

8 Great Booths To Check Out at NADA Art Fair

Christie Chu, Friday, May 15, 2015

Art world denizens descended on Basketball City Thursday for the preview of the 2015 edition of NADA art fair, one of most beloved fairs by collectors on the hunt for new art and emerging talent. Though a line trailed outside the entrance to the venue, thankfully it was nothing compared to the one that formed at Select Art fair the previous night (see So-Called VIPs Wait In Massive Line Outside Select Fair Preview). In the first hours of the fair, which has a dazzling space situated on the East River, many eager buyers perused the aisles of the hip galleries that exhibit at NADA snatching up desired works. When you head to the fair, here are our suggestions for eight booths you shouldn't miss.

7. Signal

Artist and carpenter Dan Herschlein made a living room within the small project space of this gallery. The wooden installation was created from past sets of old projects. Housed within the tight area, one had to squeeze between a fake door, a video piece, and a headless seated human figure wearing cargo pants and socks. With the fair hosting the usual suspects of abstract paintings, photographs, and sculptures, it was refreshing to see this project space fully taken advantage of.

Dan Herschlein at Signal.
Photo: artnet News.