free off-street parking, maintenance and snow and trash removal. Emergency maintenance is available.

“Apollo Point is the only place like this in the area,” said property manager Matt Richards. “When you come home, we want you to enjoy being home.”

Many of the features are designed to encourage the interaction of its 600-700 residents with each other and their guests. Along these lines, Apollo Point holds a variety of events for all ages throughout the year, such as pool parties, cookouts, monthly dinners often drawing more than 100 attendees, cocktail hour, live band/DJ parties, popular bingo nights, children’s crafts, ice cream sundaes, Easter egg hunt, “yappy” hour for dogs, movie nights and giveaways on social media. Residents can also rent space for their special events.

Every stage of life

The upgraded, luxury units at Apollo Point are home to people in just about every stage of life, from young singles and couples to families with children to older adults who are looking to downsize and live maintenance free. Its quality spaces, amenities and resident-focused on-site events have attracted many professionals and people employed in various trades, including from the various Geisinger campuses and the new Amazon data center being built in Salem Township.

Richards noted the complex is about 50% built out to date with more buildings to be added. They expect the newest building currently under construction to be completed in 2026.

“We’re poised for growth, and more expansion is coming, like the planned commercial and townhouses, in the near future,” he said.

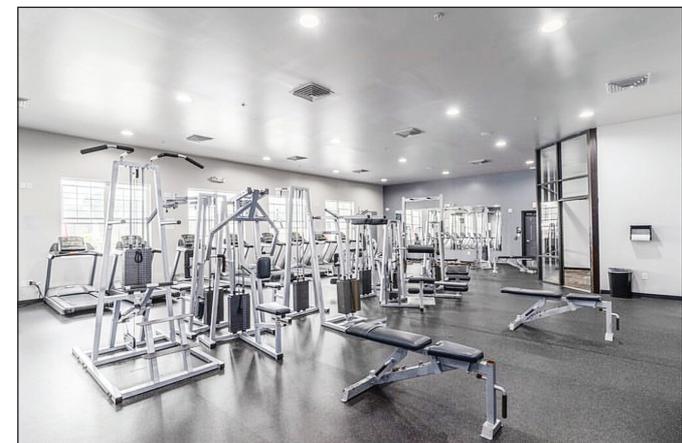

The staff at Apollo Point welcomes inquiries and looks forward to helping you find the housing that’s right for you. Get ready to step into your personal oasis at Apollo Point! Call the leasing office for current specials and start your new year in a
