THE COPPOLA FAMILY TREE

➔ The core family has eight Oscars and 24 nominations, while its extended members encompass even more awards and an extraordinary influence in the arts

HOW MANY FOLKS CAN SAY THAT THEIR GRANDFATHER, FATHER, sister, cousin and uncle have won Oscars and their aunt and cousin have been nominated? Roman Coppola can, and now he's nominated for his own Academy Award for best original screenplay (with Wes Anderson) for Moonrise Kingdom. This latest in a long line of Coppola kudos (they and the Hustons are the only families with Oscars over three generations) prompted THR to follow a lineage that has its roots in Italy, runs through New York, Napa and Hollywood and has wound its way through film, fashion, music, radio and academia. "With our family, I always say it's not six degrees of separation, it's like three," says cinematographer John Schwartzman, an Oscar nominee for Seabiscuit. "We could form a studio. We certainly have enough people." — MIKE BARNES

3 MORE FABLED OSCAR FAMILIES

These clans deserve to take a bow at Academy Awards time, too

Walter, John and Anjelica

The Hustons

John won screenplay and directing Oscars for The Treasure of the Sierra Madre (1948) as dad Walter earned the supporting actor prize. John worked the family mojo again by guiding daughter Anjelica to an Oscar in Prizzi's Honor (1985).

Lionel, Ethel and John

The Barrymores

Stage legend Ethel got her Oscar for None But the Lonely Heart (1944) among four noms from 1944 to 1949. Brother John (Drew's grandfather) starred in the silents, and other brother Lionel was mean Mr. Potter in It's a Wonderful Life.

Alfred, Randy and Thomas

The Newmans

They're the Coppolas of film music. Thomas (Skyfall) is up for his first Oscar on his 11th career nom. His father, Alfred, earned nine trophies and 45 noms (and composed the Fox logo theme), and cousin Randy has two Oscars and 20 noms.
