“Current Trends in Contemporary Optometry”

Presented by

Edward L. Paul, Jr., O.D., Ph.D.

- Glaucoma Management - Are Current Treatments Worse Than the Disease?
- Emerging Pharmaceuticals for Eye Care
- Current Trends in Contemporary Optometry
- Comanagement of the Low Vision Patient
- Ocular Pharmacology Update
- Success Principles for the OD
- Beyond AREDS: The Role of Nutrition in Eye Care

This 12-hour COPE approved interactive program will investigate current trends in primary care optometry. Emerging diagnostics as well as cutting edge therapeutics, such as stem cell and gene therapy, will be introduced in order to give the clinician a working knowledge of what the future holds for medicine. An emphasis will be placed on systemic and ocular pharmacology as well as the evolving field of nutritional medicine. The meeting will include a new course on the complications surrounding modern glaucoma therapy and the impact topical drops can have on the systemic health and quality of life of our patients. Additionally, the clinician will gain insight on pearls for practical low vision care: how to manage and when to refer (don't worry, no complicated physiological optics formulas). We'll round out the program with an interactive practice management session

Bio: Dr. Paul is an experienced clinician and educator having served as professor of ophthalmology at St. Luke's University School of Medicine in Belize. He was recently chosen as one of "America's Top Optometrists" by the Consumer's Research Council of America. Dr. Paul is one of 30 eye physicians in the U.S. to be recognized as a Fellow of the International Acad. of Low Vision Specialists. Dr. Paul also holds a Ph.D. in Nutrition. Beyond his research and medical practice, he is the author of several books, as well as a contributing writer for several national magazines. He has been a guest on many TV/Radio programs, incl. NBC, CBS, ABC, FOX, and Lifetime Television.
