Hoarding Food Declared Reason For Restrictions

Specialist Places Blame For Shortage Of Many Articles On Hysterical Buying

Consumers in the United States who now are placing selfish interests before the needs of the nation can get a citation from Hitler for help to the Axis, in the opinion of Christine Carlson, nutrition specialist, Ohio State university, who says that hysterical buying is causing the imposition of some of the restrictions on foods and other commodities.

Miss Carlson declares farmers in this nation have produced food enough to amply supply full, nourishing meals for everyone. There is no reason why this production cannot be equalled or exceeded in succeeding years. The amount of meat produced in the nation in 1942 is much greater than in any previous year.

Neither farmers nor government officials can meet the demands of a multitude of people who want to consume as much or more food as they did before the war and also to store away reserves to quiet unreasonable fears. Miss Carlson believes that cellars, basements, attics and food lockers now hold food reserves which should be available for the over-the-counter sales.

Sugar already has been rationed for months, but Miss Carlson believes every person should ask himself if he knows anyone who has been deprived of a spoonful of sugar. The wholesale distribution of coffee has been restricted somewhat, but Miss Carlson suggests that coffee enough to provide a normal supply for a considerable period is now losing flavor in private storage places.

Announcements have been made that the distribution of meats will be rationed. A check-up of freezer lockers now will show that an enormous number of people have anticipated that rationing and already have made sure of a supply for themselves.

Miss Carlson recommends the use of foods in ways that prevent waste of any kind. Canning, drying, freezer lockers, and common storage provide methods of saving foods that would otherwise be lost. The same preservation methods also help selfish people to limit the amounts available for those who prefer hunger above defeat.

No person of stories about the progress of this war can permit any person in the United States to honestly decide anything less than complete participation in the war effort by every man, woman and child will bring victory. Hitler can find a hiding place behind every unnecessary private hoard of food.

Schools Enter Scrap Campaign In Auglaize

Superintendents Serving As Chairmen In Various Communities

Auglaize county this week was in the midst of another all-out drive for scrap metal—this time it was a schoolboys' "army" scouring the several communities for salvage materials to be shipped off to the nation's war factories.

Despite the tremendous amount of scrap which already has been unearthed in Auglaize county and shipped off for conversion into implements of war, there is plenty more to be had, and the current drive with the schools aiding is expected to turn up a sizeable amount of it, according to Howard R. Craig, county engineer, chairman of scrap drive activities in Auglaize.

School superintendents in Minster, Wapakoneta, St. Marys, New Bremen, Cridersville, Waynesfield, Buckland, New Knoxville and New Hampshire are serving as chairmen in their respective districts, and other communities were to be named by L. F. Shumaker, county school chief.

Scrap metal piles are going up in communities, and the older boys, assisted by younger brothers, sisters and neighbors, are scouring for old metals to be added to the scrap heaps. Each community will dispose of its metal heap to dealers and distribute the money to whatever purpose may be agreed upon.

Chairman Craig said county trucks would be used in hauling heavier pieces of metal wherever reported to his office by a school district chairman.

In Minster the school has allotted a space between the grade and high school buildings where scrap material can easily be assembled. Leaders have been appointed in each of the high school classes whose duty it is to supervise collecting and assorting the salvaged material. The elementary grades also are included in this drive.

Leonard Wetzel has been appointed chairman for the senior class; Marvin Wellmeyer, vice chairman and Thomas Morsey, secretary. Officers for the junior class are Bernard Boecker, president; Jack Schneider, vice president; Gene Moorman, secretary; Wilfred Horstman, treasurer.

ARMY PROMOTES YORKSHIRE MAN

Announcement of the promotion of Bernard Gerling, 31, son of Mrs. Ben H. Gerling of near Yorkshire, to the rank of sergeant in the army air forces, was made this week from headquarters of the Antilles air task force and sixth fighter command, at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Sergeant Gerling, now stationed at an unnamed base in the Caribbean, was an automobile mechanic prior to volunteering for service in the armed forces nearly two years ago. Eight months after his enlistment he was transferred to his present unit where he is working as an airplane mechanic.

PLANS FOR YEARLY K. C. PARTY READY

The annual Columbus day card party sponsored by the Knights of Columbus of Minster will be held in the Knights of Columbus and Eagles' halls here at 8:30 p. m. Sunday. Pinocle and sheephead will be played, with attractive prizes offered winners in each game. The card games will be followed by a lunch prepared by the K. C. "chefs," and a period of community singing will round out the evening's entertainment.

