

Daniel B. Walter

Daniel B. Walter is the founder and Senior Principal of Walter Consulting. Dan's professional background includes over twenty-five years experience in strategic planning for health care providers in both the hospital and consulting setting. Dan is a nationally recognized leader in the field of post-acute care, and brings to both acute care and post-acute clients extensive knowledge in the strategic, operational, and financial components of either side of this continuum.

Prior to founding Walter Consulting in 2009, Dan was the National Post-acute Practice Manager for Noblis, a multi-industry not-for-profit consulting firm, as well as a Partner with Gill/Balsano Consulting, a national consulting firm with a specialty focus of post-acute care.

Dan has published widely in health care journals, is active in several professional associations and has been a featured speaker on multiple topics related to post-acute care, including emerging trends for the industry. Dan holds a Masters of Business Administration from Georgia State University and a Bachelors of Business Administration from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.
