What is Cornell Cooperative Extension?

The Cornell Cooperative Extension System provides individuals, families, businesses, and communities in every corner of New York State direct access to research-generated knowledge and leadership techniques. Cornell Cooperative Extension is an educational, self-help program made possible through a four-way partnership of county and state governments, Cornell University, and the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

To remain a vital stimulus for progress in New York, Cornell Cooperative Extension's professional staff, faculty, and several thousand volunteers have identified issues critical to New York State residents. They have formulated programs addressing those issues to ensure that Cornell Cooperative Extension's philosophy and purpose are continued. All employees, whether employed by Cornell or by county associations, are critical in carrying out these efforts.

Cornell Cooperative Extension's philosophy and purpose are:

- To provide nonformal education and reliable information to people in their communities.
- To develop the leadership capabilities of people.
- To translate the findings of scientific research of the USDA, Cornell University, and other land-grant institutions for practical use.
- To assist in applying research results to the problems and concerns of individuals, families, businesses, and communities.
