

Ed Hayer is a fifth year associate attorney at the Aspelmeier Law Firm in Burlington. He practices primarily in the area of civil litigation. He has published articles on the economic loss rule and the recreational use statute, and just two weeks ago argued before the Iowa Court of Appeals regarding a request for admission issue. Ed is interested in all aspects of discovery and is excited to discuss how written discovery tools can be used to prepare a case for trial and how our civil procedure rules can be used to ensure that the opposing party participates in good faith.