Grand Knight Norbert Wilkens extends an invitation to everyone to attend this party, the first in a series of gatherings to be staged under sponsorship of the organization for entertainment of the public. Henry Hagedorn and Joe Borchers head the committee which is working hard for the success of the event.

Wilma Naber was elected president for the sophomore class; Mary Boecker, vice president; Dale Larkman, treasurer; and Harvey Schmiesing, secretary. The freshmen have as their officers Audrey Holtzauer, president; Bernard Hoving, vice president; Joseph Schmiedel, secretary; Paul Dues, treasurer. Senior class members spotted 1,860 pounds on the first day of the drive.

If scrap material gathered is too large for children to take to school, or if families having scrap have no children attending school, citizens are asked to contact any officer of the several classes, who will see that it is taken care of. Nine dollars a ton will be paid for the salvaged material. Some citizens have decided to give their money to the U. S. O.

Surviving with the father are three sisters, Mrs. Frank Harting of St. Rose, and Mrs. Henry Grevenkamp and Mrs. John Grevenkamp of Cassella. Three sisters and a brother preceded her in death.

A lifelong and devout Catholic, Miss Kemper died strengthened by reception of the last sacrament of the church. She was a member of the Young Ladies' sodality of Cassella.

Minster Firm Cited In Bond Purchases

With more than 200 of the 235 employees of the Minster Machine company buying approximately $1,000 in war bonds weekly, the firm this week was awarded the "Minute Man" flag for more than 90 percent cooperation in the payroll savings plan. Cooperation in the plan by machine company employees is above 95 percent.

Officials of the company, while preparing to erect the honor flag which has been received and which will be flown on direct authorization of the U. S. Treasury Department, expressed gratification Thursday at the high voluntary bond purchase record of its workmen.

Until the employees' record of participation reaches 100 percent, however, the "perfect score" will not be attained. Any non-participating employees wishing to join in the savings plan may obtain all desired information and may be enrolled by contacting their foremen or seeing Werner Heil.

Immigration To U. S. To Speed Victory Is Urged

Population Expert Asserts Farms And Factories Already Need Millions Of Men

Three million men should be recruited in South or Central America and brought to the United States to provide agriculture, population expert of New York, told a meeting of the Second Institute on World Organization at American university at Washington, D. C.

We must overcome our prejudices against immigration into this country, he said, or we may face a disastrous labor shortage. "Without a plan for hemispheric and, as far as possible, intercontinental and inter-continental recruitment, exchange and eventual pooling of all human resources, the United States may lose the war," Dr. Ferenczi declared.

A step has been taken in that direction, he said, when Mexican laborers were permitted to enter the United States to work on the harvest this year. But the scale of this migration was entirely too small, he indicated, and the migration was arranged only for seasonal labor.

"Whereas this migration affected only a few thousands, we need millions," he said.

The labor army visualized by Dr. Ferenczi is not to be a slave army like those producing goods for the Axis. They would be paid the wages prevailing in the United States, which "South American recruits would find very attractive, he said. They would be under military control only to insure proper health and working conditions and a maximum of directed effort. And they would understand that this service would be a contribution toward the defense of their own homelands through victory over the Axis.

An acute labor shortage is foreseen by Dr. Ferenczi not only for the period of the war but afterwards. He thinks it is a mistake to look forward to a period of unemployment. Men of employable age and fitness are being killed by the thousands. It will be increasingly hard to find manpower to do the work that must be done to win the war and to rebuild the world afterwards. And the war can't be terminated when we have exhausted our labor supply; it can be ended only by victory. Race, national, and other prejudices must be wiped out in the interest of providing food, weapons and other necessities of all the people.

"A man's usefulness to the nation and his loyalty will be the only consideration," Dr. Ferenczi said. "No one will care about the color of his skin or the place of his birth or penitentiaries of his manners."

Funeral services were held in the St. Francis Catholic church at Cranberry Prairie Monday morning for George Bohman, aged 77 years, for many years an industrious farmer of that community, who died in his residence last Friday afternoon after a lingering illness from a complication of diseases.

Mr. Bohman was a native of Indiana, and was born in the neighboring state in the year 1865. Forty-three years ago, in 1892, he transferred his residence to the Cranberry community, and made his home on a farm there until the time of his death.

