FACULTY

Lisa Archibald, PhD, worked as a clinical speech-language pathologist for more than 15 years, providing services to adults and children in schools, hospitals, and other facilities. Currently an associate professor in the School of Communication Sciences and Disorders at the University of Western Ontario, Canada, Archibald studies links between memory and language processes in individuals with communication disorders. In particular, she is interested in working memory and language learning deficits in children. Recently, she has focused on SLP–educator school-based collaborations and has been part of an international team of researchers and stakeholders considering terminology and profile for children with unexplained, persistent language disorder.

Financial Disclosures

- Salary from University of Western Ontario
- Grant funding from Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council of Canada
- Speaking fees from various organizations
- Financial compensation from ASHA for this presentation

Nonfinancial Disclosures

- No nonfinancial relationships relevant to the content of this presentation