Psyonik Records, the imprint of Godtripper, is a conduit for electronic music that warps perception and distorts reality. Exploring altered states of consciousness and the unexplained, it channels raw sound into controlled chaos while focusing on psychedelic hardcore techno, rave, psytrance, glitch, and ambient. Psyonik operates as both an experiment and a transmission—unraveling the boundaries between mind, machine, and the unknown.

For its debut release, Godtripper unveils EP1: Exist—at once a sonic birth of self and a relic of time. The opening title track confronts the greatest mystery of all: “Why are we here? Why do we exist?”. A dark blend of industrial techno and acid-laced compulsions guide dancers through a veil of uncertainty into self-discovery. Exist includes a dub version, Hypnogogia, where one might find the answers within—and possibly during the moments before sleep.

Meltphase, dives into hard techno with stabbing synth lines and distorted vocals carrying the aesthetic lore of Godtripper while warping perception and melting linear time. Alien Intelligence enters unknown techno territory, opened by a cyberdelic voice that activates the sigil. A liquid synth morphs into an audible orb, guiding the observer with rhythm through mechanical realms.

Together, these tracks mark only the beginning of Godtripper’s evolving mythos—with a consecutive release schedule on Psyonik Records soon to follow.
