

Arrowsight Awarded Patent for Remote Video Auditing System and Reporting Method

Mt. Kisco, NY (January 26, 2011) -- Arrowsight, Inc., the developer of remote video auditing technology and services for food processing, quick service restaurants, and health care, and the licensor of this technology to many other industries, announces the second patent in the Company's portfolio.

As described in the US Patent's Summary of the Invention section: "the present invention provides a software-based method and system that allows generation, execution, modification of audits and guard tours, and creation of audit and guard tour reports and provides access to the images to develop and support the conclusions contained in the reports."

The new patent secures Arrowsight's position as the leading supplier of third- party remote video auditing technology and services for corporate compliance, employee safety and performance management.

CEO Adam Aronson said: "The services surrounding this patent are critical to helping our clients improve safety, security and performance 24 hours a day, every day. Using our tools, businesses can identify workers and processes that are on track as well as those that are not - in real time - and execute where oversight and training will have the greatest impact."

Arrowsight provides companies with the tools they need to have a precise view on critical aspects of their operations and to help them improve performance rapidly and keep it strong. Building on 12 years of research, development, and implementation, Arrowsight deploys video, motion detection and reporting to provide game-changing results for businesses.

Based in Mount Kisco, New York, with network operation centers in Huntsville, Alabama and India, Arrowsight helps businesses follow protocols and meet productivity targets. By measuring the performance of workers and providing them with feedback while they work, Arrowsight helps improve operations dramatically in a matter of weeks.
