

Danyale Ziglor

Vice President of Human Resources, Wellstar Enterprise Support Services

Danyale Ziglor is the Vice President of Human Resources for Wellstar Shared Services & Post-Acute Services, where she oversees human capital strategy for over 5,500 FTEs across finance, IT, supply chain, and clinical service lines. With close to two decades of experience in the healthcare sector, Danyale is a specialist in large-scale organizational transformations, having recently led the HR integration of Augusta University Health System and the complex workforce transitions for the AMC campus closures.

Throughout a distinguished career at Wellstar, Danyale has become a key architect of the system's most critical organizational shifts. Their expertise in change management was instrumental during the COVID-19 pandemic, where they designed workforce resiliency plans and led the "Future of Work" initiative to define hybrid and virtual work models. Danyale career is defined by a commitment to the "Employer of Choice" strategy, consistently achieving high trust, engagement, and retention scores and fostering cultures of continuous growth. A cornerstone of this approach is the belief that organizational excellence starts with leadership behavior. They have been instrumental in coaching executives on engagement practices and recently launched a monthly "People Care" series, providing continuous development for over 500 leaders.

Danyale is a native of St. Louis, Missouri and relocated to Atlanta, Georgia in 1998.

Danyale holds a bachelor's degree from Saint Louis University and a masters' degree in Business Administration from Bellevue University.

Danyale lives in Marietta, Georgia with her husband James, Jr. and their three children.