Surviving to mourn the passing of a kind and providing husband and father are the widow, the former Miss Elizabeth Wendel, and the following-named six children: Mrs. Fred Rinderle, North Star; Mrs. Vincent Brockman, Maria Stein; Mrs. Sebastian Rinderle, Burkettville; Joseph Bohman, Egypt; Fred Bohman, at home; and Henry Bohman, Burkettville. There are 29 grandchildren and one great grandchild. A sister, Mrs. Catherine Wendel, resides at Sidney.

Mr. Bohman was a lifelong and faithful Catholic. When his death occurred he had been strengthened by having received the last sacrament of the church. The services Monday were in charge of the Rev. Robert Mayser. Interment was made in the church cemetery.

Funeral services were held in the Immaculate Conception Catholic church at Celina Tuesday morning for H. Matt Winkeljohn, 76, a native of Germany and a former resident of the St. Henry community, who died in the Gibbons hospital at Celina Saturday following a major operation and an illness of six months. Interment was made in the St. Henry cemetery.

Born in Votlage, Germany on Oct. 15, 1866 he was a son of the late Matthias and Catherine (Felds) Winkeljohn. He came to this country and to Mercer county as a young man, and received his final citizenship papers in 1886.

He was married to Miss Rosina Dabbert on Nov. 19, 1890, and she died on March 20, 1926. A son, Leo, also preceded him in death, in March of 1925. Mr. Winkeljohn moved to Celina from St. Henry in 1926, and for several years had been employed as engineer at the Immaculate Conception high school building. He was employed for a time at Dayton.

Surviving are the following 10 children: Mrs. Nora Edlinder, St. Henry; Miss Frances Winkeljohn, Celina; Mrs. Anna Moser, St. Henry; Harry J. and Miss Kathryn Winkeljohn, Celina; Clarence and Miss Marie Winkeljohn and Mrs. Helen Eysenman, Dayton; Edward Winkeljohn, Celina, and Lieut. Walter Winkeljohn, with the army at Biloxi, Miss. There are 22 grandchildren.

Three brothers and two sisters are living. They are: August and J. Henry Winkeljohn, Celina; Clifford Winkeljohn, Detroit; Mrs. Mary Buddel, Seneca, Kansas, and Mrs. Anna Art, Celina.

A lifelong Catholic, Mr. Winkeljohn received the last sacrament of the church. He was a member of the Holy Name and Poor Souls societies at Celina, and was enrolled also in the Catholic Knights of Ohio.

Minster Gives U. S. Ownership Of Rails

Bill Of Sale To 150 Tons Of Steel In Main Street Is Turned Over

The first decisive step in a move to contribute 150 tons of steel to the war effort was taken by the Minster village council Tuesday evening, when a bill of sale for the huge tonnage of metal was given by the municipality to the Metals Reserve corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

An effort is being made, however, to keep the steel in Minster for use by local industrial plants contributing to the war effort. Mayor Edmund E. Morsey and members of the council told a federal government representative it is their wish the material be kept here. They were informed the rails could be left here only in the event they are classed as "scrap metal."

The rails, one mile of double track of the former Western Ohio Railway company, are included in north and south Main street.

It is probable a contract will be entered into with some salvage firm either by the village or the federal agency which has title to the rails, to lift the steel and put the streets back in shape.

DISTRICT MEETING OF KNIGHTS DATED

New district officers will be elected and other business of importance will be transacted. The twentieth district, which includes Minster, embraces also commanderies in villages of Borkins, Ft. Loraine and Maria Stein.

Johnson, Rockford; William Brown, Celina; Charles Schrage, St. Henry; Otto Vonderhaar, Ft. Recovery; Harley Thees, Coldwater; Richard Feltz, St. Henry R. R., Marion township.

"I didn't stop to eat dinner to-night," she said impulsively. "Just had a sandwich and a glass of milk on my way to the hospital. I think I'll make some coffee. Won't you have some with me?"

"Sure!" Larry said upright.

Activity in the kitchenette served to ease the tension for Jacqueline, although she could not help contrasting the situation with that other little dinner party. She had been happy that night, rather fearfully happy. And Larry seemed just as happy now as if nothing had happened to change their relationship.

He remained until nearly midnight, apologizing contritely for the lateness of his departure when he caught up his hat and made ready to go.

"Oh, by the way, Jack..." He said that at the door, as if it were something that very nearly had escaped his mind. "Is that sleazy friend of yours a rather young chap with a dazed look and a bald head?"

"That's Staples," she said.

"I thought so. I really must have a talk with him. I don't think so much of his technique. Good night. I'll be seeing you."

