

Melissa Adams is a healthcare technology executive, entrepreneur, and communication advocate with more than 23 years of experience leading large-scale healthcare IT and operational initiatives. Throughout her career, she has been passionate about helping organizations improve outcomes through leadership, innovation, and effective communication.

Melissa is the Founder and Executive Director of Home Helpers Home Care of West Marietta, where she is building a mission-driven organization dedicated to helping seniors remain safe, independent, and connected in their homes. As a Certified Senior Advisor (CSA), she brings both professional expertise and personal caregiving experience to her work with older adults and their families.

Melissa recently completed her term as President of ACHE of Georgia Toastmasters, where she focused on fostering member growth, leadership development, and a culture of support and continuous learning. She is a strong believer that communication is one of the most important leadership skills anyone can develop and credits Toastmasters with helping her become a more intentional speaker, listener, and leader.

Her personal philosophy is simple: start with heart and lead with intention.
