Reflection during the week:

1. Where might God be asking me to step forward before I see the outcome? As you reread Joshua 3:13–17, where do you sense God inviting movement rather than waiting? What fear, hesitation, or need for certainty might be keeping me from putting my feet in the water?
2. Am I seeking understanding before obedience? Reflect on John 2:7–8. Where in my life am I asking God to explain Himself before I'm willing to obey? What would it look like this week to do "whatever He tells me," even without knowing how it will turn out?
3. What miracles might I be overlooking because they feel ordinary? As you move through your days, where is God sustaining, providing, or creating life in ways I've begun to take for granted? How might practicing gratitude reshape my expectations and renew my trust in Him?
4. What step of trust is God inviting me to take right now? Holding Jeremiah 32:27 in mind, where can I pray boldly again while releasing control of the outcome? How can I choose faith-filled movement this week, trusting Jesus for who He is—no matter what happens?