CHAPTER X

True to his suggestion, Larry arranged to take Vince to the country the following Monday morning. It was something of a shock to Jacqueline when she found her patient dressed and sitting in a chair when she called Sunday afternoon.

"It doesn't seem fair," Jacqueline attempted to say lightly. "I no more than find you, than you're running off again. I believe you're glad to go away and leave me."

"No, I'm not," Vince said thoughtfully. "It's been nice. You're a lot like your mother, Skipper."

"Am I?"

"Yes. I never noticed it before, somehow. That's why I'm anxious to get away now. I know I'm going to make good this time. And then I can start doing things for you—the things I should have done."

"Of course you're going to make good, Vince," she said presently. "And, best of all, you're going to get around and well. I quite envy you your chance of being in the country away from all the noise and dirt here."

"Larry said he'd bring you up to see me some time. You'll come, won't you?"

"I expect so."

The next morning, Jacqueline felt a peculiar sense of loss. It was difficult to think of Vince anywhere except in his little room at South Side Hospital. Instead, he was off on an excursion... he and Larry.

Larry must have decided to stay at the farm for a few days. It was not until Wednesday afternoon that he came into the office.

"Is Vince all right?" was her eager question, before Larry had time to seat himself.

"Fine. I hung around part of two days to get him settled. He and Mrs. Brown took to each other like old pals. She'll see that he has everything he needs. You needn't worry. Can you take a few letters?"

"I'm waiting."

The letters finished and read, Larry gravely paid his bill and made ready to leave.

"If you're not in a hurry, I'd like to ask you a question about Vince."

"Think it's safe?" he asked tentatively.

"I'm sorry. Please go."

"And I'm sorry! Shouldn't have said that. Vince is very anxious to see you... something important, he said. I told him I'd bring you up Sunday, if you could arrange it. May I send him word he can expect...?"

Jacqueline thought swiftly.

"I'll go," she promised.

For the rest of the week Jacqueline repeated her promise. But there seemed no very good way to avoid the trip now. After all, Vince had asked for her and it was him she was going to see. She would make that plain to Larry when they started. He was too much in the habit of taking things for granted.

But, as usual, her air of reserve was difficult to maintain when she found herself in the car relaxing to that exhilarating sense of flying through the air. Nor was it possible.

"Am I?"

"Yes. I never noticed it before, somehow. That's why I'm anxious to get away now. I know I'm going to make good this time. And then I can start doing things for you—the things I should have done."

"Of course you're going to make good, Vince," she said presently. "And, best of all, you're going to get around and well. I quite envy you your chance of being in the country away from all the noise and dirt here."

"Larry said he'd bring you up to see me some time. You'll come, won't you?"

"I expect so."

The next morning, Jacqueline felt

"I don't know exactly. He says he's working on something, and that he's sure my experience will come in handy. He's an engineer."

"So he told me."

Larry's prediction about the dinner, served early in the afternoon, was more than correct. Jacqueline quite gave herself up to the delights of home cooking. Stewed chicken in rich gravy, with vegetables fresh from the garden. An imposing array of jellies, pickles and preserves.

After the meal, she insisted that she be allowed to assist with the dishes. "Just to keep me from going into a coma," she explained. But her offers were smilingly refused. She had come all the way from the city to see her father. The two of them must "visit."

Accordingly, Jacqueline found herself reclining in a steamer chair under an oak tree, fighting off a delicious drowsiness as she listened to Vince's account of proposed work, riches, travel. He lay in a hammock close by, giving his dreams free range.

By fall, he and the Skipper should be ready to go places. This was to be one winter when there would be no snow or cold weather for either of them. It ought to be pretty decent down around the Mediterranean.

He always had an idea he'd like to see Africa, too. Had the Skipper ever read any of those ads about round-the-world trips?

"Lots of times," Vince chuckled suddenly. "What a fraud you are, Skipper! The blue eyes opened wide."

"What do you mean, Vince?"

"I'm telling you, I'm innocent. To your old dad about Mr. Cutter this and Mr. Cutter that."

"I don't know what you mean," Jacqueline sat up with a jerk and tossed away the cigarette.

"Sure you don't?" Vince chuckled delightedly. "Come now... why didn't you tell me what you two kids had been up to?"

The color slowly left Jacqueline's face as she stared at her father. "Will you please tell me just what you mean?" she asked in a low voice.

