

Blending the old and new creates a different kind of art like fruit in a blender. Rauschenberg, Warhol, Basquiat, and others would have embraced digital painting, Al whatever walked down the path, floated down the river or wondered in space. These great artists have influenced me not only in finding new techniques, they have shown me that it takes courage to be an artist and to be a different kind of artist and to be a great artist time only tells.

I studied fine art, photography and graphic design at Plymouth University in NH and earned a B.S. from the University of Vermont. Growing up in Vermont and living in New Hampshire I taught skiing, snowboarding and swimming. Did lots of hiking, biking, swimming and enjoyed the beauty of the mountains.

Creativity for me comes through exploration. I had a darkroom to develop photos before digital, drew, and painted on whatever item I felt I wanted to explore. My paintings are a result of my experiences like digging for old bottles, searching for finds in thrift stores, or exploring the world, the unexpected is the most exciting. Life is truly like a box of chocolates. This is how I approach my art. Perhaps it's because I am a leftie, left handed that is!

For the last 18 years my husband and I have split our time between Florida, Montana New Hampshire and Vermont.

I have always been interested in other cultures. I lived in many different places studying in Norway, lived in Germany, St. John and Grand Cayman in the Caribbean, traveled the world working on Cruise Ships. These journeys helped me to understand the generosity of people and the beauty of different cultures. It has given me a deeper understanding of what it is to be human. Through these experiences my love of Popular Culture-Pop Art developed. It is the visual language I use and invite you along for the journey to add your own story...

I am an award winning artist and am represented in Galleries throughout the US and have collectors worldwide. I have had numerous one women shows and group shows in the last 35 years plus and continue to exhibit. Thank you for taking your time to read this and view my art.

Cheers,
