Reflector Reflections

We all know that when it comes to looking at a Reflector, that a Reflector by its very nature is extraordinary. They are not that small a minority. Based on our statistics, there are nearly a hundred million of them in the world, so that's a lot of people. They are very different, because when you look at their Design, they give off an illusion that has nothing to do with who they are. It is not even fair to say that they are chameleons or that they are actors, because in fact they require no masks, in that sense.

Nine Open Centers

When you study Human Design and you look at open Centers, you're automatically struck by the power of not-self strategies and the way in which they operate. And then you look at a Reflector, and you see all of those open Centers and you think, “Oh my goodness, here is a being that has, according to Human Design, no Inner Authority, no reliable Inner Authority in their process. Here's a human being that has nine open Centers. They must have a mind that is just totally cranked up and absorbed in the not-self domain. They must be deeply vulnerable to the conditioning of others,” and so forth and so on, and all of that is just an illusion.

I have an interesting connection with Reflectors because I'm a Manifestor, and Manifestors and Reflectors, in a way, have similar kinds of auras; that is, neither Manifestor nor Reflector is comfortable with allowing any aura to absorb it, so there is a certain commonality in the way in which the auric fields operate. What is so clear to me about what happens to a Reflector when they meet the other is that they don't meet the other like anybody else; that is, they certainly don't meet the other the way I do. I have Definition, and the moment you have Definition, the very counterpoint, that very counterpoint of having no Definition makes you totally different. Reflectors are quite alien to the rest of us because they don't operate in the same way.

The Reflector's Protective Shield

I mentioned that they have something in common with Manifestors, and what they have in common is a quality that is basically called trust. The Manifestor child comes into the world and the parents automatically don't trust it; that is, they know because it can operate independently that they're going to have to control them. When a Reflector child comes into the world, the parents instantaneously don't touch it—don't trust it, because they can't touch it.

The thing that makes Reflectors so different is it's like one of these science fiction movies where you've got these spaceships and they've got protective shields and you can't see them. It's not like you can see them, they just have this kind of very stiff aura around them that takes any kind of hit on the outside, but it barely does anything on the inside but create a kind of little rumble or a bit of a noise here and there. When Reflectors are walking in the world, they're wearing a shield. The whole thing about that shield is that the technology of it is directly related to other human auras. In other words, it's directly related to the other Types, but it's not related at all to the Program.

It's interesting about comparisons between defined and undefined. If you follow my daily transits and you've got Definition, and I'm talking about something that's activating your Definition, there's very, very little impact. There's a bit of a taste that might be added to what is already there, but there's very little impact because, in a sense, it is blocked off. Basically what you're looking at in terms of the Reflector is that the Reflector in the way in which its shield operates is that it basically blocks off human conditioning, but it can't block off the Program.

This very first illustration is simply a reminder of the relationship between the Reflector and the Moon, but oh boy, is that a bitch; that's not something easy to deal with. When you think about the way time works for us, the vast majority of human beings are in a hurry because life is short and it goes fast, and sooner than you know it, it's just done. So we have this concern about lost time and what we've missed, what we could miss, and all those other things. And most of that has to do with the fact that the majority of the planet are energy Types, and energy Types are on the move. They are eating up time, if you will.
