

“I love Geisinger.
They saved
my daughter.”

Geisinger

Mason Sharkazy was born with Down syndrome, cystic fibrosis—and a fighting spirit. When she got a cold that wouldn't go away, her Geisinger pulmonologist, Dr. Jonathan Spahr, recommended Mason go to the local hospital right away. After a helicopter ride to Geisinger Medical Center in Danville, she spent two weeks on a ventilator. Mason made a complete recovery. Today, she's back home in Beach Lake, with her mom, Shannon Sharkazy.

At Geisinger, our goal is to make better health easier. For Shannon, Mason—and for you.

Better health, easier.
See the whole story: geisinger.org/stories