

Scott C. Crowley, J.D., Ph.D.
Director of Enterprise Risk and Sr. Counsel
Northeast Georgia Health System

Scott has 20+ years' experience overseeing an incredibly wide variety of medical malpractice litigation and understands the perspective of patients and their families. Scott began his legal career in Waycross, Georgia as a litigator representing plaintiffs, defendants, and insurance companies. While defending medical malpractice cases for the local health system, Scott was asked to become general counsel for Columbus Regional Health (now part of Piedmont).

Scott is currently the Director of Enterprise Risk Management at Northeast Georgia Health System where he worked with senior leaders and physicians to develop a disclosure program that focuses on transparency, communication with patients and their families, as well as an emphasis on care for the caregiver. Scott is a skilled listener with a passion for resolving difficult patient situations.

On a personal note, two decades after law school, Scott returned to the academic world and received a Ph.D. in philosophy. You may also find Scott earnestly talking about Pilates, since he is now a Pilates instructor who believes Pilates is unique in helping our bodies function at their highest level.
