gaze upon his face!

I wanted to know God more. How can I know God as a human being if God doesn't reveal Himself to me? How can I come to God if God doesn't draw me closer? God is far, very far beyond all that I am. My heart desires brilliant ecstatic holiness, beauty, and righteousness.

This psalm verse gave me hope to approach God. It says every godly one will come into His presence and gaze upon His face. So, I consecrated myself to God and sought to walk the narrow path of righteousness. I asked God to give me signs whenever I misstep. God allowed that request; the veil between me and God became thinner and thinner. Eventually, it became very thin. Sometimes there was an unclouded touch of God's heart.

I requested the gift of compassion so that I may love the way God loves and forgive the way God forgives. I want to reflect God's heart and reveal motives that are pure. Whenever my heart is shaky, I find my place back with God in the calm, safe space without any interruption. I tune myself to God again and again to find the most peaceful, solid, restful place. There, I surely know the shiny refreshing warm embrace of the Spirit.

Grace and Peace,