The quizzical smile on Vince's face vanished. He shifted uncomfortably in his hammock and stole an apprehensive glance in the direction of the house.

"I mean that Larry's head over heels in love with you. He told me so," Vince added defensively. "And did he tell you that I was in love with him?"

"We could have to. I got eyes. I couldn't imagine you, or any other girl in her right mind, turning down a chap like Larry."

Jacqueline marvelled at her own composure. She didn't at all like the way Vince said that. It was impossible not to feel that he knew more than he admitted. But she knew everything. But she must hide it until she knew for sure.

"You are wrong, Vince," she said quietly. "I'm not in love with Larry Cutter. For one thing, I haven't known him long enough. He's... nice."

"He's one in a thousand. Ten thousand!" Vince was enthusiastic. "You don't need to know him long to find that out."

"I don't feel that I know very much about him. Neither do you," she added. "Larry would have thought it in better taste if he had made any remarks on that subject to me."

"Perhaps he will on your way home tonight," Vince suggested with a grin.

"Indeed he will not!" she protested. "I should straighten out my small shoulders with a righteous air. But she collapsed rather completely, color coming back into her cheeks at the sight of Larry's smiling face as he leisurely, hands thrust in his pockets, puffing contentedly on his pipe.

"Here comes Larry," she said in a low, guarded voice. "Please be careful."

Vince nodded understandingly. It did not escape him, however, that Jacqueline had forgotten to say that Larry was coming.

"Mr. Cutter."

"Well, what do you think of all this?" Larry inquired smilingly. He seated himself cross-legged on the grass near his wife's feet.

"It's a very pretty place," she said. "I think so. I'm looking forward to coming up here and spending some time. Help your father keep out of mischief. You really should arrange to take your own vacation up here. That dinner was just a fair sample of what goes on here every day. Wasn't it, Vince?"

Anthony nodded silently. He was watching the younger pair with shrewd eyes. Jacqueline was unconsciously aware of what he was thinking.

"But I have to work," she ventured smilingly. "And I think we should be starting back to the city before so very long... before it gets dark."

"Whenever you say. The days are long now... but there will be no moon tonight. Unless it's very late."

After some desultory conversation, Jacqueline again mentioned the desirability of starting for the city. Larry rose to his feet at once and said he would get the car ready.

After bidding the group good-by, and with a lingering kiss pressed on Vince's cheek, Jacqueline allowed Larry to assist her into the roadster. She promised brightly that she would come back again some day if Mrs. Brown would promise to have that ice cream again.

With a lingering kiss pressed on Vince's cheek, Jacqueline allowed Larry to assist her into the roadster. She promised brightly that she would come back again some day if Mrs. Brown would promise to have that ice cream again.

The sun was sending its long level rays against the house as the car rolled from the yard.

Larry was not inclined to be talkative, for which Jacqueline was thankful. For the first time in their acquaintance she was decidedly ill at ease with him. It was impossible to forget what Vince had told her. Larry had raised a barrier between them. He broke one of their longest silences to remark:

"I think I'll be leaving the city pretty shortly to come up here. Don't know for how long."

"So you said."

"You certainly tell you that I don't care to have anybody know where I am. You know whom I mean, of course. I suppose I may trust you not to betray me..."

"You can trust me better than I can trust you!" It was out before Jacqueline knew it. She bit her lip. "Meaning exactly..."

"That you are not very particular about keeping your word."

"Just what has friend Vince been saying?"

"You might ask him yourself."

Larry drove in silence for a few moments. When they reached the summit of a high hill, he brought the car to a stop at the side of the road.

"Please drive on."

"In a minute. I think you and I have something to say to each other, and we're likely to be disturbed here. I can't talk and drive at the same time. And I can't quite escape a feeling that you believe I've not been keeping to our bargain."

"Do you think you have?"

"Oh, yes. Quite. After all, there was nothing on my mind when I was saying that. I was only saying it to keep you. I do love you, Jack. And when your father got to telling me how wonderful you are, I had to chime in. I know it even better than he does."

"I thought you would be fair," Jacqueline countered in a low voice. "I have tried to be. Larry retained steadily. 'I did tell Rennie about our marriage. I had to. I have explained that he's my attorney. I have told no one else.'"

"Of course not. I told him that I loved you. Why not? I do. I can think of several reasons."

"I know," he smiled. "Look here, little Jack. I'm not sure that you are the one to tell me that I have not lived up to the letter of our official agreement."

"What do you mean by that?"

