ARTIST BARBARA KASTEN COMMISSIONED TO DESIGN STAGE FOR HANS ULRICH OBRIST’S CREATIVE CHICAGO: AN INTERVIEW MARATHON AND FOUR-ACT STRUCTURE ANNOUNCED

Prominent Chicago-Based Artist Barbara Kasten’s Constructivist-Inspired Multimedia Stage Set to Evoke Significant Artistic Forces in Chicago; Marathon’s Four Act Structure to Focus on the History and Future of Creativity in Chicago

CHICAGO – Chicago Humanities Festival, in partnership with The Terra Foundation for American Art, EXPO CHICAGO and Navy Pier, today announced Chicago-based artist Barbara Kasten will create a specially commissioned, Bauhaus-inspired set design for Hans Ulrich Obrist’s Creative Chicago: An Interview Marathon. Led by Obrist, Artistic Director of London’s Serpentine Galleries and one of the world’s most influential curators and critics, the Marathon will be structured in four acts, thematically grouping interview participants with subjects ranging from poetry to historical archives. Creative Chicago is Obrist’s first ever U. S. Marathon, taking place Saturday, September 29, 2018, from 1 – 6 pm in Navy Pier’s historic Aon Grand Ballroom, during EXPO CHICAGO (September 27–30, 2018). The event is funded by the Terra Foundation for American Art and The Richard H. Driehaus Foundation, and is a centerpiece of the Terra Foundation’s year-long, citywide initiative, Art Design Chicago, celebrating the city’s rich art and design history through more than 30 exhibitions and hundreds of programs and special events throughout 2018.

“In keeping with my longstanding following of the legendary Studs Terkel, and the site of my archives, Chicago is a natural choice for my first Interview Marathon in the United States,” said
Artistic Director of the Serpentine Galleries Hans Ulrich Obrist. “The participants selected for this Marathon will speak to the legacy and future of creative life in Chicago, and the four-act structure of the interviews will address themes both locally and internationally relevant.”

Kasten’s stage set, entitled Intervention, connects Ludwig Mies van der Rohe’s Crown Hall and the New Bauhaus principles brought to the Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT) by László Moholy-Nagy. Both Mies van der Rohe and Moholy-Nagy’s inventive approaches to experimentation and innovation resulted in rich developments in architecture, design and photographic practices worldwide. The Constructivist inspired stage design, which will utilize IIT student worktables, merges Kasten’s vision with the artistic points of view of these two Bauhaus masters whose legacies are central to Chicago’s creative, educational and cultural heritage.

“My sculpture celebrates the diversity of Chicago by honoring Moholy-Nagy and Mies van der Rohe, two incredible European immigrants who made a lasting impact on the arts and architecture of the city, as well as the world,” said Kasten. “I grew up in Bridgeport, a neighborhood adjacent to the Illinois Institute of Technology, unaware that these creative geniuses—both connected to the school—would influence my career as an artist.”

The sculptural elements of the stage set will exist beyond Creative Chicago, with the possibility of exhibition and display in the future.

“Barbara Kasten’s tribute to Chicago design icons Ludwig Mies van der Rohe and László Moholy-Nagy reflects the mission of Art Design Chicago which brings to light the central role Chicago has played as a global nexus of art and design,” said Amy Zinck, Executive Vice President of the Terra Foundation for American Art. “Additional stories of immigrant artists’ contributions to Chicago’s cultural landscape are also revealed in several Art Design Chicago exhibitions on view at partner institutions throughout the city this fall, from the DePaul Art Museum to the Spertus Institute for Jewish Learning and Leadership, and many more.”

The four-act structure of Creative Chicago: An Interview Marathon thematically groups together prominent Chicago creatives in a series of conversations that will highlight both the unique talents of each individual and the multi-disciplinary and collaborative nature of Chicago’s cultural scene.

“Dividing the marathon into acts is both a small homage to our city’s brilliant theater scene and gives momentum to our exploration of Chicago-style creativity” said Alison Cuddy, the Marilyn Thoma Artistic Director at the Chicago Humanities Festival. “There is a loose chronology to the overall event—a prologue followed by a series of conversations moving from foundational to future-thinking individuals—but each section will serve as a crossroads for our city’s creative history; past, present and future.
To date, confirmed Creative Chicago: An Interview Marathon participants include artist Amanda Williams, artist Art Green, artist Barbara Kasten, artist Brandon Breaux, owner of Old Fashioned Donuts Buritt Bulloch, artist Cauleen Smith, photographer Dawoud Bey, organizer/activist Eddie Bocanegra, writer Eula Biss, writer/artist Eve L. Ewing, poet Fatimah Asghar, artist Gerald Williams, architect Jeanne Gang, artist/art historian Joseph Grigely, Museum Director of the Obama Presidential Center Museum Louise Bernard, artist/performer Shani Crowe, architect Stanley Tigerman, artist Theaster Gates, sculptor Richard Hunt and cultural historian Tim Samuelson.

“This through our partnership with Hans Ulrich Obrist since 2015, we have worked closely to ensure that artists in Chicago are elevated onto the international stage—and the Marathon provides the next step for this initiative,” said EXPO CHICAGO Director of Programming Stephanie Cristello. “The program acts as a platform to record these contemporary histories, supporting many of the leading contemporary artists living and working in Chicago represented by our international list of galleries, as well as traces an intersection between the exposition’s year-round programs—including a panel and performance presented earlier this year at US Pavilion at the Venice Biennale with Marathon participants Amanda Williams and Shani Crowe.”
