

Hey there bright-siders! So, if you live in the US, tomorrow is the big day.

Emotions are high, and the anticipation may be a little bit overwhelming, but I want to encourage and remind you to stay centered and awake.

No matter what happens, whether you like and agree with the outcome or not, keep your heart and mind open and aware that there is always, always hope!

Martin Luther King Jr said, We must accept finite disappointment, but never lose infinite hope.

Hope is the emotional inertia that leads us to a brighter and happier life. Never give up, never give in and never, never let anyone break your hope into pieces.

Stay in the light and the light will always be your guide.

And remember: A brighter today equals a better tomorrow.

Xoxo,

Gwen