"There was a clause in it... number four, if my memory serves me. You didn't like it and I appreciated how you felt. But you did sign the agreement as it stood. What have you to say about that?"

"I gave the money back to you," Jacqueline retorted. "Nearly all of it. I mean. And you shall have the balance just as soon as I can save it!"

"Yes, and I took it back without a word. I didn't remind you that you had sidestepped the contract. Nevertheless, I consider you morally culpable."

Jacqueline swallowed a sob and blinked rapidly to keep back the tears. Never had she felt so thoroughly humiliated, so...

"Jack!" Larry's voice had changed suddenly. There was a note of tenderness in it she never had heard. "We're not going to quarrel, dear. Look at me."

She kept her face turned obstinately from him. So very still it was about then that Jacqueline found herself hearing that Larry would hear her heart pounding.

"If you think I've broken my promise," he went on gently, "I suppose there is no great wrong in doing it again. I'm not sure when you'll see you again... or how."

Larry was speaking in quick, hurried sentences.

"There's no way in which I may tell you how utterly I've loved you from that first day. It's been almost unbearable. To be near you, to see you... so many more times than you've allowed me. And all the times my arms have been stretched to hold you. No one could love you as I do. They never have. They never will."

"Larry! Please..."

"No! You must understand that it's always going to be that way. No matter what happens, it will be that way. You are the only woman who ever has come into my heart. It belongs to you. So do I. I'll wait forever... if I have to. But there never will be anyone else. Please believe that. Please..."

Neither of them could have told how it happened.

Jacqueline was in her husband's arms, pressed close against him. His cheek rested against her hair. She felt his heart beating... heard his broken whispers.

"Jack... my own little Jack... I love you so."

She struggled to release herself, pushing at him frantically with her small hands.

"No, no..." she choked brokenly. "You do love me, Jack... just a very little. Tell me you do!"

"Oh, I... No! Let me go..."

Please let me go!"

"I'm sorry if I have hurt or offended you, dear. But you do love me. I know it and so do you. You needn't be afraid. I won't forget again."

The ride to the city was made in silence. When they reached the city, Larry found that she had not said a word. "May I see you and tell you good-by before I leave?"

"I... I don't think so," Jacqueline was fumbling blindly with the car door. She had it open now.

"Sorry. Good night, Jack." The car was moving as he reached out and closed the door with a ruthless bang.

"Larry..."

But Larry was gone.

CHAPTER XI

Larrymore Cutter left an elevator at the mezzanine floor of the Raynear and stood for an instant looking about him.

Almost at once, his eyes encountered a woman sitting by herself on a small settee, one arm resting on the marble balcony rail, apparently studying the busy lobby below. She was modestly attired in black. A small hat of the same shade was perched jauntily on her decidedly blonde head. Rather noticeably made up, he decided. But attractive.

He approached her slowly.

"Miss Morris?"

She turned with a start, her red lips parting in a friendly smile. "It's Mr. Cutter, isn't it?"

"Yes." He took a seat at her side without waiting for an invitation.

Larry frowned a trifle, as he remarked: "I'm sorry you didn't arrange to meet me somewhere else, Miss Morris. Didn't they tell you about that?"

"No. I thought this would be all right today." She glanced about her curiously. "I wonder if it would be better for you to call me Alma."

"Very well. And, since you are here, we may as well talk. First of all, have you had any luck?"

"Not a bit, I'm sorry to say. I haven't overlooked any bets so far."

"Have you had a chance to go through things pretty thoroughly?"

"Rather. I thought I was on the scent the other day. It was a wall safe. Looked promising. It's an old-timer and I didn't have much trouble getting into it."

"Papers?"

"Sure. But nothing very hot."

"Then tell me out in Chicago that you could deliver the goods if anyone could. That's why I've been marking time, hoping you could."

"I've been afraid that you would draw a blank. I've been waiting some plans of my own. I think I'll sit in the game. Maybe two hands will be better than one."

"You don't care how you spend your money, do you?"

"Not the least. Larry's much tighter in a grim line. I've waited a long time for this chance. I expect to recoup before I'm through."

He lowered his voice a trifle. "I'm being followed here. Got a tip not long ago... Checked up on it."

"Local cops?"

"Yes. That's why I want a woman to have you meet me. You can guess who started that."

"I'd be dumb if I couldn't figure that one."

"They haven't showed their hand yet and I'm going to beat them. I'm leaving here tomorrow. I see that it's well advertised. It's a few weeks."

"I'm the newest one."

