Meeting Complex Communication Needs Associated With Genetic Syndromes: A Call to Interprofessional Education and Practice
Billy T. Ogletree
Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders, Western Carolina University
Cullowhee, North Carolina

Disclosures: Financial: Billy T. Ogletree has no financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Billy T. Ogletree has no nonfinancial interests to disclose.

AAC Supports for Individuals With Rett Syndrome Across the Lifespan
Sandra M. Grether
Cincinnati Children’s Hospital Medical Center, Division of Developmental and Behavioral Pediatrics
Communication Sciences and Disorders, University of Cincinnati
Cincinnati, OH

Disclosures: Financial: Sandra M. Grether has no financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Sandra M. Grether has no nonfinancial interests to disclose.

Communication Programming for Learners With CHARGE Syndrome: Augmenting Comprehension and Expression
Susan M. Bashinski
Department of Education, Missouri Western State University
St. Joseph, MO

Disclosures: Financial: Susan M. Bashinski has no financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Susan M. Bashinski has included individual discrete points from this manuscript in public conference presentations.

Communication Programming Implications for Individuals With Genetic Causes of Severe Disability and Visual Impairment
Susan M. Bruce
Chris Brum
Allison Nannemann
Boston College
Chestnut Hill, MA

Disclosures: Financial: Susan M. Bruce, Chris Brum, and Allison Nannemann have no financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Susan M. Bruce, Chris Brum, and Allison Nannemann have no nonfinancial interests to disclose.

AAC Considerations for Individuals With Angelman Syndrome
Stephen N. Calculator
Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders, University of New Hampshire
Durham, NH

Disclosures: Financial: Stephen N. Calculator has no financial interests to disclose.
Nonfinancial: Research findings reported in this manuscript have been shared with audiences at annual conventions of ASHA as well as the biennial conferences of the Angelman Syndrome Foundation and International Society for Augmentative and Alternative Communication.

Interprofessional Practice in Developing an AAC System for Children With Down Syndrome
Krista Wilkinson
Ji Young Na
Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders, The Pennsylvania State University
Disclosures: Financial: Krista Wilkinson and Ji Young Na have no financial interests to disclose.

Nonfinancial: The data on perimeter arrangement has been presented orally at a variety of conferences but not otherwise published.