After a brief delay, the story of Tessa (Josephine Langford) and Hardin (Hero Fiennes Tiffin) continues as After We Collided finally makes its U.S. debut!

As we previously reported, the After We Collided release date has shifted quite a bit due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. But in less than 24 hours, the second film in this beloved YA franchise will be available to stream from the comfort of your very own home. The second installment of Anna Todd's popular series follows the aftermath of the intense breakup between Tessa and Hardin. Tessa embarks on an internship at Vance Publishing Company, where she meets an interesting new co-worker (Dylan Sprouse).

Where can you watch After We Collided on VOD? Will After We Collided be on Netflix? Here's everything you need to know.

Directed by Roger Kumble, 'After We Collided' is the sequel to the box-office hit 'After,' based on the book series of the same name authored by Anna Todd. Starring Josephine Langford as Tessa Young and Hero Fiennes Tiffin as Hardin Scott, this movie is another installment in a long line of films based on books that merge the teenage angst of 'Twilight' with the sexual drama of 'Fifty Shades.' The first film's popularity was inversely proportional to its content quality, and 'After We Collided' seems to be headed down the same path.

It's one of those movies that critics always slam, but the audiences love because the story hits the sweet-spot of young fantasies about bad boys that are reformed by the love of a nice girl with virginal shyness. So if you're into young adult romantic drama, 'After We Collided' would be a stimulating watch. If you're curious to know where to stream this movie, we have all the details for you here. First, let us give you a bit of background on the movie's plot!

After We Collided, starring Hero Fiennes Tiffin and Josephine Langford, is being released in US movie theatres on 23 October just weeks after it hit cinemas in the UK.

It's also now available to watch on some VOD platforms, meaning you can watch it wherever you are in the world.