"You certainly had a lucky break when you landed that job as secretary," Larry told Miss Morris.

"I merely suggested that he need a secretary," she explained. "The idea was a new one to me, but... Well, I'm good in my own line."

Larry laughed in spite of himself. "Then his face grew grave."

DON'T BE FOOLED
BY A FULL JUNK YARD!

Don't listen to people who say—"They can't need scrap very badly. Look at that junk yard, or the auto graveyards—they've got plenty of scrap. And remember the last time we had a drive the stuff sat around for weeks." Tell such people these true facts . . .

Of course the junk yards are full. They are "factories" that turn out finished scrap—sorted, broken up, and bundled . . . ready for the mills of America. The scrap has to go through these yards, and it keeps going through fast!

The auto graveyards too, are busy. They specialize in used car parts, but produce plenty of scrap as well. In June alone, these yards moved 450,000 tons—for they are required to junk within 60 days as many cars as they buy.

As for Salvage Depots—communities all over the country are staging drives. All this scrap can't be taken away at once. The junkies can't handle it and the mills can't store it. But every pound is needed and will be used. We've got to pile it up ready for instant use at any time.

TENANTS LAND OWNERS - INVESTORS 4 GOOD AUGLAIZE COUNTY FARMS

FOR SALE

COPELAND 86.25 acres—Located Northeast of Wapakoneta in Duchouquet Township. Improvements consist of a house, barn, poultry house, implement shed, and brooder house. This farm is only about 9 miles from Lima.

GARMAN 80.61 acres—Located west of New Bremen in German Township. This farm has a good 8 room brick house, barn 42x60, crib, tool shed and poultry house. Good drilled well and fences.

RAY 150.93 acres—Located Southwest of Kossuth in Salem Township. Buildings consist of house, barn, crib, machine shed and poultry house in good condition. This is a farm with a good lean soil that is capable of extra high corn production.

WINGET 130 acres—Located North of Wapakoneta in Duchouquet Township. Well located with house, barn, crib, garage, machine shed and poultry house. 96 acres in cultivation, 12 acres in timber, and 22 acres in pasture. Good livestock farm.

For the tenant farmer who needs financing we have just what is needed to guarantee success of his farm purchase venture. For those who can qualify we can also include our Bonded Feature to protect purchaser's family and investment. The same applies to present owners needing more land, or to anyone anxious to assist a son or some other relative to make a start in the farming business.

On the basis of what these farms can be purchased for today they represent good buys for INVESTORS and will provide INVESTORS an opportunity to have a hand in the vitally important angle of food production.

The number of farms for sale in this area is steadily decreasing and when they are off the market the chances to buy under present day prices and attractive terms will probably be gone forever. Therefore, if you are giving some thought to purchasing a farm now or some time in the future, it will be a mistake not to check up on what we have to offer on our 4 remaining farms in Auglaize County.

SURVEY OF WATER SUPPLY STARTED

One hundred and fifty Auglaize county farmers are being enrolled to measure their wells. The purpose of this activity, according to Clarence D. Brown, county agricultural agent, is to determine if and how much the water table in the county is fluctuating.

Alarmed by the rapid rate of fall of the table in the state, the Ohio Water Supply Board has asked county agricultural agents in Ohio to determine the water supply situation locally. Brown is enlisting from 10 to 15 observers in each township, who will make weekly reports.

The problem is complicated in Auglaize by the large percentage of wells having pumps bolted to the top of well casings. The problem is largely one of finding wells open enough for a tape line to be dropped down to the water surface.

Farmers in the county have been increasingly concerned with their water supply and some wells are now beginning to fail. Any rural or village dweller interested in becoming a well observer is asked to contact the county agent's office.

ELEVATORS TO BUY ENTIRE BEAN CROP

Grain dealers and elevator men of Auglaize county met in the office of the AAA at Wapakoneta Monday evening. Trucking and purchase of the largest crop of soy beans ever to be grown in the county was the evening's discussion.

All beans purchased will eventually find their way to the Commodity Credit Corporation which has, through the WPB, been given the job of buying beans and distributing of the processed products. All green or yellow beans will be bought on the basis of $1.60 for No. 2 or better beans. Beans in excess of 14 percent moisture will be subject to a discount as will those weighing less than 54 pounds to the bushel. Damaged splits or foreign material also are subject to discount if amounts are excessive. Most elevators will handle Commodity Credit beans.

