As a family of forgiven people, we are honored that you have joined with us today as we seek to develop people who delight in God and declare His glory—from our neighborhoods to the nations. Our prayer is that you will connect with God through Christ this morning and that this would be the beginning of a deep connection with other believers as well. Please take a moment to fill out the Communication Card located in the chair pocket near you and place it in an offering pedestal in the back of the Worship Center.

Benediction

Adam Jacobs

“Divine sovereignty in salvation is a major theme in the Fourth Gospel. Moreover, the form of it in these verses, that there exists a group of people who have been given by the Father to the Son, and that this group will inevitably come to the Son and be preserved by him, not only recurs in this chapter (v. 65) and perhaps in 10:29, but is strikingly central to the Lord's prayer in John 17. John is not embarrassed by this theme, because unlike many contemporary philosophers and theologians, he does not think that human responsibility is thereby mitigated. Thus, he can speak with equal ease of those who look to the Son and believe in him: this they must do, if they are to enjoy eternal life. But this responsibility to exercise faith does not, for the Evangelist, make God contingent. In short, John is happy with the position that modern philosophy calls 'compatibilism'.”

~ D. A. Carson

The crowd follows Jesus after the feeding of the five thousand, seeking more signs, but He redirects them from temporary food to the eternal sustenance He offers. Jesus declares Himself the “bread of life,” explaining that belief in Him—not works like those associated with Moses and the manna—is the way to receive eternal life from God the Father. He assures them that all who come to Him will never be cast out and will be raised up on the last day.
