

GUEST SPEAKER BIO:

Dr. J. Julian Smith is currently President and Co-Founder of CZO Agronomics, a global consulting group devoted to technical advisory and end-to-end project management services in agribusiness and horticulture. Before founding CZO Agronomics, Dr. Smith was the Director of Discovery & Innovation for Brandt Consolidated, Inc. in Springfield, Illinois leading the company's plant health research and new product development team.

Dr. Smith is a widely published agricultural professional in the fields of agronomy, environmental issues and precision agriculture. His career has been primarily concerned with plant nutrition and specialty products, as well as their positioning within the agricultural marketplaces of North America and Europe. The latter half of Dr. Smith's career has focused on micro-nutrient, bio-stimulant, biological and plant growth regulator product application for all crops.

Grower Panel: "300 Bushel Corn Club"

Three-hundred bushel corn is not an easy feat to accomplish in the corn belt let alone in New York. It takes a lot of knowledge of your land, good agronomics, some experimentation, good soils and the right weather from Mother Nature. In New York, there are three farms that can consistently hit that 300 goal and are multiple winners of the NYS corn contest and have all placed in the National Corn Contest.

- ⇒ Henry Everman, Henry Everman Farms, Dansville, (Livingston County)
- ⇒ Matt Kludt, Kludt Brothers Farm, Kendall, (Orleans County)
- ⇒ Jay Swede, Gary Swede Farms LLC, Pavilion, (Wyoming County)

Come listen to the members of the "300 Bushel Corn Club" and learn how they do it and what they feel are the most important steps in preparing a field to eclipse 300 bushels.