LAND-BASED AVIATION NEEDED TO WIN THE WAR, SAYS DE SEVERSKY

HOW are we going to win the war? While there is no question in our minds that we are going to win there is tremendous difference of opinion among the military and naval leaders of how it is to be won.

Probably no authority in recent months has created such a furor as has Major Alexander P. de Seversky in his best-seller, "Victory Through Air Power."

In the September issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, Major de Seversky again presents his views and charges flatly that "Land-Based Aviation Will Win the War."

Pointing out that Congress has just approved the building of new aircraft carriers, Major de Seversky says, "The aircraft carrier happens to be the most vulnerable vessel afloat. It is doomed as soon as it ventures within the striking radius of land-based aviation."

Continuing the famous aviator says, "In this war bitter experience has taught us the importance of dispersing airplanes and facilities. We no longer handle planes and repair shops and supplies in one spot for the convenience of enemy sky raiders. Instead, we scatter them over a large area. But the carrier does this principle of dispersal. On the contrary, it packs a maximum of aircraft and other equipment in a minimum of space. As a result, it is the answer to a bombardier's dream of a concentrated target."

"If my doubt of the utility of carriers in offensive operations remained, it should have been wiped out by the events of Coral Sea and Midway. Those engagements were played up as 'sea battles' in the official communications, but they were nothing of the sort. The naval forces never even came into contact. Those were sea battles only in the sense that aviation fought over the sea and that we may judge from the kind of 'practically all the aircraft carriers mixed up in the operations were sunk or crippled. We lost the Lexington and the Japs lost at least four, perhaps five, of their carriers. The tragic helplessness of this sort of vessel—exposed to assault horizontally, above and below—was exhibited as if in a laboratory experiment."

"The fact is that the epoch of naval offensives is ended. War has resolved into a struggle for mastery of the skies. Air power has taken the lead. Surface forces are either reduced to auxiliaries or entirely immobilized until the issue of who controls the air is decided. Under the new fact to heart, we shall blunder from disaster to disaster. We must recognize that there has been a revolution in war-making due to the advent of the air-power. None of our traditional strategy applies, because it was a two-dimensional strategy, whereas air power has yanked warfare into the third dimension."

"We can and we will win this war—provided we face the fact that this is primarily an aerial war and proceed to develop the strategy and the aircraft to win it. In the final analysis, that means long-range, hard-hitting aviation based on land. It means air power capable of carrying an offensive across water directly to the source of the enemy's power—to his home land."

"By reversing the process, by using powerful land-based aviation, we can conceivably turn back recent Pacific history and retrieve the lost territories, island by island. That we may judge from the kind of preparations now under way, is what United Nations strategy proposes to do."

"The logic of these elementary truths must be hammered home until our nation realizes that our war effort must be revised, our aviation as its decisive element. Only then will we begin to channel the main part of our national wealth and skills, labor power and materials, to the creation of an irresistible force of land-based air power."

"The waste involved in a construction program on irrelevant types of weapons would not be serious if we could afford it. But we cannot. We are reaching the point of industrial saturation when we no longer can indulge in the extravagance of building anything and everything that comes to mind. We must concentrate on the weapons essential for direct offense. That means, in the first place, long-range, land-based aviation."

CROPS NEEDED FOR 1943 ARE LISTED

The U. S. Department of Agriculture this week urged wheat growers who are planning their production for 1943 to divert as much wheat acreage as they can to crops more needed in the war program, and designated the following crops as being especially important:

Flaxseed, dry beans, dry peas, clover crop seed, sugar beets, sea island cotton, hemp, peanuts for oil, soybeans for beans, castor beans, and certain feed grain crops (except corn in the commercial corn counties) to be designated in areas where such feed crops will produce as much or more feed than wheat.

The department said farmers may select any of these crops which can be grown satisfactorily and substitute such crops acre for acre for wheat in earning 1943 AAA payments. The 1943 AAA program as now shaping up, it was pointed out, will require farmers to seed at least 90 percent of their wheat acreage allotment either to wheat or the designated "war crops" or feed grain crops in order to be in full compliance. Purpose of this requirement is to secure full war production from all available cropland.

State AAA offices are being asked to designate immediately the feed crops which should be encouraged in place of wheat in their states. Price support programs will be developed wherever necessary to support prices of war crops; and of feed grains through support prices on livestock and livestock products. The list of approved crops will help wheat farmers in making plans to increase their 1943 commodities, the department said. This year's bumper wheat crop, plus carryover, has resulted in a two-year supply.
