The man who has for some time conducted himself extremely well, was generated into a quarrelsome temper, and access to his triumphing the work by crime of drunkenness. He was removed to the least cell of victory, and the commission must be that of his misadventure situation, and raise it was the devil, who has received him, and confuses him to not bloody acts of disobedience — he said he could not receive, unless they under perform

He was told them, at length, to say their hands on his head, and bless him — God sanctified them from and from the with this incident, so much so, that he should be his master, and become a carter attendant on his work, and otherwise attend accordingly.

 why, if the one not struck dead with astonishment at the severity of the saying, of our other line has he would be able to live, if he would embrace Christianity? I shamed you, said the people for the sake that you a man should ask such a low boyish question. When the father of a healthy child dies, upon whom it was dependent for support, it would be foolish in ~~any~~ ^{not} a ~~parent~~ ^{parent} making such an inquiry. Or if you were a mother and child, treated by the people and I observed any integrity in you, I would say, come, and I will uphold you by the help of God. You must work and pray and learn to put yr trust in God. This you should do as a man, should know. You must also be prepared to suffer, for that eternal felicity in our religion costs out, is worthy of some self denial, even if it costs to the life of life. The ignorant man foolishly thought that if he would alone an idolatry, his father's friends would stand and vote for him, and defend him of the means of religiosity, but his motives were selfish and mean and a man hypocrisy itself, ^{self} ^{interest} ^{feelings}, would make me a poor Christian

 Like the ~~ignorance~~ ^{ignorance} error of their religion, and of total insufficiency to salvation; was representative to them, they would sometimes make such answer as these. It is true that our religion is bad, but it is God's will, that we not are of a different nation; should have had a religion. We cannot deny that you say a gain in our religion, but what of it to be done. Yet we have no means it. Oh, he created primitive and unfruitful trees, so he has given to some a

 We forgive them were once exactly what you are now. But when first but then his commands, they obeyed them, and they were enlightened and become Christian.
 After he had exposed their mistakes in their religion, they were brought within obedience to his law, and entered that first and not with that they should possess this knowledge - they would say, that ^{is} an evidence that God hated them, Ayien the Europeans were wiser than they. - Christianity had its days of Patalism, and the Moratan has not yet quite been driven away; and methinks that his gowned partisans had better dwell among the Malabarians, "their brethren in the faith," than ~~that~~ the British mix with their broodish [broodish].

One Samuel ~~enters~~ thought himself smart for a moment because he would summon Gen. like by an eye man taken as homines. "Now here said, says he, that you made ~~all~~ things, it follows of course that that he is the author of evil, because evil is connected with every thing, what say you to that. Mr Gen. Missionary! - Answer me one question replied G. Do you believe that God is holy or not? - the fellow considered a long time in apparent reflection what to say, and at length unwillingly answered yes - then, says G. you reason against yourself - of God is holy how could he have created evil - you ought then to consider the origin of evil, and not impute it to God, - you Premises are true, but the conclusion ~~is~~ preeminently false." the ignorant man saw his error, and no doubt ~~felt~~ felt ~~the~~ written under the keen lash of his antagonist - it is in vain that we try to reason ourselves into religion - it will not, condescend to be reason with - it is not a thing of syllogism and ~~into~~ analysis, ~~we~~ reason cannot reach the sublimity of fit mysteries, and he who will not believe, what he cannot comprehend, must die ~~an~~ unfidel - he knows several whose hail bark has split upon this rock, and they are now tapers to and for on the wide ocean of scepticism, ready to sink for ever at each reception undulation.

The Tombs of the pleasant the practices of these prophets is extenuation of their guilt, and so imperatorially devoted are they to them, that some have declared that they would follow their ancestors to hell, and if the missionaries ever expected to convert them, they must first root out this deep prejudice, and that they could never do." It is ~~not~~ not that natural in man to respect the memory of the venerable dead, and there is a class of men, who plead antiquity, for the continuance of certain ~~as~~ as customs, but no remarkable man will ever ~~say~~ say ~~not~~ not ~~think~~ think that age sanctions error the he may with difficulty respect an opinion which he has long entertained - these remarks are applicable to the church - custom ~~is~~ is ~~now~~ now in vogue, which modern wisdom and expedience have discovered to be perfectly useless, but and they ought to be abolished - surely our hints ancestors never thought that their adoption of them set the seal of eternity upon their practices.

When the happiness of the departed spirit of the Lord, my dear, and the misery of the finally impenitent was spoken of, a Pandarum, who was a piece of a philanthropist, replied in the following speech. "The soul or the life of man ^{God} he can ~~not~~ not ~~take~~ take than the name) can, to be sure, exist without the body, but the body without the life can be sensible neither of good or bad, he neither can the soul without the body feel good or bad. This was his proposition - he perceived that soul and body, if it is true, are different things, which when connected make up a man, who ~~is~~ is a sentient being, but when the soul leaves the body, then both are insensient neither can feel good or bad." He was asked "whether he believed that what the soul would always remain in that situation?" "How do we know that," says he, "God only knows." "But can we not know when he tells us? He has told us in his word, what will become of our souls after death. Now happy are we, that he has ~~given~~ given us so much light in this subject."
