Cambridge, Mass. — The American Repertory Theatre presents the world premiere of Anne Washburn’s The Communist Dracula Pageant directed by Anne Kauffman, at the A.R.T.’s Zero Arrow Theatre, corner of Arrow Street and Massachusetts Avenue, Cambridge. The production begins performances on Saturday, October 18 and runs through Sunday, November 9; it will be available for press viewing from Wednesday, October 22.

“History, peopled with our faces, is not our story. Do not hope to find yourself in history. Look for yourself only in the terrible recesses of your own heart.”
— The Communist Dracula Pageant

Anne Washburn is one of the most exciting new voices in the American theatre. Her plays are feasts of imagination, with vivid characters, storylines that veer off in surprising directions, a wry sense of comedy, and a playful love of language. The Communist Dracula Pageant is a spectacular example. Drawing from trial transcripts and from Romania’s rich folklore, Washburn dramatizes the final days of Nicolae and Elena Ceausescu, the autocrats who ruled Romania from 1965-1989. This romp across Romanian myth and history exists in three time periods: 1989, when the Ceausescus’ dictatorship fell; 1976, when the dictators, at the height of their powers, commissioned kitschy pageants to celebrate the glory of the Romanian nation; and the fifteenth century, during the reign of Vlad Tepes, the historical Count Dracula. As protesters gather in Timisoara, Nicolae Ceausescu orders the army to fire on the dissidents. Following this fateful decision, the country unites against the dictator and his wife. The Ceausescus fight to preserve their authority, but they cannot halt their rapid descent from power. They are imprisoned, tried, and executed within days. The events of the Christmas Revolution that overthrew the Ceausescus are woven together with scenes featuring Vlad Tepes and with recreations of the elaborate pageants the Ceausescus staged in the 1970s to celebrate the glory of the Romanian nation.

The play’s full title is The Communist Dracula Pageant — by Americans, for Americans; a play about the Romanian Revolution of 1989 with hallucinations, phosphorescence, and bears. It reminds us that although Washburn has set it during the insanity of the Romanian dictatorship, the play really transcends national boundaries. Its theme – the shaping of historical events and current affairs for political gain – is universal, and will have particular resonance for us during our own election season.

The professional acting company includes A.R.T. actors Thomas Derrah as Nicolae Ceausescu, Karen MacDonald as Elena Ceausescu, Will LeBow as Vlad Tepes, and Remo Airaldi in multiple roles; they are joined by John Kuntz and Matt Maher. A.R.T. Institute’s second-year actors Kaaron Briscoe, Sheila Carrasco, Shawn Cody, Roger Kuch, James Senti, and Josh Stammel complete the cast. Set design is by Mimi Lien, costume design by Chrystal Weatherly, lighting design by Tyler Micoleau, music by Michael Friedman, sound design by David Remedios, and movement by Doug Elkins.

Anne Washburn’s plays include I Have Loved Strangers (included in an edition of New York Theater Review, edited by Brook Stowe), Apparition (published in New Downtown Now; University of Minnesota Press, edited by Young Jean Lee and Mac Wellman), The Ladies, and The Internationalist (the Gate Theatre in London, published by Playscripts, Inc.), as well as a translation of Euripides’ Orestes. Her plays have been produced by 13P, Cherry Lane Theater, The Civilians, Clubbed Thumb, Dixon Place, Naked Angels, and the Vineyard Theater in New
